

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

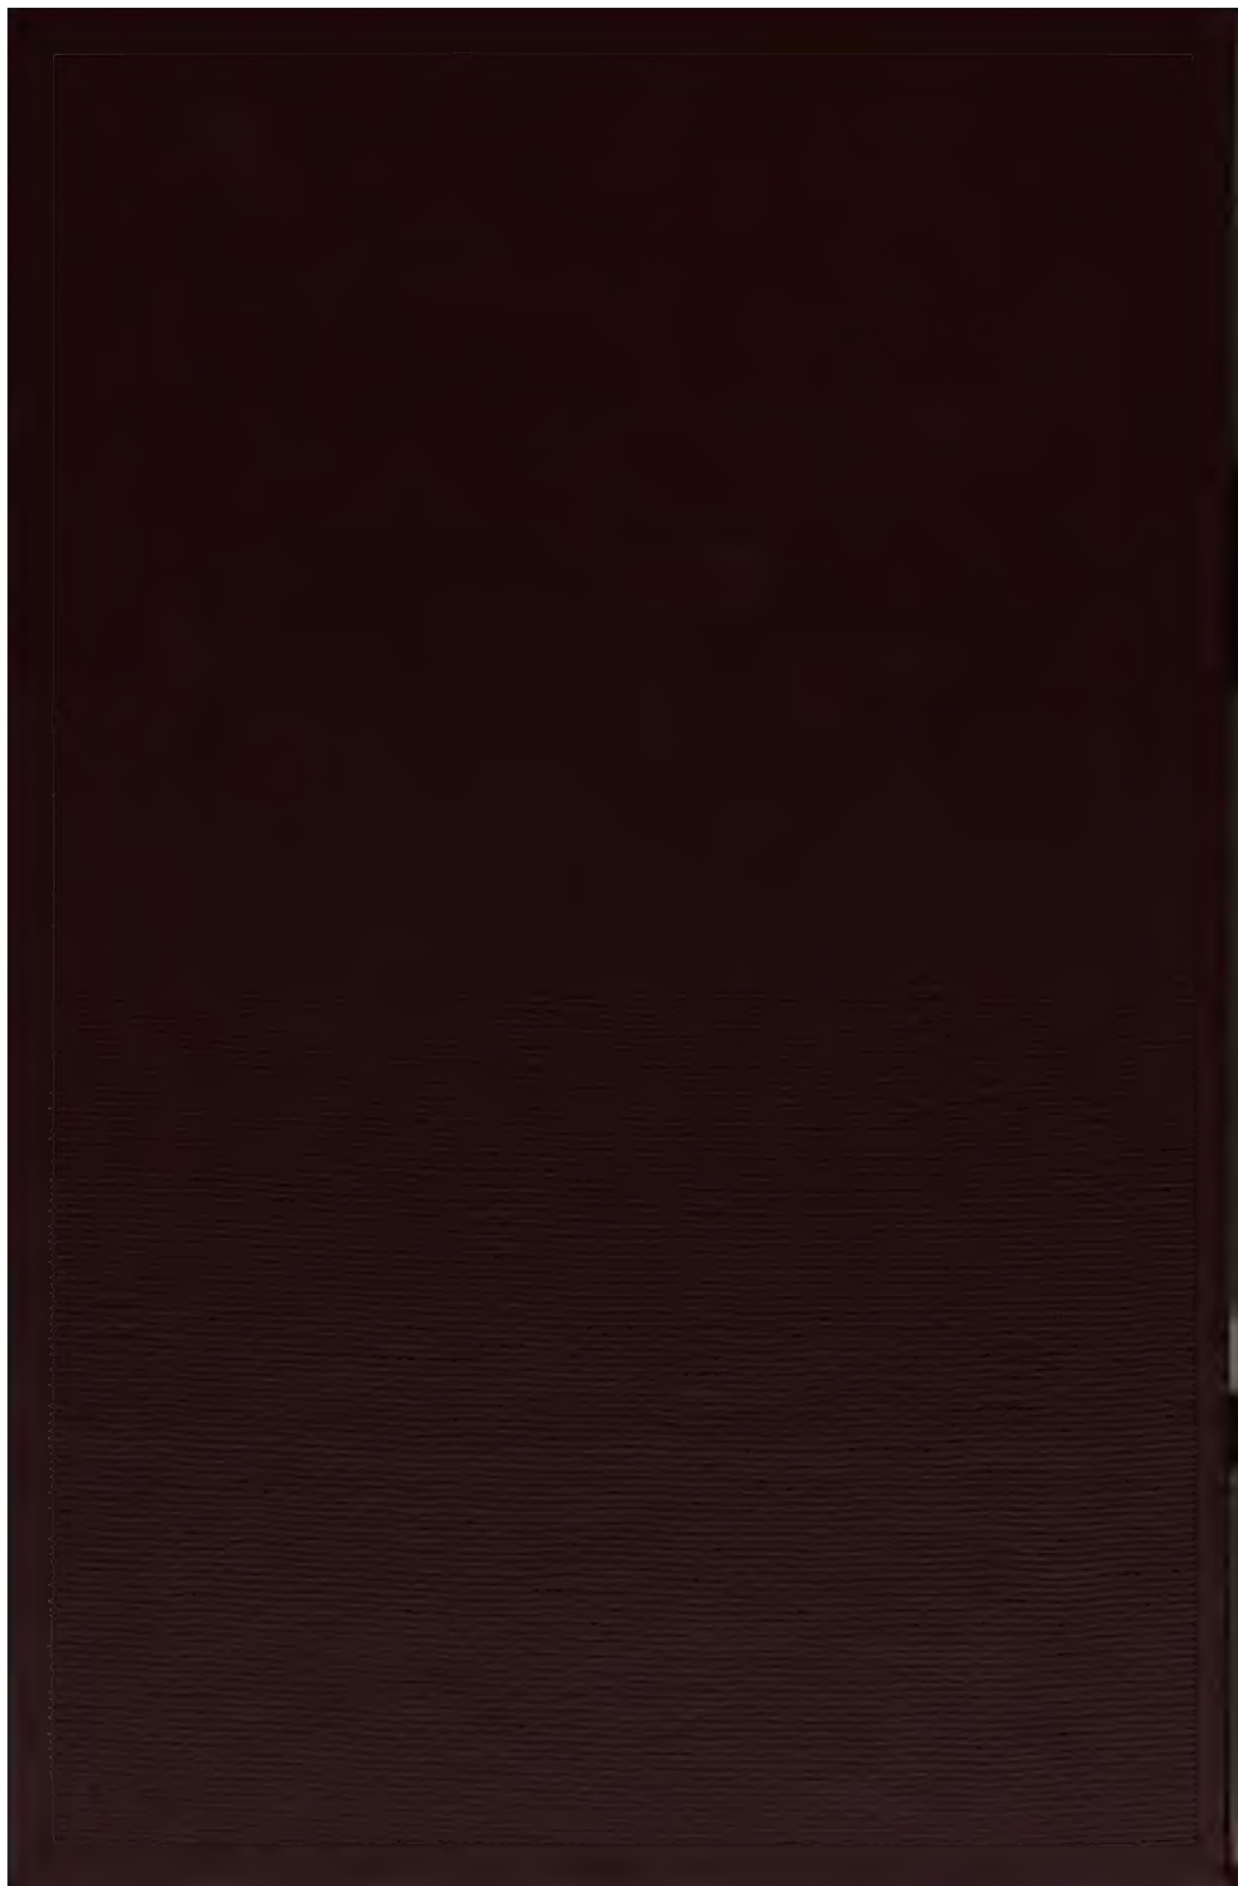

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

To the descendants of Richard Hubbell the First:—

BEING fully aware of the great responsibility resting with the author and compiler of a book containing so much important private information as this history of our family, I trust all my readers will recognize the fact that it is a carefully prepared work, collated from records duly authenticated in the hands of descendants of our emigrant ancestor, supplemented by church, court, county, state, and congressional documents, and that all works to which reference has been made, or from which I have obtained extracts, are to be found in the historical societies and public libraries of the United States and British Provinces.

I take pleasure in stating that the information obtained from my grandfather, Truman Mallory Hubbell, concerning our ancestors, was substantially correct, and that it has been corroborated by facts obtained from a majority of the descendants of Richard Hubbell the First.

For me to assert that the early members of the Hubbell Family were lineal descendants of Hubba, the Dane, would be supposititious, but I do say, and without fear of contradiction, that the surname Hubbell is of Danish origin. (Rev. William Arthur, M.A. [Father of Chester A. Arthur, Twenty-first President of the United States], gives the origin of the surname Hubbell from Hubba the Dane, and the word Hill in his "Etymological Dictionary of Family Names.") The proper pronunciation of Hubbell is Hubb 'ill, and it is so pronounced at the present day (1881), in Fairfield County, Connecticut, by the descendants of the colonial settlers.

Many of my readers will wish to know where Hubba's Hill is situated, but I can only state that I believe near Milford-Haven, in Pembrokeshire, Wales, because Grose, in his "Antiquities of England and Wales," says (Volume VII, New Edition, page 110), in speaking of an ancient ruin called Hubberstone (or Hubbastone) Priory, that :

"The ruin stands in Pembrokeshire not far from Milford-Haven, and is called by the inhabitants the Priory ; but whether for monks or nuns, or what order, and when and by whom founded, are particulars not handed down by tradition, or at least not known by the generality of the neighboring people. Neither Dugdale or Tanner mention this priory.

The building here shown seems to have been part of the gatehouse ; in all likelihood the principal one belonging to the monastery. This view was drawn by Mr. Grimm, anno 1771." (Opposite the above account is a handsome engraving of the ruin.)

It is most probable that the ruin thus described was never erected nor used for a priory, but was the remains of a fortress or castle erected and inhabited by Hubba ; for his last permanent fortification is known to have been near Milford-Haven, where his fleet harbored, and whence he crossed the Channel, landed from his twenty-three ships in Devonshire, England, where he was slain in battle.

From the vast amount of historical research I have made in regard to this subject, I have been led to believe that several hills in Britain, upon which he and his band had previously encamped, afterwards bore his name.

The name Hubba is not only very ancient in British history, but, probably, of great antiquity in Asia, for it is stated among the transactions of the Society of Biblical Archæology, that "Mr. Hormuzd Rassam, incited by discoveries made by the Arab brick diggers of Hillah, in the years 1874-5, commenced a series of explorations in the Tigro-Euphrates valley, which have produced wonderful results in the way of rich discoveries, that will be welcomed by all students of history and philology. The tablets then found were purchased for the British Museum.

While working at Deyr, Mr. Rassam paid a visit to the mounds, called by the Arabs, Tell Abu Hubba ; the mounds, which are very extensive, cover an area of two miles in circumference, and the position of the walls and citadel is clearly marked by mounds and embankments of debris. Like most Babylonian edifices, the buildings at Abu Hubba are built with the angles to the cardinal points.

The citadel occupies the southern portion of the enceinte, and its highest point was on the southwest face. The trenches excavated soon struck the walls of a building and by following the face of these walls the outer face of a large square edifice was uncovered. The building, as far as can be judged from the one face uncovered, was square, and about 2000 yards in circumference, the southwest face being 1500 feet in length. The architecture of these outer walls was similar to that of the buildings discovered at Warka and Mughier, by Mr. Loftus ; the walls being broken at equal distances by broad, projecting buttresses, decorated with ploughed panels. Trenches and shafts run into the interior showed that the buildings were arranged around a central court, and consisted of a series of long narrow rooms, with extremely thick brick walls.

In the interior of the edifice an interesting pair of rooms was discovered and cleared of debris by the fortunate explorer, and from records found in these chambers has been ascertained the name of the city and the nature of the edifice whose ruins are buried beneath the mounds of Abu Hubba. In excavating a trench, following a wall into the central portion of the mound, a doorway was found leading into a large gallery or chamber, 100 feet in length and about 35 feet in width. In this chamber were the remains of a large brick altar nearly thirty feet square, and evidently a great sacrificial altar of the temple.

In the wall of this chamber a door was found leading into a smaller room, and from its construction and position, the shaft sunk by the excavators brought to light the records of the builder of the great temple of the Assyrian war-god, which had been placed in a stone cyst and buried near the altar, and from them was ascertained the name of the city and temple whose ruins had been discovered. The first three lines of the largest of the foundation records bring our speculative thoughts to a focus, and centre our minds on one of the more ancient sites of Chaldea; 'To the Sun-god, the great lord, dwelling Bit-Parra, which is within the city of Sippara.' Here, then, we have restored to us the ruins and records of a city whose traditions go back to the days before the flood, when pious Xisuthrus, by order of his god, 'buried in the city of Sippara of the Sun, the history of the beginning, progress, and end of all things,' antediluvian. And now we recover, twenty-seven centuries after they were buried, the records of the pious restorer of this ancient temple."

As the foregoing account will be considered irrelevant by many of my readers it is necessary to explain why I have quoted it, for I consider my reasons good and substantial for so doing.

The remote ancestors of Hubba the Dane came from Asia, and it is more than probable from the very valley where the ruins—beneath the mounds of Abu Hubba—were discovered. Now, as personal names are handed down for centuries, why may not the name Hubba have been used by the remote ancestors of the chieftain in Asia? The very fact of the existence of the name in Asia at the present day indicates to my mind that it is of an antiquity, probably as great as the ruins discovered beneath the mounds.

However, I leave to future writers on nomenclature the task of ascertaining whether I am correct. For if Hubba is of recent origin as a name among the Arabs, the connection I see between the names is only a strange coincident, and, therefore, of no value, but, if I am correct, the origin of the name Hubbell is far more ancient than has been supposed.

By the armorial decorations, described in this work, the fact is established that the persons to whom they were granted were of Danish descent.

The genealogical account on page 236, and coat-of-arms pertaining to it, were obtained about forty years ago by Mrs. Ellen (Hubbell) Thurber, afterwards Mrs. John H. Keller, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut. (See her obituary on page 124.) She obtained them from an individual who was travelling through America in search of heirs to ancient estates in Great Britain. He had in his possession armorial decorations and genealogical accounts pertaining to colonial families, all of which he claimed to have copied from works in the libraries of London, containing family records chronologically anterior and subsequent to the Norman Conquest.

If the account is not authentic, it is most singular, that it has subsequently been found to agree with all known personal and historical facts relating to the descendants of Richard Hubbell the First.

I am of the opinion that our emigrant ancestor was the grandson of Francis Hubbell, whom it is said was probably lost at sea in 1615, and whose widow was living in Plymouth, Devonshire, England, in 1651.

If this is a fact it is very easy to comprehend why he emigrated to America.

I have given three escutcheons as curiosities, and trust members of the family, who take pride in coats-of-arms, will pardon me for devoting so little space to the description of heraldic decorations, for believing that—

“ He stands for fame on his forefathers’ feet,
By heraldry proved valiant or discreet ! ”

I could not conscientiously do otherwise.

As it may interest some members of the family to know how I came in possession of the necessary data from which to write this book ; I state that, in my professional tours of the United States and British Provinces, I examined many valuable libraries, obtained post-office addresses from town and city directories, and became personally acquainted with members of the family ; also copied church, town and state documents, family bible records, and grave-stones ; and made a special tour of six weeks through Connecticut, in the summer of 1880, during which time I visited Bridgeport, Fairfield, Stratford, Southport, Greenfield, Sherman, Trumbull, Huntington, Monroe, Birmingham, Derby, Ansonia, Easton, Weston, New Fairfield, Newtown, Danbury, Norwalk, and Wilton, all in the aforesaid state ; also, Southeast, Putnam County, New York ; being received and entertained everywhere with marked attention by the descendants of the first Hubbell in America.

While in the aforesaid towns I copied available records, visited scores of ancient grave-yards, where the honored fathers of the village sleep ; and from the crumbling marble monuments and head-stones, that still remain, as silent sentinels to guard the ashes of those soldiers in the battle of life, who have joined the vast army that has marched on before, I deciphered numerous epitaphs and inscriptions after first removing the moss and ivy from the disintegrating stone.

In collecting information, I have been most cordially assisted by the following members of the family, and take this opportunity of expressing to them my sincere thanks for their valued aid, kind endeavors and expressions of good-will in the furtherance of my work:

Harvey Hubbell, of Long Hill, Fairfield County, Connecticut, for much valuable information and personal assistance in securing ancient records. Frederick Marion Hubbell, of Des Moines, Iowa, for many old family papers, and the gift of six hundred dollars. Major William Lewis Hubbell, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, for great personal assistance in securing important family records. William Lafayette Hubbell, of New York City, for his beautiful prologue and poem to our emigrant ancestor, and numerous family records of great value. Charles Elbert Hubbell, of Stratford, Connecticut, for his kindness in obtaining family records, and his ever-remembered assistance in searching the ancient grave-yards of "Stratford-on-the-Sound."

I am very much indebted to Mrs. Elizabeth Hubbell Schenck, of Southport, Connecticut. She is the Historian of the Town of Fairfield, and was of great assistance in securing genealogical records, and many valuable documents.

I also thank, most heartily, Major William B. Hincks, of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Alrick Hubbell Man, of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, of New York City. John Ward Dean, of the New-England Historic, Genealogical Society, of Boston, Massachusetts. Spencer Bonsall, of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. William Cothren, Historian, of Woodbury, Connecticut. William Hosmer Hubbell, of Vandalia, Fayette County, Illinois. Lester Hubbell, of Savannah, Georgia. Luman Leroy Hubbell, of Danbury, Connecticut. James Thaddeus Hubbell, of Wilton, Connecticut. Deacon Oliver B. Jennings, of Fairfield, Connecticut. Hon. Lewis H. Steiner, M.D., of Guilford, Connecticut. Daniel Malony, of Fairfield, Connecticut. Mrs. Esther Lyon Huntington, of Fairfield, Connecticut. Mrs. Fannie J. Booth Yale, of Huntington, "Upper White Hills," Connecticut. Rowland B. Lacey, of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Miss Hannah Hobart, of Fairfield, Connecticut, and the hundreds of Hubbells and descendants of other names, with whom I have corresponded, for their individual assistance in procuring genealogical, biographical, and historical information.

My preface would be incomplete without an expression of my sincere thanks to the large settlement of Hubbells—descended from Lieutenant John Hubbell,—in Huntington, on the "Upper White Hills," Fairfield County, Connecticut.

I went among them introduced by Fenelon Hubbell, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, who drove me in his carriage from Bridgeport to the "Hills," where I remained, a welcome guest for many days. While in the settlement I received every possible attention, and the visit will always be remembered among my most delightful recollections. The members of the family who were of assistance to me in obtaining information relative to their forefathers in the settlement, were Hezekiah Hubbell, Abijah Hubbell, Richard Henry Hubbell, Wells Hubbell, Warren Christopher Hubbell, Mrs. William Morse Hubbell, and Mrs. Minerva Patterson (formerly Mrs. Minerva Booth, widow of Wheeler Booth); she is generally called "Aunt Minerva," by her numerous relatives, has a most retentive memory for genealogical matters, and was of very great assistance to me in obtaining names, dates, and other valuable information.

The several indexes will, I know, be of aid to my readers. I expended many days in compiling them, and trust they will be found to contain only a few errors.

As to the biographical department, I am aware that many of the sketches are rather lengthy, but think they will all be read with interest.

On the genealogical records I expended much care, and hope they will prove satisfactory.

My readers will oblige me by correcting all errors in the genealogical portion of the book, and confer a favor by sending a memorandum of their corrections addressed to me, in care of J. H. Hubbell & Co., 407 and 409 Broadway, New York City.

Trusting that the result of my years of labor will be accepted in the spirit in which it was prepared, I place it in the hands of my subscribers, hoping they will transmit it to their descendants, to be handed down to generations yet unborn, as the first "History of the Hubbell Family."

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY AND NAME.

HISTORY tells us that more than twenty centuries before the Christian era, Asia was inhabited by the ancestors of the Goths, and that eight centuries later numerous tribes of this nomadic race immigrated to Europe and scattered themselves over its various countries, Scandinavia being settled by the most war-like, and adventurous class.

In A. D., 789, the first Danes appeared in Britain,* and about 867, Hubba, the Dane, and his band of barbarians, landed upon its shores.

In the historical account of Whitby Abbey, Yorkshire, England, the following occurs :

“This monastery continued in a flourishing state till about the year 867, when a party of Danes, under Hubba and Hinguar, landed at Dunesley Bay, two miles westward of this place, and encamped on an eminence on the east side thereof, still called Raven’s Hill; which name it is supposed to have obtained from the figure of that bird being worked on the Danish ensign, which was there displayed. From thence, straggling into the country, they plundered and laid it waste, and among other depredations entirely destroyed this monastery, which lay in ruins for many years; the community being dispersed, only Titus, the Abbot, fled with the relics of St. Hilda to Glastonbury.”†

That Hubba and his band remained in Britain, the following historical facts offer conclusive proof.

“In 871, Hubba and Hinguar,‡ took Saint Edmund, the King,§ prisoner at Thetford, in East Anglia. They offered him his life and kingdom if he would forsake Christianity, and reign under them. When he refused they tied him to a tree, and shot at him with arrows, and at last cut off his head. In the churches of Norfolk and Suffolk are to be seen pictures of him, pierced with arrows. The Danes, at the same time, killed Humberht, Bishop of the East Angles, and after ravaging the country and burning the churches and monasteries, they went into Mercia, and carried on their depredations.”||

‡Always spelled Hinguar by Hume, but frequently Inguar and Ingwar, by other historians.

§Not to be confounded with Saint Edmund who was Archbishop of Canterbury, in thirteenth century.

"Hubba, a Danish Chief, who, in conjunction with Hinguar, his brother, led a marauding expedition into the interior of Mercia, and took up their winter quarters at Nottingham, where they fortified themselves so strongly as seriously to threaten all that part of the island. They were, however, soon driven from this position, whence they retired into Northumberland. After causing much distress in this part of the island, we find them carrying on their depredations in Wales, and other parts of the west."*

"In 875-6, Alfred, the Great, found the search of his enemies become more remiss. Collecting some of his retainers, they retired into the centre of a bog, formed by the stagnation waters of the Thone and Parret, in Somersetshire. He there found two acres of firm ground, and building a habitation on them, rendered himself secure by its fortifications, and still more by the unknown and inaccessible roads which led to it, and by the forests and morasses with which it was every way environed. This place he called Æthelingey, or, the Isle of Nobles. He thence made frequent and unexpected sallies upon the Danes, who often felt the vigor of his arm, but knew not from what quarter the blow came. He subsisted, himself and his followers by the plunder which he acquired, he procured them consolation by revenge, and from small successes, he opened their minds to hope, that, notwithstanding his present misfortunes, more important victories might, at length, attend his valor. Alfred lay here concealed during a twelve-month, when news of a prosperous event reached his ears, and called him to the field. Hubba, the Dane, having spread devastation, fire, and slaughter over Wales, had landed in Devonshire, from twenty-three vessels, and laid seige to the Castle of Kinwith, a place situated near the mouth of the small river Tau.^k Oddune, Earl of Devonshire, with his followers, had taken shelter there, and being ill supplied with provisions, and even with water, he determined, by some vigorous blow, to prevent the necessity of submitting to the barbarous enemy.^l He made a sudden sally on the Danes before sun-rising, and taking them unprepared he put them to rout, pursued them with great slaughter, killed Hubba himself, and got possession of the famous Reafen, or, Enchanted Standard, in which the Danes put great confidence.^m It contained the figure of a raven, which had been inwove by the three sisters of Hubba and Hinguar, with many magical incantations, and which by its different movements, prognosticated, as the Danes believed, the good or bad success of any enterprise.ⁿ"†

"In the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries, the raven, the Danebrog of heathenism, waved victoriously in the western lands. It was with Canute, the Great, at Ashingdon, with the Norman William at Hastings, and was thus present at two conquests of England, the battle of Hastings being the last important battle that the raven won. Heathen Scandinavia had exhausted its strength by numerous and far extended conquests. Christianity, and with it a new and a higher civilization, advanced with a power not to be checked even among the ancient followers of Odin. The raven, Odin's mark,—the symbol of heathenism,—paled by degrees, as antiquated and meaningless, and at last gave place to the symbol of Christianity, the Cross. An old saga, or legend, relates, that during one of the crusades of King Waldemar, the Victorious, in Livonia, in A. D., 1219, the "Danebrog" fell from heaven among the Danish army. After these crusades, the "Danebrog," containing the Cross, appears as the established national flag of the Danes; and ever since that time, for more than six centuries, it has continued to wave unchanged over the Danish fleets and armies. It is remarkable that, as the flag of the fleet, and of all fortified places, and as the royal flag, it is split; this form must have originated from the fringes and tongues, or points with which the old Danish and Scandinavian flags were ornamented, in the tenth and eleventh centuries. The Scandinavian people is the only one which, from remote antiquity, has uninterruptedly borne this split flag; and it is reasonable to believe that Sweden, as well as Norway, obtained theirs, which is of comparatively late origin, by imitating the old Danebrog. About the time of the crusades, and perhaps a little earlier, the different kingdoms began to adopt a fixed national coat of arms, Denmark assuming that still in use—three blue leopards or lions, on a golden shield, strewn with red hearts, which was originally the family arms of the royal house. It has, however, undergone a few slight changes. With regard to this subject, it is remarkable that three leopards were also borne by the Norman dukes, who were of Danish descent, and who, after the conquest, introduced the leopards or lions, into the arms of England."*

That the Hubbell Family is of Danish origin there is no doubt. All the heraldic ensigns relating to the family in all its branches, offer undeniable proof that it is of Scandinavian blood, and although I cannot prove from history that Hubba, the Dane, left descendants in Wales, where he had his last permanent encampment, there is no doubt that the original inhabitants of "Hubba's-Hill," in Britain, were Danes, and it was there that the name and family originated.

*See "The Danes and Northmen," by Worsaae, pp. 62, 63 and 64.

According to the best works on the nomenclature of surnames, Hubbell is of local origin, and was derived from "Hubba," a Danish chief, and the Anglo-Saxon word "hill," which, as everybody knows, signifies a small mountain.

From Hubba and hill, we have Hubba's-Hill. Several hills in Britain were so called from the fact that the celebrated Chieftain Hubba, camped upon them. From Hubba's-Hill the name Hubhill was derived, and from Hubhill has come the surname, Hubbell *

Many family names have been derived from Hubhill, among which may be mentioned Hubbald, Hubald, Hubband and Huband, names which have been supposed to have had their derivation from the christian name Hugh, and the Anglo-Saxon word bald, signifying bold. hence, "Hugh the bald," or "Hugh the bold," Hubald, Hubbald, Huband and Hubband, etc.

As the derivation of all these names from Hubba and hill is the most ancient, I claim that it is correct, and that not only have the surnames Hubbell, Hubbald and Huband been so derived, but many others of a kindred composition.

Hubbell, to this day, is so spelled in Wales, the early home of the Hubbell Family.† In England, it has become Hubble; in France, Hubel; in Italy, Hubeli; while in Germany, it still retains its original form, Hubbell.

The armorial ensigns to be found in this work, are the Coats-of-Arms of members of the family that had its origin in Great Britain, from Danish ancestors. Of this there is no question, nor is there a doubt that the persons to whom they were granted belonged to the Hubba's-Hill Family, but as I cannot prove that Richard Hubbell from whom we are descended had a lawful right to use any one of them, I give them simply as curiosities, and trust they will be so considered. I hope no Hubbell will be vain enough to have one of them painted on his carriage door, or used in any other way as a decoration to show his "noble birth," for it must be remembered, that our branch of the Hubbell Family is purely and thoroughly American, and that our ancestors fought and died for the liberties of this great Republic, before it had even a flag.

Richard Hubbell, the first man of the name in America,‡ was born in Great Britain, in 1627--8.

*See "Etymological Dictionary of Family Names," by William Arthur, M. A. New York, 1857, p. 164.

†Note by the Author.—In searching records for information relating to the family, I have found the name spelled in the following forms: Hubbell, Hubell, Hubbel, Hubble, Huble, Hubball, Hubbill, Hubwell, Hubbald, Hubald, Hubbant, Hubant, Hubband, Huband, and in other ways. It is worthy of notice, that it has always been spelled Hubbell, in America, by members of the family, only being misspelled by clerks, recorders, ministers, and other scribes.

‡There is no record to show that Richard Hubbell, the First, had a brother (or brothers), in America. Every Hubbell of "Connecticut Ancestry," can be traced to him as their progenitor.

Of his early history nothing is known. The date of his arrival in New England has not been preserved, but must have been between 1645 and 1647,* for, on March 7th, of the latter year, he took the oath of fidelity to the government of the New Haven Colony.†

Like many of the inhabitants of Wales at the present day, (1880), he could not write the English language.

In 1650, he married Elizabeth,‡ daughter of John, and granddaughter of Vincent Meigs, of Dorsetshire, England. Her grandfather, (Vincent), was born in 1570, emigrated to America, and settled in Weymouth, Massachusetts. Was living in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1647. He afterwards removed to Guilford, and finally to what is now Killingworth, Connecticut, where he died in 1658. His will, dated September 2nd, 1658, was proved December 2nd, same year.§ His son, John Meigs, (born in England in 1600), married Miss Fry, (sister of William Fry), in England, in 1630. Resided in Weymouth, Massachusetts, and in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1647; removed to Guilford, Connecticut, in 1654, and to Killingworth, Connecticut, in 1663, where he was made a freeman in 1669."|| Was a tanner, had a large estate, and some books, of which one was a Latin and Greek Dictionary. He died in Killingworth, on January 4th, 1672."¶

In his will, which was probated in June, 1672, the following clause occurs: "To my nephew, Mary Hubbell,†† as her mother's portion, she being dead,‡‡ I give thirty pounds, to be paid out of my moveable estate, part in cattle and part in household stuff, with this proviso, she being obedient to her grandmother, and living with her to the day of her—to wit—her grandmother's death."§§

*"The Genealogical Dictionary of New England," Savage, p. 487, says: "Ebenezer Hubbell, New London, (Connecticut), came from Fairfield in 1690, Richard Hubbell, New Haven, 1647, removed to Fairfield, free-man in 1664, was living there 1690, and also Richard, Jr., and Samuel, perhaps his sons. Descendants are numerous." (Richard, Jr., Samuel and Ebenezer, were sons of Richard Hubbell, the First. See Genealogical Record in this work.

†"Richard Hubbell took the oath of fidelity to the Government of the New Haven Colony, (with twenty-nine other men), on March 7th, 1647." The original entry is in the handwriting of Francis Newman. See New "Haven Colonial Records, 1638 to 1649," p. 139.

‡In "Judge Smith's manuscripts," now in possession of Lewis H. Steiner, M. D., of Guilford, Connecticut, Richard Hubbell's marriage to Elizabeth Meigs, is stated to have occurred between 1650 and '54. Their second son Richard, was born in 1654. (See Guilford Records). Consequently John, their eldest child, must have been born about 1652. We have given 1650-1, as the correct date of their marriage.

Nephew and niece were synonymous terms in that day, but he evidently meant his granddaughter.

‡‡John Meigs' Will is among Judge Smith's MSS. in possession of Lewis H. Steiner, M. D., of Guilford Connecticut.

"Richard Hubbell was admitted a planter in Guilford, Connecticut, February 25th, 1653-4 on purchasing Samuel Blatchley's lots and accommodations in his stead, and took the oath of fidelity May 4th, 1654. He appears also to have purchased the land and accommodations of John Baldwin on October 16th, 1660,* and the same work also states that, in 1657-8 a list was made of the freemen of Guilford, to which the dates of their subsequent deaths were added. When the work went to press the date of Richard Hubbell's death was given as 1692.†

In 1653 or 1654 he sold land to E. Perkins, and May 14th, 1655, was living in Guilford and had a cow killed by a bull that had been left by Mr. Whitfield, and (Richard Hubbell) brought a suit to recover the loss of the cow against Mr. Chittenden, agent or attorney for Mr. Whitfield. The injury was committed in the winter, of 1654 or 55.‡

In 1656. Upon a petition presented by John Meggs,§ and the desire of Richard Hubbell, the court abated John Meggs five pounds of a fine of ten pounds that he owed to ye jurisdiction, and Richard Hubbell fiftye shillings of a fine of five pounds that he owed likewise, and that the rest be forthwh paide."||

On May 7th. 1662, Richard Hubbell (being one of a party that joined Dr. Bray Rossiter, and others, in two political papers, which were offensive to the Government at New Haven), was tried for sedition. The following account of his examination is interesting and is given in extenso.

"But Thomas Stephens being after accused by Richard Hubbell, as one yt drew him into this business, did confess yt he now sees yt he had done yt which he ought not to have done, nor should have done it if hee had considered it, and yt he was sorry for it, and desired to have it passed by, and confest yt he had grieved ye spirits of those among whom he lives. It being demanded (yt seeing he was looked upon as one of ye heads in this matter,) whether he would relinquish these things? he answered, yt soe farre as they were any blemish to ye court or any member of it he did.¶

† 1692 is erroneous, he died October 23d, 1699. See "Records of First Congregational Church of Stratfield Parish," also his "Will" and "Inventory," (In this work.)

¶ This it must be remembered is the examination of Thomas Stephens, Richard Hubbell was examined afterwards.

Richard Hubbell called for examination, was told by ye governr yt it was ye courts pleasure to have those called whose names were subscribed, and therefore desired to know whether he owned these subscriptions? he evading a plaine answer, not being able to write himself, but being asked whether it was not with his consent, he answered, yt there was such a paper shewed to him and he was asked if they should set his hand to it, to which he answered, if they would, they might; ye first paper was yt which John Benham spread, and ye second was after ye court's declaration to which latter he sayth he remembers yt he allowed not his hand to be sett to it; but being further questioned whether he joyned in ye contrivance of them? he answered, he had noe hand in ye contriving of them, but Mr. Rossitr drew up ye first, and they desired him that if there was anything in it to cleare, yt they could not have subscribed it had not Mr. Rossitr undertooke to manage it, and he promised to make proove of it. It was also p pounded to him whether he was any of those families in whose name the p test was subscribed, he answered, not as he knew of. He was also asked whether he did now retract wt he had done, or stand in ye justification of it, or was sorry that it soe spread abroad in ye country to make such disturbance as it hath done at Stamford and South-hold? he answered, that it was only his desire to have wt our law did allow, and noe more, and whatever is else, it was besides his intention, and he doth renounce and disowne it, and is sorry for anything beyond this."*

Shortly after this political offense Richard Hubbell and his family removed to Fairfield County, Connecticut. He was accepted to be made free as a resident of Fairfield, on October 13th, 1664,† (and was made free on October 10th, 1669).‡

"On 23 January, 1666, Henry Jackson and 'Goodman' Hubbell§ were appointed in ye room and stead of 'Goodman' Odell and Thomas Beachem, to lay out a bit of land granted to Thomas Dickerson."||

It would appear from the foregoing that Richard Hubbell knew something of surveying; however, this fact is immaterial, it is proven by all the records that he was a planter, a leading citizen, and an extensive land owner. He was continually exchanging, buying, and selling land or giving it to his sons.¶

¶ This fact is fully proven by the "Land Records," which contain numerous deeds both to and from him.

"On March 31st, 1674, Captain Philip Scott, of Barbadoes, sold to Richard Hubbell, of Fairfield County, the horseflesh belonging to him."*

"On May 19th, 1675, the townsmen ordered that Richard Hubbell should deliver into the magazine of Fairfield, within three months after above date, eight hundred weight of lead, for the use of the magazine of Fairfield, in payment of a debt of sixteen pounds two shillings, due from him to the town treasury for a parcel of meadow land."†

The following deed of land purchased by him is very ancient.

"The Lands of Mr. Richard Hubbell, recorded to him, his heirs and assigns.

‡Richard Hubbell, by way of exchange wth Henry Summers, hath purchased twenty-eight acres of upland, bee it more or less bounded north-west wth ye highway between Stratfield and Stratford, southeast wth ye highway to Paquanuck, bounded northeast on ye Comon, southwest wth Joseph Judson and John Beardsley. In 1685, Richard Hubbell was named as one of the proprietors of the Township of Fairfield, to whom the “ Fairfield Patent ” was granted.

The following is an exact copy of said patent, and is well worth reading, being one of the oldest papers of the kind in the work.

The following fully explains the nature of the contract :

"Whereas, formerly there hath been a treaty between John Jackson, of fayerfield, and a commety of ye town of fayerfield in referants to sd Jackson's building a corn mill and fulling mill, and whereas sd corn mill is already builit in ye place thar disposed of, but agreements about ye same are to be perfected.

In 1688 he lost his second wife,† her maiden name is not known,‡ and the same year signed the following marriage contract with Abigail Walker.

"Whereas there is a marriage shortly to be solemnized between Richard Hubbell, Senior, of Fairfield and Abigail Walker of Stratford; these are to give notice to any whom it may concern, that I the said Hubbell doe accept and take ye womans person, wholly disclaiming all or any part of the estate moveable or immoveable that did pertain to Joseph Walker her late husband deceased, witness my hand this 16th April, 1688.§

RICHARD HUBBELL, R. H."

Richard Hubbell and his descendants have been so closely identified with the first church of Stratfield, (or Pequonnock) that a short history of it will not be out of place, and I am sure will be read with interest by the Hubbell Family.

||For more than fifty years after the first settlement of Pequonnock, or Stratfield, the planters possessed no church of their own, but were forced to attend service upon the Sabbath either at Stratford or at Fairfield. In the winter and in stormy weather this must have been very inconvenient.

† Richard Hubbell had three wives, as follows: 1st, Elizabeth Meigs, who died before 1672, according to her Father's Will made that year. (Probably as early as 1664.) 2d wife maiden name unknown, (her christian name was probably Elizabeth or Esther, both being much used by the Puritans.) 3d, Abigail Walker. See "Genealogical Record" in this work.

‡ His second wife was buried in the "Stratfield Burying Ground"¶ where her grave can be seen at the present day (1880), the spot being marked by a rough stone upon which can be distinctly seen the initials "E. H.", and date of her death "1688." Beside this ancient tombstone is another made of mica, upon which can barely be deciphered the letters "R. H.", but the date has been worn away by time. These graves are undoubtedly those of Richard Hubbell and his second wife. The marriage contract between Richard Hubbell and Abigail Walker, widow, (his third wife) is dated "April 16, 1688," a fact that also proves that his second wife died in "1688", it being the custom to marry in that day as soon after the death of the preceding wife as practicable. All the old church records of the Puritans show that this custom was common, and that the second marriage generally occurred the same year.

| This brief history of the church was kindly furnished by Major Wm. B. Hincks, of Bridgeport, Conn. Major Hincks has in his keeping, all the church records dating from 1695, to the present year (1880.) He placed them at the author's disposal, an opportunity of which he availed himself, thereby obtaining much valuable information concerning the early members of the Hubbell Family that could not have been gleaned from any other source. ¶ Now within Town of Bridgeport, Conn.

Finding the long distance which they were compelled to traverse on each Sabbath burdensome, and the place having increased somewhat in size, application was at length made to the legislature for relief, and in the year 1690 ecclesiastical privileges were granted to the parish of Stratfield. The limits of the new parish embraced the greater part of what is now the town of Bridgeport, including the territory which has recently been annexed. It was bounded upon the east by the Pequonnock River, south by Long Island Sound, west by the course of Ash Creek, and north by the present town of Easton.

In the year 1694 the foundation of a house of worship was laid on an eminence in the upper part of Division Street, a few rods south of the King's Highway. The height affords a pleasant view of the surrounding country, and is still called "Meeting-House Hill." In the mean time it is probable that the people gathered upon the Sabbath in a private house, having already provided themselves with a pastor.

This was Rev. Charles Chauncey, son of Mr. Israel Chauncey, the Congregational minister at Stratford, and grandson of Charles Chauncey, a distinguished clergyman, formerly professor of Greek and Latin at Cambridge University, England, and afterwards for many years the honored president of Harvard College in this country.

Charles Chauncey, was born in Stratford, September 3d, 1668. He graduated at Harvard College in 1686, and commenced preaching to the people of Stratfield in 1693, being twenty-five years of age at the time.

A house was built for the young minister and his wife upon the northwest corner of Colonel Burr's farm. It is no longer standing, but the ruins of the cellar may still be seen upon the east side of Cook's Lane.

Mr. Chauncey's salary was £60 per annum, payable in provisions at the market rate. This sum was afterwards increased to £80 per year.

In June, 1695, the new meeting-house was completed, and upon the 13th was opened for worship. Mr. Chauncey was ordained pastor, and the Congregational Church of Stratfield formed upon the same day. This is the church which is now known as the First Congregational or North Church of Bridgeport.

The meeting-house had no bell to call the worshipers together, but they were summoned by the beating of a drum. The men carried arms to defend themselves from the attacks of the Indians, upon whose friendship it was not deemed safe to rely too implicitly. A sentinel was posted upon the summit of the hill, where the church was built, to keep watch while the services were conducted within. We may imagine the savages, on the day of the dedication, standing in groups upon the top of the opposite eminence, where St. Augustine's Catholic Church now is, and which was within the bounds of their reservation, listening to the unaccustomed sound of the drum, and watching the worshipers assemble.

The original members of the church were nine in number, all males, viz:

RICHARD HUBBELL,
ISAAC WHEELER,
JAMES BENNETT,
SAMUEL BEARDSLEY,

SAMUEL GREGORY,
MATTHEW SHERMAN,
RICHARD HUBBELL, JR.,
DAVID SHERMAN,
JOHN ODELL, Jr.

It must be remembered that for many years the church organization was the only one in the place. Church and state were also more intimately connected at that day than at present, and it was in the meeting-house that all school meetings were held, and all secular affairs, requiring a gathering of the people, transacted. The recorder of the society was also ex officio a public officer, whose duties were somewhat like those of our town clerks, and upon the society's book may be found not only minutes of ecclesiastical transactions, but of conveyance of real estate, and sales of horses and cattle.

Several pages are filled with the record of bargains of this latter description, the price paid being sometimes in cash, but frequently in another sort of currency, as shown by the following extract:

"August 5, 1703, Sam'll French sold James Hubbell* one horse—black, with Abelle Bingham's eare mark, 2 yr old, for the sume of 3 sheepe and 2 lams. Samuell Hubbell, Sr., Towne Clerke.

Recorded by desire of both parties,

SAMUELL HUBBELL, SR, Recorder."†

Mr. Chauncey's ministry lasted for over twenty years, during which time both the church and the settlement steadily increased in numbers. Besides the Sabbath services he was in the habit of delivering a religious lecture once in seven weeks, according to the custom of the times. These lectures must have been solid affairs, for it was usual to commence them when the sun was at least three hours high, and they undoubtedly lasted until sunset. On Sunday afternoon the youth of both sexes were assembled in the church and catechised publicly. No levity of demeanor was allowed upon such occasions, but it appears that even Puritan young folks were sometimes tempted in that direction, as is shown by an entry upon the society's record book.

"Voted that Nathaniel Wackle (Wakeley?) should be the man to look after ye boyes a Sabbath dayes in time of Exercise, that they play not."

Besides the catechism, "ye boyes" were taught upon the week days to read, write, and cipher, at least in the winter season, for in summer they helped carry on the farms. The first school-house was built in 1703, near the corner of Division Street and the old road. It was 21 feet in length and 16 feet wide. The school-teacher stood only second in estimation to the minister, and was always dignified with the honorary title of master. His ordinary compensation was 40s. per month. All the text-books used in the schools were the Bible and Youth's Instructor, which last was afterwards superseded by Dilworth's Spelling Book. Instead of using an arithmetic it was customary for the master "to set sums." The rod was used freely in the schools, it being the popular opinion that "to spare the rod was to spoil the child." Who the first school-master was in the parish we are not informed, but among the first was Master William Rogers. The agreement entered into between him and the school committee for the parish of Stratfield, in the year 1710, is still extant, and is as follows. The members of the committee that year were Samuel Hubbell, Sr., and Benjamin Fayerweather.

"The said William Rogers, Schoolmaster of the said Plantation, is to keep a Reading and writing School in the said Plantation, to teach the children & Youth to Read, write & cypher, the terme and time of Six months, commencing on the first day of the Instant Janry (1710). And if said Rogers shall be wanting in said six months, he is to keep a night school,—viz: five nights every week (unto) the Tenth day of March next, and the said Plantation is to pay to (said) Rogers the sum of Nineteen pounds as Provition pay, and the remaynder as hath been payd to other Schoolmasters, to be judgd by the Treasurer of the place, at or before the first day of April next."

The frequent mention of sheep, and the recurrence of the word sheep-masters upon the parish records about this time, may require some explanation. The following is believed to be substantially correct,

The country being well adapted to grazing, every farmer had his flock, from whose wool the thrifty housewife prepared the homespun clothing for the family.

The care of all the flocks in summer was entrusted to three "sheep-masters,"* who for many years were chosen annually. The sheep were permitted to graze on the commons under the care of a shepherd during the daytime, but at night were all folded in a single inclosure. After a time it occurred to the prudent sheep-masters that their revenues might be increased by renting the sheep each night to the neighboring farmers for the purpose of enriching their land.

Mr. Chauncey died upon the 31st of December, 1714. By his will he appears to have been possessed not only of a small estate in Lambeth, England, which his father had left him, but also of the old homestead in Stratford, and of real estate, slaves, etc., in his own parish. These were divided between his widow and the surviving children.

It was some time before a successor to Mr. Chauncey could be found. In the month of March following his death the society voted that Captain David Sherman should be employed to go to "Cabruck" (Saybrook?) to see if he could not prevail upon Rev. Mr. Noyes, of that place, to be their minister. His mission appears to have been unsuccessful.

Upon the 21st of June, 1715, the society voted to extend a call to Rev. Samuel Cooke, of New Haven, offering him a salary of one hundred pounds sterling, and Major John Burr, Captains James Bennett and David Sherman, Lieutenant Richard Hubbell,† and Sergeant John Odell, were appointed a committee to treat with Mr. Cooke and see if he would accept the terms offered. Whether the minister was overawed by this display of military force or not does not appear, but he presently capitulated, and signified his acceptance of the call in the following letter:

‡"To the Worshipfull Mr. James Bennett and the other Gentlemen of the Comte Apinted By the Sosiety of Stratfield to treat with mee:—Gentlemen, plas to inform your Sosiety that I am Content to sarve them in Copied by the Author from "Fairfield Town Records." It is probable that the sheep-masters of "Stratfield Parish" also paid for killing wolves.

Mr. Cooke's terms were accepted, and he shortly came to Stratfield and entered upon his duties. He took up his residence in a house nearly opposite to that which had been owned by Mr. Chauncey, on the street which is still called after him—Cooke's Lane. Mr. Cooke was a man of much dignity, and his people held him in great respect. On public occasions he always appeared in full ministerial costume, viz: a heavy curled wig, black coat and small clothes, shoes fastened with silver buckles, and over all a large cloak or gown.

In 1717, the building upon Meeting-House Hill being found too small for the use of the Congregational Society,* a new house was built on the northeast corner of Division Street and the old road. This edifice was taken down in 1834, but some vestiges of it yet remain. The cost of the building, including a gallery, which was afterwards added, was £300. The two sexes occupied opposite sides of the house, and were seated by a committee appointed for that purpose once a year, according to their different social position, or, as the old record quaintly has it, "by dignity, Adge, and a State."

In December, 1696, Richard Hubbell deeded to his son, Samuel Hubbell, Junior, the real estate described in the following:

"Samuel Hubbell, Junior,‡ hath had given him by deed of gift from his father, Richard Hubbell, these several parcells of land, viz: four acres of his pasture lot, be it more or less, lying in fairfield, at paquonock, bound on ye east and southeast with highways, on ye southwest with ye highway, on ye northwest or north with his own land, ye land of Isaac Wheeler, Junior. According to the Old Land Records, Richard Hubbell resided on what is now known as Clinton Avenue, between North and Fairfield Avenues, near the Stratfield Burying Ground, (where he is buried). That part of the parish was called Pequonnock, and is now included in the City of Bridgeport.

He died October 23rd, 1699, aged about seventy-two years.

As his will and inventory are very interesting, they are given in full, as is the will of his widow, Abigail.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN HUBBELL, of Stratford, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, son of Richard Hubbell and Elizabeth Meigs, was born in New Haven, (New Haven County,) Colony of Connecticut, in 1652.

He was raised in Guilford, Connecticut, and it was there he spent his early youth.

The history of Derby, Connecticut, says: that "John Hubbell was one of six men to whom were appointed by the Court fifty acres of land near the Old Fort, on the east side of the Housatonic river."

"At a Town Meeting, February 13th, 1683, the town granted to said John Hubbell, twenty acres of pasture land, upon the northwest side of ye east hill near Woodbury old path, provided highways be not hindered.

On March 2nd, 1683, the town of Derby, Connecticut, granted to Mr. John Hubbell, a fifty acre allotment in the neck, (viz), that lot formerly granted to Josiah Nichols and afterward to Johnathan Nichols, this land was granted to ye said Hubbell, provided he come to Derby this next April or May with his family and settle a consistent inhabitant for the full time of seven years, to be fully issued upon ye place, and also to build a sufficient house, (viz), a tenantable house to entertain a family, great or small, and also to pay ye purchase money of ye said land to the town, or unto such as ye said town shall appoint, if it do not appear to ye town's satisfaction it be already done, and also to pay ye minister's rate now due from ye said lot, and all other charges, with the rest of the inhabitants."*

In January, 1683, he became the owner of the land described in the following ancient deed:

Recorded in folio 516.

In 1678 he lost a finger evidently in the service of his country, as is shown by following clause:

"The General Court, May 13, 1678, granted to John Hubbell, in consideration of his loss of one of his fingers and cure, &c., one hundred acres of lands, provided he take it up where it may not prjudice any former grant to a plantation or perticular person."*

After receiving from Governor Robert Treat his commission as Lieutenant (a fac-simile of which appears on the opposite page), he embarked for Albany, about seven weeks after the Schnectedy massacre, and was in discharge of his duties when attacked by that loathsome disease, small-pox, from which he died. He was buried—strange as it may seem—in full uniform, and a stone bearing his initials and the year of his death (1690) was placed above his grave.

The Indians with whom he was engaged in conflict, disinterred his body at night, and appropriated to their own use his uniform.

The effect was terrible, and must have satisfied the Cololonial Government that Lieutenant John Hubbell was an efficient officer even in death, for half the tribe fell victims to their cupidity, and died of small-pox.

RICHARD HUBBELL, of Stratfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, son of Richard Hubbell and Elizabeth Meigs, was born in Guilford, New Haven County, Colony of Connecticut, in 1654, and moved to Fairfield County with his parents when about eight years of age.

He was a wealthy planter and held many offices of trust. Was one of the nine original members of the First Congregational Church of Stratfield Parish. Was a Lieutenant. (For additional facts concerning him, see abstracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut," and "Society Book of Stratfield Parish," in Appendix to this work.)

The silver tankard he willed to the church, is still in use. It is valued in the inventory of his estate at £55, and is of very elegant workmanship, as can be seen from the engraving on the opposite page.

PETER HUBBELL, of Newtown, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, son of Lieutenant Richard Hubbell and Rebecca Morehouse, was born August 10th, 1686, in Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut.

* Copied by the Author from the original Will on file in "Probate Court at Fairfield, Connecticut."

Having been given a large tract of land in Newtown by his father, he settled there in 1709, kept the first Hotel and was granted the first Ferry. Was a prominent man in the town, as is shown by the following extracts from the Town Records.

(Also see extracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut," in Appendix to this work.)

He died in 1780. As his Will, Inventory, and the Distribution of his Estate are very interesting, they are given in full.

"A ferry from Newtown to Woodbury was granted to Peter Hubbell, at Pootatuck, May 13th, 1730 This was about an eighth of a mile below Fort Hill, which is located on the west side of the Housatonic, directly opposite the Indian village of Pootatuck, on the east side of that river. At these two points, within gunshot of the river, the Indians had forts to protect themselves against the Mohawks, and after the introduction of firearms among the natives, a fleet of Mohawk canoes on the river would afford a capital mark for the practice of gunnery. The ferry was at the north end of Cockshure's Island, previously to this owned by the sachem of that name, but since known as Hubbell's Island, from the ferryman above mentioned."‡ (See "State Papers," Travel, Vol. I, page 174).

RICHARD HUBBELL, of Stratfield Parish, Town of Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, Son of Lieutenant Richard Hubbell, and his second wife Hannah Silliman, was born in Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, on October 20, 1676.

He was a merchant engaged in trade with the West Indies for many years. From 1783 until his death (1787) he was in business with his son Amos, under the firm name of Richard Hubbell and Son. They were chiefly in the West Indies trade, including a coastwise trade with Boston; their place of business was in Newfield, (now included in the town of Bridgeport, Conn.)

Towards the close of the Revolutionary War their business was confined to a coasting trade between Newfield and Boston, and they were enabled to render efficient aid to General Washington and their country by placing at the disposal of Washington one of their sloops, for an expedition to surprise and capture an English Brig of War, then at anchor in Long Island Sound, off Newfield.

The facts as reported are mainly and briefly as follows: General Washington then at or near the village of Black Rock, (about three miles from Newfield) detailed to Colonel Talmadge twenty-five men to embark in a sloop at Newfield, that had been tendered by Richard Hubbell and Son, for the expedition.

Amos Hubbell was in command of the sloop, being one of the owners of the vessel, he steered her himself and under cover of the darkness, placed her along side of the English Brig, when in a few moments Colonel Talmadge and his men boarded the enemy and were soon in possession of their prize, they took the captured vessel and crew into Black Rock harbor and surrendered them to General Washington.

His son Richard was also associated in the business, and the two sons Amos and Richard carried on the same business after their father's death.

Richard Hubbell, the subject of this sketch, was Deacon of the Church of Christ in Stratfield Parish for many years. (For further particulars see Abstracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut," in Appendix to this work.) The following notice of his death is from the "Fairfield Gazette and Independent Intelligence," of July 4, 1787.*

"Died on the 27th ult., Mr. Richard Hubbell, in the 93rd year of his age. He was deacon of the Church in Stratfield for 80 years. He lived with his wife (who now survives him) about 63 years. His loss is much lamented by a numerous acquaintance."

"In the Name of God Amen. I Richard Hubbell, of Stratfield Parish and Town of Fairfield, being far advanced in years and sick and weak in Body, but of sound disposing Mind and Memory, recommending my Soul to God thro Jesus Christ the Redeemer and my Body to decent Burial, do make and ordain my last Will and Testament in Form and Manner following: First. It is my Will that after my just Debts and funeral Charges are paid, my beloved wife Penelope shall have and possess all my Household Furniture and moveable Estate, and I do hereby will and bequeath it all to her to be her own forever and at her Disposal as she shall think proper, excepting the Articles hereafter particularly mentioned, which I design my son Benjamin shall have after her Decease. Secondly. It is also my Will that she shall have the Use and Improvement of the old Meeting House Lot, so called, lying opposite to Mr. John Cooke's, in Quantity about five Acres, during her natural Life. Thirdly. It is my will and I do hereby give and Bequeath unto my son Benjamin above mentioned, the said Lot or piece of Land to be his own forever after the Decease of his Mother. Fourthly. It

ELEAZER HUBBELL, of Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, son of Lieutenant Richard Hubbell, and his second wife Hannah Silliman, was born in Stratfield Parish, Fairfield County, Connecticut, on August 15th, 1700.

He resided in his native town for many years, and afterwards removed to New Fairfield, Conn., where he died September 3d, 1770.

He was a prominent member of the Masonic Fraternity, as is shown by the following warrant appointing him "Master of St. John's Lodge." (For further particulars concerning him see Abstracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut," in Appendix to this work.)

Given under our hand and seal of Masonry in the Provincial Grand Lodge, at the City of New York, the twelfth day of February A. D., 1762, and year of Masonry, 5762.

GEORGE HARRISON, Provincial Grand Master.

As many members of the "Hubbell Family" are connected with Masonry, the following short account of St. John's Lodge will be read with interest :

The first Charter of St. John's Lodge, No. 3, is dated February 12th, 1762, and was granted for Fairfield County by the Provincial Grand Master of the State of New York, while these States were but Colonies of the mother country. The first Lodge was held within the town of Stratford, near the line of the town of Fairfield.

Afterwards Lodges were held at different places within the towns of Fairfield and Stratford. The first Lodge in Newfield (now Bridgeport) was held June 25th, 1789. In 1792 the brethren in Newfield, still holding the old charter, proposed to unite under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of the State of Connecticut, and their charter was registered accordingly in the office of the Grand Secretary. In October of the same year a new charter was granted, with permission to hold the lodge at Fairfield or Newfield, the lodge voted to meet within the borough of Bridgeport, and did so until 1809, when the Grand Lodge ordered that in future it should be holden within one mile of the court house in the town of Fairfield. In 1812 the Lodge met at the house of Brother Ephraim Knapp, and from that time it has continued to be held in Bridgeport.

"At the first meeting of the lodge five brothers were present, viz.: Arnot Cannon, Master, pro-tem., Joseph Knapp, Senior Warden, Isaac Young, Junior Warden, Hezekiah Hubbell, Treasurer, and I. Anderson, Secretary. It seems to have been an extraordinary lodge, called to initiate David Wheeler and Woolcot Chauncey. They met at the house of Captain Samuel Wakelee, in Stratfield, on Monday, February 15th, 1762. The second meeting was at the house of Richard Hubbell, also a case of emergency, to pass and raise brothers Wheeler and Chauncey. The first regular (or proper) lodge was held at Mr. Hubbell's house on Wednesday, February 24th, 1762. Up to July 14th of the same year. Eight meetings were held, when the first election of officers took place, Eleazer Hubbell being chosen Master. Thus the work began which has been going on through the past one hundred years until the present day (1880).

It is worthy of note that no allusion is made in the records to either the revolutionary war or that of 1812, Masonry having only to do with that which belongs to peace.

In July, 1794, it was voted 'That a mourning ring be presented to the relict of our late worthy and respected brother, Wakeman Hubbell, deceased, as a token of the unabating friendship we retain for his memory.'

In December, 1799, it was voted "That the members of the Lodge wear suitable mourning upon the arm, during the pleasure of the Lodge, in token of respect for the memory of the late Most Worshipful Grand Master of the United States, George Washington."†

NATHANIEL HUBBELL, of Lebanon, Hunterdon Co., New Jersey, son of Lieutenant Richard Hubbell and his second wife Hannah Silliman, was born August 11, 1702, in Stratfield Parish, Town of Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut.

He was a graduate of Yale College (class of 1723) Was admitted into full communion March 28, 1725, in Congregational church of "Fairfield, Conn.," and ordained by the Presbytery of Philadelphia, as early as 1727. His name appears on the roll of the Synod for that year, and was attached, with the names of three others, to a protest in which he declined the jurisdiction of the Synod. His field of labor included the scattered settlements lying back of Elizabeth, New Jersey, and the Newark Mountains, Westfield and Hanover, the latter including the greater part of what was afterwards Morris County. In 1730 he relinquished the charge of Hanover, retaining Westfield until about 1745.

His dismissal was brought about by reason of his prosecuting a claim for one hundred acres of the parsonage land, given him as "a settlement," or to liquidate what was due him from the parish. His Congregation gave him what was called a liberal settlement, supposing he would live, labor and die among them as a peaceable soul loving Pastor, but his parish soon found that he was possessed of qualities that greatly disappointed the simple hearted Puritans who attended his Church; they soon found him seeking theirs so earnestly as to put an end to all anticipated comfort in him and usefulness from him, and his removal was the result.

After his removal he resided within the bounds of Rahway N. J. for several years, but removed at length to Lebanon in Hunterdon Co., where he died in 1760. His Will is interesting.*

"In the Name of God Amen; this Eleventh day of July. One thousand seven hundred and sixty. I Nathaniel Hubbell, of Lebanon, in the County of Hunterdon and Province of New Jersey, of sound mind and memory, knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament.

I give, will and bequeath to my disobedient and absconded wife Elizabeth, all that money as the annual profits and interest of the same which was lodged in the hands of Capt. Daniel Potter and Stephen Crane, Esq., both of the borough of Elizabeth, for her support and five shillings, all being lieu of dowry.

Item. I give, bequeath and will to my loving son Ahijah, five shillings, having given him considerable already.

Item. I give to my loving son, Ezekiah,† five shillings, having given him considerable already.

Item. I give to my loving son, Nathaniel, five shillings, having given him considerable already.

JEDEDIAH HUBBELL, of Lanesborough, Massachusetts, son of Peter Hubbell and Katharine Wheeler, was born in Newtown, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, August 22, 1720, and died in Lanesborough, Mass., in 1819. [See Abstracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut," in Appendix.]

He married his fifth wife when 87 years of age, and lived with her for twelve years, dying in 1819.

His obituary is from a Lanesborough paper.—

"DIED, at Lanesborough, on the evening of the 14th inst., Mr. JEDEDIAH HUBBELL, at the advanced age of 99 years. In the character of Mr. Hubbell we have an exhibition of piety, patriotism and philanthropy rarely to be found. As a father and husband he was kind, affectionate and attentive; as a citizen, he possessed and uniformly exhibited an uncommon degree of public spirit, being ever ready to contribute, to the extent of his ability, for the support of the institutions of his country, society, and the religion which he professed. He was a warm supporter and defender of the rights and liberties of his country, and those who were his contemporaries in the revolution might witness for him, that he was one of the foremost in opposing the tyrannical laws of Britain; and, notwithstanding his age, he was found a volunteer in the camp of his country. But the religion of Jesus Christ was, in his view, of the greatest importance. He had been a member of the Presbyterian Church for more than 70 years, and here he was most conspicuous, for he was truly an ornament to the church of which he was a member, and did highly honor his profession by a strict regard to honesty in his dealings with his fellow creatures and a careful observance of the laws and ordinances of the gospel, and always appeared to rejoice when he saw the prosperity of religion, and to mourn with much grief at its decline. Thus, through a long life, having exhibited the character of a righteous man and christian, he, in his death, gave ample proofs that this was his real character. Being in the perfect possession of his rational powers, he viewed his approaching fate with the greatest composure and resignation, trusting alone in the merits of his Saviour for justification, and contemplating with wonder and admiration the glorious character of God, he hailed the King of Terrors, and gladly accepted his message, and quit his tabernacle of flesh without a struggle, and we cannot but hope that on the wings of his attendant guardian angel he was forthwith borne up to the celestial world, to hear the plaudit of his master, and to receive a crown of eternal happiness and glory. And now let his dear children, who mourn their loss, and the youth of his acquaintance, reflect, as they would wish 'to die the death of the righteous man,' so let them learn from example to live his life, that their last end may be like his.

‘ Prepare us, Lord, for thy right hand,
Then come the joyful day,
Come death and some celestial band,
To bear our souls away.’ "

GERSHOM HUBBELL, of Greenfield, Town of Fairfield, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Nathan Hubbell and Martha Finch, was born in Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, July 29, 1729. (See Abstracts from "Colonial Records of Connecticut" in Appendix.)

From the following notice it would appear that he was not only a planter but a currier.

He resided in a house built by himself in 1751. This ancient house is still standing in a remarkable state of preservation, and is a fair specimen of the houses in which the earlier members of the Hubbell Family lived. (See engraving on next page.) It is picturesquely situated at the foot of "Greenfield Hill." Mrs. Uriah Hubbell and her accomplished daughter Adelia, are the only residents, and take great pleasure in showing the old house and its historic contents to members of the family. As it has always been in the possession of Gershom Hubbell's descendants, everything has been preserved with remarkable care. The old crane, trammels, and hooks are still in the fire-place of the kitchen. The same high-backed chairs grace the parlor, and on the walls are to be seen the same pictures. On the old-fashioned square centre table are to be seen ancient books, and two or three Bibles of great antiquity containing the family records. A cordial case of inlaid woods, containing four cut glass bottles and two cordial glasses, presented to Miss Priscilla Hubbell by her intended, is still upon the table where she placed it over seventy-five years ago. She was born, lived all her life, and died in the house in 1868, aged ninety-five years. Her intended was lost at sea, and she remained unmarried. Among the other relicts of a past age are to be seen sets of ancient china, cut glass bowls and goblets, pewter platters and table dishes, many of which are older than the house itself.

Home spun linen, made in "ye olden time," is still kept in an antique chest of drawers, and, among the other articles, is to be seen a linen table cloth woven in 1700, and to-day as perfect as when it was made, not having a single patch.

In one of the bed rooms is an ingrain carpet that was brought from England long before the American Revolution; it is said to be one of the first imported. Among the ancient household furniture, high post bedsteads, ancient chairs, an old spinning wheel, an old hetchel, an old reel, an old warming-pan, and some flax are sure to attract attention.

In one of the rooms the famous Doctor Dwight held divine service, and taught school while his academy on Greenfield Hill was in course of erection.

At the side of the house is to be seen the old well curb, with its long hickory sweep, iron chain, and old oaken bucket covered with moss, from which Gershom and his descendants have all drawn water from the same old well.

The house is shaded by elm, maple and button ball trees, some of which are over two hundred years old. Not only as one of the few houses that escaped the fire when Fairfield was burned by the British is this old house worthy of a visit, but as a specimen of the houses of our ancestors it will be looked on with veneration by all members of the Hubbell Family. Gershom died April 14, 1802, and his will was recorded May 6, the same year.

The subscriber still felt for Mr. Hubbell, and anxious to get as much for the Notes as possible, adjourned the Vendue to a considerable Time forward;—at length the Day of Sale came, and the Notes were publickly Sold as the Law required to the highest bidder, and amounted to the sum of £104, 14s, 8d. ISRAEL BIBBINS, Fairfield, January 22d, 1787."

SILAS HUBBELL, of Montgomery, Hampden County, Massachusetts, son of Peter Hubbell, of Newtown, Connecticut, and Katharine Wheeler, his wife, was born in Newtown, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, February 24th, 1738.

On June 16th, 1763, he married Elizabeth Edmond, in Southberry, Connecticut. Was a resident of South Britian, Connecticut, in 1771.

During the War of the Revolution, Captain Hubbell took an active part in many battles, among which may be mentioned the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill; in the latter battle he took from the field a musket that had been used by a British soldier, it was of the kind known as a "Queen Ann Arm." Although an officer, he used it during the battle, and kept it until his death as a trophy. Was on Long Island with General Washington, and fought in five of the General's famous battles.

Was also in a number of battles under General Putnam.

Was one of the party who assisted the men who, after disguising themselves as Indians, threw the tea into Boston Harbor.

During the war he sold his property near Woodbury, Connecticut, and with the money thus obtained, bought shoes, blankets and clothing, for the men under his command, in order that his company might remain in the field. At the close of the war he was repaid in Continental money, which proved worthless.

In 1781, Captain Hubbell was living in Montgomery, Massachusetts, where his wife, Elizabeth, died July 7th, 1783, leaving him with six children, three sons and three daughters. In 1785, he married Mrs. Hannah Wheeler, a widow, (nee French.) (Mrs. Wheeler had also six children, five sons and one daughter, by her first husband.) After residing in Montgomery until 1796, Captain Hubbell moved with his family, including his three younger sons by his wife, Hannah, to Unadilla, Delaware County, New York, where, in a year or two, he had the misfortune to lose by death, his wife.

In 1800, Captain Hubbell returned to his former home in Montgomery, Massachusetts. While on a visit to the neighboring town of Norwich, (Massachusetts), he was attacked with obstruction of the bowels. He had been suffering for several years from the effects of exposure during the Revolution, and was not at the time of this illness in the enjoyment of good health. The old army surgeon who attended him, administered 160 grains of calomel; this failing to have the desired effect, he administered doses of quicksilver during the night which seemed to afford no relief, for on the following day, August 27th, 1805, he expired. His remains repose beside those of his first wife, Elizabeth, in the old graveyard, near the Norwich Bridge, a mile and a half from Huntington, Massachusetts.

In appearance Captain Hubbell was tall, (six feet and one quarter of an inch in his stockings), and very erect, eyes dark blue, hair dark brown, very thick, and inclined to curl.

He was a man of great natural ability, and superior conversational powers. Having parted with his property for his country's good, he was wont to say that he had no legacy to leave his children but an honored name, and a country for which he had fought and bled, that it might be free.

JABEZ HUBBELL, of Fairfield, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of David Hubbell and his wife, Martha, was born in Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, in 1739, and died 1817.

His will was recorded July 7th, 1817, and is as follows:

“Know all by these presents, that I, Jabez Hubbell, of the Town and County of Fairfield, being weak and low in bodily health, but of sound and disposing mind and memory, do make and ordain this, my last Will and Testament, viz.:

In the first place, I order and direct all my just debts and funeral charges to be paid out of my personal Estate by my Executors hereafter named.

I also give and bequeath unto my beloved wife, Rhoda, and my daughter, Sarah, each a mourning Suit in addition to what I hereafter give them in this, my Will.

I also give and bequeath unto my beloved wife, to her and her heirs and assigns, after payment of my Debts, one-third part of the remainder of my personal Estate. I also give, bequeath and devise unto my said beloved wife the use and improvements of the whole of my real Estate during the time she shall remain my Widow, and in case my said Wife shall marry again, then from the hour she shall marry I give, bequeath & devise unto her the use and improvement of one-third part only of my real Estate during the remainder of her natural life—to be in full and in lieu of her Dower in my Estate.

I also give and bequeath unto my Son, James Hubbell, in addition to what I shall hereafter in this my Will give him, a mourning suit.

I give, bequeath and devise the remainder of my Estate, both real and personal, of every kind, to my said son James, and my said Daughter, Sarah, to them and their heirs and assigns forever, to be equally divided between them.

Finally I hereby constitute and appoint my beloved Wife, Rhoda, Executrix, of this, my last Will and Testament, by me made, and declaring this, and no other, to be my last Will and Testament.

In Witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and Seal in said Fairfield, the 3d day of January, 1798.

claims of justice, and the cries of humanity, plunged the sufferer into the ocean and left him to perish in the waves, on the 5th day of April, 1799, aged 26 years.

When sweet content serenely smiles around,
Like a fair summer evening, oh, how soon,
The charming scene is lost, the deepening shades
Prevail, and night approaches dark and sad,
Till the last beam, faint glimmering, dies away.”

WILLIAM HUBBELL, of near Georgetown, Kentucky, son of Hezekiah Hubbell and Anne Patterson, was born in Fairfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, July 24th, 1755.

Captain Hubbell was in the Revolutionary War. He emigrated to Kentucky in 1791, and settled near Georgetown, where he died, in 1830.

The following account of his battle with Indians on the Ohio River, is interesting:

"In the year 1791, when the Indians were very troublesome on the banks of the Ohio, Captain William Hubbell, Mr. Daniel Light, Mr. William Plascut, Mrs. Plascut and eight children embarked in a flat-bottom boat to proceed down the Ohio.

On their progress down the river, and soon after passing Pittsburgh, they saw evident traces of Indians along the banks, and there is every reason to believe that a boat which they overtook, and which, through carelessness, was suffered to run aground on an island, became a prey to these merciless savages. Though Captain Hubbell and his party waited some time for it in a lower part of the river, it did not arrive, and has never to their knowledge been heard of since. Before they reached the mouth of the Great Kenhawa, they had, by several successive additions, increased their number to twenty, consisting of nine men, three women, and eight children. The men, besides those mentioned above, were one John Stoner (also an Irishman and a Dutchman, whose names are not recollected), Messrs. Ray and Tucker, and a Mr. Kilpatrick, whose two daughters also were of the party. Information received at Galliopolis confirmed the expectation, which appearances previously raised, of a serious conflict with a large body of Indians; and as Captain Hubbell had been regularly appointed commander of the boat, every possible preparation was made for a formidable and successful resistance of the anticipated attack. The nine men were divided into three watches for the night, which were alternately to continue awake, and be on the lookout for two hours at a time. The arms on board, which consisted principally of old muskets, much out of order, were collected, loaded, and put in the best possible condition for service. About sunset on that day, the 23d of March, 1791, the party overtook a fleet of six boats descending the river in company, and intended to continue with them, but as their passengers seemed to be more disposed to dancing than fighting, and as soon after dark, notwithstanding the remonstrances of Captain Hubbell, they commenced fiddling and dancing instead of preparing their arms and taking the necessary rest preparatory to battle, it was wisely considered more hazardous to be in such company than to be alone. It was therefore determined to proceed rapidly forward by the aid of the oars, and leave those thoughtless fellow-travelers behind. One of the boats, however, belonging to the fleet, commanded by a Captain Greathouse, adopted the same plan, and for a while kept up with Captain Hubbell, but all its crew at length falling asleep, that boat also ceased to be propelled by the oars, and Captain Hubbell and his party proceeded steadily forward alone. Early in the night a canoe was dimly seen floating down the river, in which were probably Indians reconnoitering, and other evident indications were observed of the neighborhood and hostile intentions of a formidable party of savages.

It was now agreed, that should the attack, as was probable, be deferred till morning, every man should be up before dawn, in order to make as great a show as possible of numbers and of strength; and that, whenever the action should take place, the women and children should lie down on the cabin floor, and be protected as well as they could by the trunks and other baggage, which might be placed around them. In this perilous situation they continued during the night, and the Captain, who had not slept more than one hour since he left Pittsburgh, was too deeply impressed with the imminent danger which surrounded him to obtain any rest at that time.

Just as daylight began to appear in the east, and before the men were up and at their posts, agreeably to arrangement, a voice at some distance below them, in a plaintive tone, repeatedly solicited them to come on shore, as there were some white persons who wished to obtain a passage in their boat. This the Captain very naturally and correctly concluded to be an Indian artifice, and its only effect was to rouse the men, and place every one on his guard. The voice of entreaty was soon changed into the language of indignation and insult, and the sound of distant paddles announced the approach of the savage foe. At length three Indian canoes were seen through the mist of the morning rapidly approaching. With the utmost coolness the Captain and his companions prepared to receive them. The chairs, tables, and other incumbrances were thrown into the river, in order to clear the deck for action. Every man took his position, and was ordered not to fire till the savages had approached so near that (to use the words of Captain Hubbell) "the flash from the guns might singe their eye-brows;" and a special caution was given that the men should fire successively, so that there might be no interval. On the arrival of the canoes, they were found to contain about twenty-five or thirty Indians each. As soon as they had approached within the reach of musket-shot, a general fire was given from one of them, which wounded Mr. Tucker through the hip so severely that his leg hung only by the flesh, and shot Mr. Light just below his ribs. The three canoes placed themselves at the bow, stern, and on the right side of the boat, so that they had an opportunity of raking in every direction. The fire now commenced from the boat, and had a powerful effect in checking the confidence and fury of the Indians. The Captain, after firing his own gun, took up that of one of the wounded men, raised it to his shoulder, and was about to discharge it, when a ball came and took away the lock; he coolly turned round, seized a brand of fire from the kettle which served for a caboose, and applying it to the pan, discharged the piece with effect. A very regular and constant fire was now kept up on both sides. The Captain was just in the act of raising his gun a third time, when a ball passed through his right arm, and for a moment disabled him. Scarcely had he recovered from the shock and re-acquired the use of his hand, which had been suddenly drawn up by the wound, when he observed the Indians in one of the canoes just about to board the boat in its bow, where the horses were placed belonging to the party. So near had they approached that some of them had actually seized with their hands the side of the boat. Severely wounded as he was, he caught up a pair of horsemen's pistols and rushed forward to repel the attempt at boarding. On his approach the Indians fell back, and he discharged a pistol with effect at the foremost man. After firing the second pistol he found himself without arms, and was compelled to retreat; but stepping back on a pile of small wood which had been prepared for burning in the kettle, the thought struck him that it might be made use of in repelling the foe, and he continued for some time to strike them with it so forcibly and actively, that they were unable to enter the boat, and at length he wounded one of them so severely that with a yell they suddenly gave way. All the canoes then discontinued the contest, and directed their course to Captain Greathouse's boat, which was in sight. Here a striking contrast was exhibited to the firmness and intrepidity which had been displayed. Instead of resisting the attack, the people on board of this boat retired to the cabin in dismay. The Indians entered it without opposition, and rowed it to the shore, where they killed the Captain and a lad of about fourteen years of age. The women they placed in the centre of their canoes, and manning them with fresh hands, again pursued Captain Hubbell and party. A melancholy alternative now presented itself to these brave but almost desponding men, either to fall a prey to the savages themselves, or to run the risk of shooting the women, who had been placed in the canoes in the hope of deriving protection from their presence. But "self-preservation is the first law of nature," and the Captain very justly remarked, there would not be much humanity in preserving their lives at such a sacrifice, merely that they might become victims of savage cruelty at some subsequent period.

There were now but four men left on board of Captain Hubbell's boat, capable of defending it, and the captain himself was severely wounded in two places. The second attack, however, was resisted with almost incredible firmness and vigor. Whenever the Indians would rise to fire, their opponents would frequently give them the first shot, which in almost every instance would prove fatal. Notwithstanding the disparity of numbers, and the exhausted condition of the defenders of the boat, the Indians at length appeared to despair of success, and the canoes successively retired to the shore. Just as the last one was departing, Captain Hubbell called to the Indian, who was standing in the stern, and on his turning round, discharged his piece at him. When the smoke, which for a moment obstructed the vision, was dissipated, he was seen lying on his back, and appeared to be severely, perhaps mortally wounded.

Unfortunately the boat now drifted near to the shore, where the Indians were collected, and a large concourse, probably between four and five hundred, were seen rushing down on the bank. Ray and Plascut, the only men remaining unhurt, were placed at the oars, and as the boat was not more than twenty yards from the shore, it was deemed prudent for all to lie down in as safe a position as possible, and attempt to push forward with the utmost practical rapidity. While they continued in this situation, nine balls were shot into one oar, and ten into the other, without wounding the rowers, who were hidden from view, and protected by the side of the boat and the blankets in its stern. During this dreadful exposure to the fire of the savages, which continued about twenty minutes, Mr. Kilpatrick observed a particular Indian, whom he thought a favorable mark for his rifle, and, notwithstanding the solemn warning of Captain Hubbell, rose to shoot him, he immediately received a ball in his mouth, which passed out at the back part of his head, and was almost at the same moment shot through the heart. He fell among the horses that about the same time were killed, and presented to his afflicted daughters and fellow-travelers, who were witnesses of the awful occurrence, a spectacle of horror which we need not further attempt to describe.

The boat was now providentially and suddenly carried out into the middle of the stream, and taken by the current beyond the reach of the enemy's balls. Our little band reduced as they were in numbers, wounded, afflicted, and almost exhausted by fatigue, were still unsubdued in spirit, and being assembled in all their strength, men, women, and children, with an appearance of triumph, gave three hearty cheers, calling the Indians to come on again, if they were fond of the sport.

Thus ended this awful conflict, in which out of nine men, two only escaped unhurt. Tucker and Kilpatrick were killed on the spot, Stoner was mortally wounded, and died on his arrival at Limestone, and all the rest, excepting Ray and Plascut were severely wounded. The women and children were all uninjured, excepting a little son of Mr. Plascut, who, after the battle was over, came to the captain, and with great coolness requested him to take a ball out of his head. On examination, it appeared that a bullet which had passed through the side of the boat, had penetrated the forehead of this little hero, and remained under the skin. The captain took it out, and the youth, observing "that is not all," raised his arm, and exhibited a piece of bone at the point of his elbow, which had been shot off, and hung only by the skin. His mother exclaimed, "why did you not tell me of this?" "Because," he coolly replied, "the captain directed us to be silent during the action, and I thought you would be likely to make a noise if I told you."

The boat made the best of its way down the river, and reached Limestone that night. From that time forth no boat was assailed by Indians on the Ohio.*

ISAAC HUBBELL, of Weston, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Nehemiah Hubbell and Hannah Treadwell, was born in Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, in 1755.

He was a soldier in the war of the Revolution.

During the early part of the war, while hunting in the forest in the upper part of New York State with two members of his company, he stopped near a beech tree to repair his shoe, telling his two companions that he would soon overtake them. While repairing the broken shoe he heard something strike the ground beside him, and, on looking to ascertain what it was, was surprised to see an arrow sticking in the earth; in an instant another came whizzing past his head, convincing him that Indians were in close proximity. Cocking his musket, he arose from the ground and peered into the beech tree, whence the arrows had come, and among its branches soon discovered the dusky form of a savage. One shot from his musket killed the Indian and brought his two companions to his side, for on hearing the report they supposed he had killed a deer. Their amazement can better be imagined than described when they found themselves surrounded by some fifteen or twenty Indians, who had been also lying in ambush, awaiting a favorable opportunity to capture all three alive. In a few moments the hunters were overpowered and bound, and after a short and most unwilling march found themselves in the camp of the savages.

The next day they were compelled to "run the gauntlet," and subjected to other barbarous tortures for the amusement of the women and children of the tribe, as a sort of prelude to what they were to suffer, by being burned at the stake.

Isaac bore his sufferings without allowing a word of anguish to escape him, for he hoped that something would occur at the last moment to save their lives. His two companions had already been secured to the stakes; his turn had come when the Chief, anxious to secure his luxuriant red hair (which he always wore in a queue), before it had been scorched by the flames, ordered an Indian to scalp him. This was more than our hero could bear; although his arms were pinioned he managed to throw the Indian to the ground by tripping him, and in an instant, jumped with all his weight upon the face of the savage, disfiguring him for life. This act of rebellion on the part of a prisoner so enraged the Indians that he would have been murdered then and there but for the intervention of the Chief, who was so pleased with his bravery and courage in frustrating the attempt to scalp him, that he concluded to save him, hair and all, and offered to adopt him into the tribe, also to give him one of his three daughters as a squaw; an offer Isaac was not slow to accept, for the fagots had been placed at the stakes, and everything was in readiness for the torture.

Not caring to offend the remaining daughters of the Chief, by choosing one of the maidens for his squaw, he requested their father to bestow on him the one he thought would suit him best. After some hesitation, the Chief gave him the youngest, and, fortunately, best looking of the three, and the next day the daring Isaac was adopted into the tribe, and remained with them for nearly two years.

As his companions had been burned at the stake before his eyes, he always dreaded a similar fate at the hands of the treacherous savages. Knowing that some of the tribe would murder him in cold blood if it were not for their leader, he determined to make his escape at the first opportunity.

During his life among the savages he had many remarkable adventures. On one occasion, while hunting deer, with three members of the tribe, he saw the Indian, whose face he had disfigured, glide behind a tree, and an instant afterwards a ball from the Indian's musket whistled past his head; almost at the same instant he heard the report of a rifle, and the Indian who had fired at him fell dead, shot through the heart by our hero's faithful squaw, who knowing of the plot to murder her husband, had followed the party into the forest, determined to save his life at the risk of her own. The two remaining Indians finding that their plot was discovered, tried to escape, but in vain; one was killed by a ball from Isaac's gun and the other, although wounded by the devoted squaw, succeeded in making his escape, it is supposed, to some distant tribe, for he never returned to the camp. His squaw told him that it was the intention of the three Indians to push him from the cliff they had passed on entering the forest, and then return to camp and say he had fallen and been killed while in pursuit of a wounded stag. Fortunately for Isaac, he always mistrusted the Indian who had been so ready to scalp him after his capture, and would never go out with him alone or allow him to walk behind him while hunting; and as he had been careful not to approach the cliff, that plan of killing him had failed.

After this second fortunate escape from death at the hands of the Indians he lived in harmony with them, for they now looked upon him as one protected by the Great Spirit, and spared no pains to make his life among them one of comfort.

He was now comparatively happy, and deeply attached to his squaw and their child, who, although born of a savage mother in the solitude of a forest, was remarkably intelligent, inheriting many of the superior qualities of its white ancestors. He hunted, fished, dressed, and was an Indian in everything but birth and blood, and yet he was not happy. He thought of his home and kindred, in Connecticut, and a constant yearning to see again his friends and relatives who must have long mourned him as among the dead, so disturbed his peace of mind that he determined to escape from the tribe and carry with him his family.

At last an opportunity presented itself; the Chief and his braves had gone on a fighting expedition, leaving the women and children in camp in Isaac's care. One night, guided only by the polar star, he made his way towards the north, carrying with him through the forest his squaw and child. After a long and fatiguing journey they reached the St. Lawrence River, and started in a canoe for Quebec, hoping to remain there in safety until the war was over. But fate decreed otherwise; the canoe upset, his squaw and child were drowned, he was captured while clinging to his canoe by some British soldiers, placed on board a man-of-war and carried to England, where he remained a prisoner until after peace had been declared, when he was sent to America and returned to his old home in Fairfield County, where he married Miss Mabel Beach, with whom he lived until his death, in 1842.*

AARON HUBBELL, of Bennington, Bennington County, Vermont, son of Elnathan Hubbell and Mehitabel Sherwood, was born in Stratford, Connecticut, September 14th, 1757. His wife Sarah united with the church when he did. He was twenty years old at the time of the battle of Bennington, and was a member of Captain Samuel Robinson's company of militia; he afterwards became Lieutenant of the company. After the first successful engagement of the battle—that at Baum's redoubt—he was placed as one of the guards, set over the prisoners captured in the action, as they were marched to the Bennington Meeting House. In the manuscript statement in possession of Governor Hall, Mr. Hubbell states that those prisoners numbered six hundred. He held, for years, the office of Justice of the Peace, and was greatly respected for his integrity and good judgment; was appointed Deacon of the First Congregational Church, on 15th December, 1834, when in his 77th year. He died December 26th, 1844.

ZACHARIAH HUBBELL, of Weston, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Timothy Hubbell, died in 1808.

His will was recorded May 9th, 1808, and is as follows:

MATTHEW HUBBELL, of Utica, Oneida County, New York, son of Matthew Hubbell and Abigail Hawley, was born in 1762.

"He was drafted into military service at the age of fifteen, and took part in the Battle of Bennington. Before coming to Utica, he had occupied a farm on the Phelps and Gorham purchase in Ontario County, but his wife being discontented in so savage a wilderness where bears were too plenty, and neighbors too few, he sold, in 1790, at 66 cents per acre the land he had bought at 33, and leaving Bloomfield, returned eastward. Following the natural water courses they traversed the outlets of Canandaigua and Seneca Lakes, Seneca River and Oneida River and Lake, and Wood Creek, to the Portage; thence the Mohawk to Old Fort Schuyler, which they reached in December. He bought Salyea's interest in the River Bend Farm, and subsequently obtained a deed of it from Agatha Evans and Sir Charles Gould, heirs of General Bradstreet. This purchase cost him at the rate of $2.50 per acre. Selling a part on the West, he continued to cultivate the remainder until his death, and here he reared a large family. Possessed of his full share of New England energy and enterprise, with the moral and virtuous habits inculcated there, Mr. Hubbell was a useful and respected citizen. He was a member of the first grand jury that ever met in this state west of Herkimer. He was among the earliest and most prominent of the Baptist denomination in his section, having received immersion in 1803, from the hands of Elder Covell, a Baptist elder, then on a tour of visitation and preaching throughout the state, and who has published a journal of his labors. During several years, Mr. Hubbell was a respected magistrate of the town. He died Oct. 12, 1819, in consequence of sickness contracted at Sackett's Harbor, whither he carried supplies in the war of 1812.

Of his family of twelve children, two of whom were born before their arrival at this place, and all of whom reached adult years, the late Alrick Hubbell, who died in January, 1877, was the last survivor."†

WALTER HUBBELL, of New York, N. Y., son of Gershom Hubbell and Sarah Wakeman, was born August 18th, 1767, in the house built by his father at Greenfield, Fairfield County, Connecticut, and died Sept. 9th, 1803, of yellow fever at his summer residence, on Brooklyn Heights, L. I.

† Copied from Baggs's "Pioneers of Utica," by Alrick Hubbell Man, Esq., of New York City, great grandson of Matthew Hubbell, and sent to the Author for publication.

He was buried in the graveyard of the Old Dutch Church of Brooklyn. In the year 1868, this ground having become very valuable for building purposes, was sold for that purpose and the bodies disinterred. The remains of Walter Hubbell were removed to Greenwood Cemetery, where they now rest.

Mr. Hubbell was a member of the firm of Bedient & Hubbell,* merchants, and was held in great esteem by his friends and relatives.

The following letter to his brother Abijah, was copied by the Author from an "original copy" (in the handwriting of Abijah Hubbell), now in the Author's possession:

"BROOKLYN, August 12th, 1803.

MY DEAR BROTHER: Yesterday I had the pleasure of hearing from you and your Dear Family, and from Sister Sally, by our neighbor Mr. Morehouse, on his way to Wilton. I was happy to hear of your healths. You have no doubt heard ere this that our City is again visited with the Yellow Fever. True, too true. "Man goeth to his long home, and the Mourners go about the streets." The Destroying Angel has begun his work. We have only to kiss the rod, and know in whose hand it is, and by whose it is guided; we are in the hands of a Merciful God—our Citizens are fleeing in every direction—Crowding into houses three and four Families together. Don't know what price I could get for my House, if I would let it for three months. I and my Family through the goodness of God are in tolerable health, but our friend Bedient has the fever near home, to say in his own family his Nephew, Asa Bedient, about 19 years of age, now lays very bad with it; do not expect he will live long without a great change. Kimberly has had a severe attack but is on the mend. We shut our store 3 days ago. Do not mean to go over any more, but are far from thinking we are clear of it. Oh, how gloomy all things look. Oh, my Brother, since writing the above, Asa has Died the most shocking of Deaths with the Yellow Fever.

Mr. B. and Family have had a most distressing turn. "The Lord's voice crieth to the City. Micah, 6th and 9th." Oh, that I might hear his voice and see the hand that hath appointed the rod. We are poor, Dying Mortals hasting away to the Grave, but when we die of such a horrid complaint that the Coffin must be made while we are living and the grave opened, it makes all things appear still more gloomy, yet in reality its no worse, and nothing can make it better I am sure, but faith in the blood of Christ Jesus can make a Dying Bed soft as Downey Pillows are.

Oh Lord, to whom else shall I go; thou hast the words of Eternal life; Give me, oh God, to believe, and I shall believe; make me willing, and I shall be willing; work in me to will and to do; remove far from me all unbelief, all doubts and all fears. Oh, my Brother, what a sweet Reflection to me that you have put your trust in God. Sometimes I think I have Sinned away the Day of Grace. Then again I think I have lively exercises of Faith yet. I am sure no man can be regenerated, and not know. Sometimes I am ready to say there is no good laid up for me in the mansions of bliss. Then again I think, now is the accepted time and now is the Day of Salvation. Oh, my Brother, if ever I see the happy Moment when I can say to you, I am his, and he is mine. Doubting, fearing souls often faint. I will lift up my head in the strength of his Righteousness—without which I shall Justly go down to Everlasting punishment. Oh what Different ideas you have of works to what you once had; once you thought every prayer you made you were better; that every good Act you did if of ever so trifling a nature you were on the road to Heaven. But poor soul how must you have felt when you were shown it was all nothing, and worse than nothing. Did you not think that going to Meeting twice of a Sunday, reading a chapter, and praying in the Family, and paying the Minister's tax, was all that was required of a Connecticut Christian. I must confess to you that 18 years ago I thought so, but as long ago as the year 1788 I was taught by the Blessed spirit of the most high that works would not do. Oh, how long has the spirit strove with you, you will readily say yes, my Brother, and God has declared his spirit shall not always strive with man. I fear I have grieved the spirit too long. Lord have Mercy. Oh, Mercy, are not thy Mercies large and free. May not a sinner trust in thee. Oh give me to lay at the foot of thy Cross. Dear Jesus, never, never was any one turned away. Come what may, come what will, I am now willing to trust my Everlasting all on his Merits, on his worthiness. Oh, Brother, pray for me, a poor, unworthy wretch, a sinner of the Blackest kind. Oh, I fear I have Sinned against light and knowledge. But my grace is sufficient, saith my Blessed Redeemer. Go on, go on from strength to strength; you shall find strength. You may be weary, but you shall not faint. Blessed be God in the highest. Blessed be God, Brother, all these exercises came upon me in the light of prosperity, and not in an hour of affliction. My best love to Sister Sally, and your Dear Wife and Children. I am, as ever, your Brother,

WALTER HUBBELL."

"The above is a true Copy of the last Letter I ever received from my Beloved Brother, Walter Hubbell, and although it is an afflicting one, yet it has given me great satisfaction to think that God in infinite Mercy, when he was about to take him from this to the World of Spirits, should again visit him with his holy Spirit and show him what he had Done for him 14 or 15 years ago and make him willing in the Day of his power to lay at the foot of the Cross of Christ, and there plead for mercy. When I compare this letter with his letters of 1788, and then the hope maintained upon his Death Bed makes me rejoice to think he is now likely to be one of the happy number that sing praises to God.

ABIJAH HUBBELL."*

EZEKIEL HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of John Hubbell and Eleanor Burr, was born in Greenfield, Fairfield County, Colony of Connecticut, April 5th, 1768.

He enjoyed all the advantages of an early education, and at the age of fourteen, was employed as clerk on board of vessels belonging to Richard and Amos Hubbell, well-known merchants trading between Newfield (Bridgeport) and the West Indies.

He soon evinced great confidence in himself, and not only took charge of the cargo and business of the concerned, but also command of the vessel as a Merchant Navigator, called in those days Captain and Supercargo, both positions being filled by the same person.

In 1797, owing to his industry and perseverance, he became managing owner of two fine vessels, the Brig Caroline and the Ship Sally and Betsey, and was also interested in other vessels of smaller capacity.

His ambition seeking a wider sphere of action, he left Newfield and became interested in the armed Ship Citizen, of New York City, of which he at once took command as Captain and Supercargo. She mounted sixteen guns, and was manned with a crew of fifty men. In her he made several voyages to Havana.

The Commercial Advertiser, New York, July 15th, 1798, says :

"Ship Citizen, Hubbell, Master, off Newfield Thursday last, via Halifax, where she had been taken by an English cruiser, and after a close examination of the crew and papers, was released."

And in the same paper of December 6th, 1798, is the following :

"This day came up the armed Ship Citizen, Captain E. Hubbell, sixteen guns, nineteen days from Havana. Came out with eighteen vessels under convoy, and parted with them on the coast. Left a French privateer lying off Havana, but she did not seem inclined to come out. Flour, $6½; sugars, 6s. to 7s. cwt. Cotton goods prohibited."

Early in 1799 he ventured in the same ship (Citizen) to Vera Cruz, in the Gulf of Mexico, and endeavored to open a trade and dispose of the investment he had on board, adapted to the wants of the inhabitants of the City of Mexico. Disappointed in getting permission to land his goods, and utterly failing in his object, he proceeded to Honduras, thence to Havana and New York.

The New York Commercial Advertiser, August 6th, 1799, says :

"Arrived, Ship Citizen, Hubbell. Vera Cruz via Honduras and Havana."

Honduras was at this time an open port, for the export of mahogany and logwood only.

The information Captain Hubbell received at Vera Cruz of the vast wealth of the Spaniards in their South American States on the Pacific coast, and the fabulous reports of the demand for certain descriptions of goods, enabled him, on his return home, to plan an important and enterprising venture to those countries. As a man of great prudence and indomitable energy, he at once enlisted the confidence of his friends. He purchased the Ship Enterprise of 250 tons register, and interested himself, in common with Messrs. Isaac Moses & Son, and Hoyt & Tom, each owning one-third of the ship and cargo. After taking on board an investment of costly goods of little bulk, adapted to the wants of the Spaniards in Chili and Peru, and in addition, to guard against possible failure and disappointment, as at Vera Cruz, he shipped a quantity of goods suited for traffic with the Indians on the Northwest Coast of America, and sailed from New York in October, 1799, with intelligent officers and a reliable crew, numbering, all told, thirty men and boys. Clearing his ship for the Northwest Coast of America, without naming any particular port of destination, little could be known of his carefully marked-out voyage. At that early period of our maritime commerce, ships were not coppered, and as a rule their outfit at best was exceedingly limited. Making slow progress in crossing the equator and coming into the high southern latitudes with lengthening days, they decided to seek a harbor on the East coast of Patagonia. In latitude about 45° south they discovered a safe inlet, where they found shelter. The great rise and fall of the tide of 20 to 30 feet enabled them to careen the vessel on the beach and clean her bottom of barnacles and sea-grass. The ship now in good condition, they took their departure from these inhospitable shores, and proceeded on their voyage. Passing Cape Horn early in February, after a stormy and tempestuous time in weathering it, they were favored in the Pacific Ocean with fine southerly breezes, which carried them along the coast of Patagonia and Southern Chili, and about the first of March, 1800, they anchored in the harbor of Valparaiso.

As many of the crew were suffering with scurvy for the want of vegetables, of which they had been without for many months, the Governor granted permission for the ship to remain in port for a reasonable length of time. The rigid and restricted relations Spain then held with the world prevented any vessels but those bearing the Spanish flag from entering her ports for purposes of trade. Consequently the Enterprise was closely watched and guarded by Revenue Officers of the Crown. During this interval, Captain Hubbell obtained a passport to visit the capital, Santiago de Chili, ninety miles in the interior, and was the first citizen of the United States ever allowed to visit that city. He was especially noticed by the Viceroy, General O'Higgins, upon whom he called, and petitioned to land and sell his cargo, under any restrictions His Excellency might see fit to enjoin upon him. But in vain; permission was refused. The beautiful city was then shown to him, attended by government officers. After viewing the principal buildings, and passing through the Mint, he left the capital and returned to Valparaiso. At this, the chief seaport of Chili, he received particular attention from the Governor, was entertained by him, and through him found no vessels could be expected or looked for from Spain for many months. He still cherished a hope, however, of arranging in some way to dispose of a part of his investments. Lingered at Valparaiso for ten days, he finally succeeded in making a conditional sale for the greater portion of his cargo to the Governor, deliverable at Concepcion, a bay about three hundred miles south of Valparaiso. After arranging the terms and conditions of the sale and delivery of the goods, an agent was placed on board to examine the cargo at sea. The ship sailed, the goods were examined, and, following instructions, they approached Concepcion Bay, where a payment of 150,000 Spanish dollars, on board, was to have been made in advance of the delivery of the goods.

The morning was fair, the scenery magnificent; overtopped by the snow-capped Cordilleras in the distance, a beautiful bay and harbor could be seen as the ship glided onward to her appointed haven. She soon came to anchor. A boat was manned, and under charge of the second officer, with the Governor's Agent as passenger, was headed for the shore. The Agent landed and proceeded towards a thicket, a short distance off, but instead of finding his friends to answer his countersign or signals, he was surprised by a squad of cavalry in ambush. At once, seeing his defeat, he sprang for his life towards the boat. The crew had taken the alarm and jumped into the boat, the Spaniard barely escaping from the coils of a lasso as they pushed off. The cavalry then discharged their carbines, wounding the second officer in the arm. Fortunately, the boat reached the ship without any other casualty. The affray and confusion among the boat's crew on the beach, which was distinctly seen by Captain Hubbell from the deck of the ship, at once satisfied him that not only had the Governor's plans failed, but also all hope of any possible chance of realizing his investments on the coast of Chili was at an end. Some years following this event it was ascertained that the Governor's friends betrayed him, and the silver coin en route to Concepcion Bay was seized by the Viceroy and confiscated. The next object was to capture the Spaniard, in which they were disappointed.

Defeated in this attempt to dispose of the cargo, and knowing there was a Spanish Frigate on the coast of Chili, and that the laws of Spain did not allow a foreign flag within fifteen miles of their South American States in the Pacific, Captain Hubbell at once shaped a course northerly, toward the Northwest coast of America. Coming up with the West coast of New Spain, he stood into the harbor of San Blas, with the hope of landing the Spanish Agent. Fired upon from the forts at a long distance, he did not venture to anchor, but proceeded northerly again to Nootka Sound. At this place, and the adjacent coasts, he traded such suitable goods as he had with the Indians for their valuable furs, and proceeded to China (calling at the Sandwich Islands and the Russian settlements near Kamtschatka), where he sold them at a great price, and realized an amount sufficient to purchase the large portion of a cargo of cheap Bohea tea and other goods. Sailing in January, he arrived off Bridgeport, in Long Island Sound, June 27, 1802, 140 days' passage from Canton, on his way to New York City. Being the first circumnavigator of the globe from that port (New York*), his arrival caused much excitement. Many of his friends had mourned him as lost, for he had not been heard from during his absence of nearly three years.

* The little ship-rigged vessel Betsy, of 90 tons, Edmund Fanning, Captain, sailed from New York, June 13, 1797, on a sealing voyage to the South Pacific Ocean. She collected a cargo of seal skins, proceeded to Canton and loaded with teas for New York, where she arrived April 26, 1799, being the first vessel from the port of New York to carry the American flag around the world.—See Rear Admiral George H. Preble's "Origin and Progress of the Flag of the U. S.," p. 316.

His arrival was officially announced as follows :

[From our BRIDGEPORT CORRESPONDENT.]

" On Friday last, arrived off this port, on her way to New York, Ship Enterprise, Ezekiel Hubbell, of this place, Master, in 140 days from Canton. Captain Hubbell has performed a circuitous and lengthy voyage of nearly three years since he left New York, and we expect has met with success proportionate to the greatness of his undertaking. He has lost his second mate and two others of his crew. Captain Hubbell's route has been around Cape Horn, up the Pacific Ocean, upon the Northwest Coast, and thence to China, in the course of which he has experienced many scenes of danger and anxiety, and had some profitable traffic. One of the natives of the Sandwich Islands (where Cook was killed) he brought home with him, a likely and vigorous lad of about twelve years of age, of an olive complexion, black straight hair, etc., who understands much, and begins to speak our language.

We learn from Capt. Hubbell that the natives of these islands are making great improvements from the state they were in in Captain Cook's time, by the help of some white mechanics settled there. They have several deck vessels, etc. Also, we learn that the native who killed Captain Cook was yet living, and was pointed out to Captain Hubbell. We hope yet to be favored with some interesting details from Captain Hubbell's log-book.—New York Commercial Advertiser, June 30, 1802.

NEW YORK, June 30, 1802.

Arrived, Ship Enterprise, Hubbell. Canton, 140 days, via Isle of France, with Teas, Silks, Nankeens, and Chinaware, to Isaac Moses & Son, Hoyt & Tom, and Ezekiel Hubbell, Master."

This long voyage, discouraging in its early stages, finally terminated in a profitable result. The goods, mainly silks and chinaware, intended for Chili, were mostly returned in the ship. Two ships from Boston followed the Enterprise, and ultimately succeeded in landing their cargoes.

In the spring of 1803 Captain Hubbell purchased an interest in the Catharine Ray, a fine vessel of about 200 tons, and took command of her as Captain and Supercargo, on a voyage to China. With a view to an important investment in silks, she was provided with ample means for such an adventure, and performed her voyage in the regular course, arriving at New York on her return home in the spring of 1804.

Under a similar arrangement with the same owners he made a second voyage to China, and arrived on his return home in the spring of 1805, when the vessel was sold.

In May, 1805, he resumed the command of his old Ship Citizen, under the auspices of Messrs. Hoyt & Tom, and fitted her for a voyage to China. Speculation running high in silks, he declined any interest in the adventure beyond his commissions. She had on board $150,000 in Spanish coin, made her voyage in due time and returned to New York, where she arrived in May, 1806.

As there was nothing special in the trips of the Catharine Ray and Citizen, we have not given any detailed account of their voyages.

The Ship Augustus, owned in equal shares by Isaac Moses & Son, Hoyt & Tom, and Ezekiel Hubbell, was placed under the command of Captain Hubbell aforesaid to proceed to China via Isle of France. Throughout the voyage the employment and business of the ship was to be left exclusively to his care and judgment. She took on board a small amount of treasure (about 25,000 Spanish dollars), and cleared for China in June, 1807. He called at the Isle of France and invested his funds in India prize cotton,—England and France being then at war,—and continued thence on his voyage to China, arriving at Canton in October, 1807. At Canton in those days there were no commission-houses. It was customary to take a furnished factory,* and the captain or supercargo transacted the business of the ship, and purchased the return cargo of tea, silks, etc. These purchases were all made through the wealthy Hong merchants, of whom there were twelve, and through whom all foreign trade was conducted, including that of the British East India Company.

In the early experience of American traders with China, vessels were furnished, as a rule, with ample means to load a return cargo.† The Augustus was a good-sized ship, but the funds realized from the sale of the cotton did not exceed $30,000, which was a small sum towards purchasing a full cargo of tea. Freight could not be had except at exceedingly low figures, and as prospects were not encouraging at the time for the United States, he became disheartened, because he saw no prospects of getting away from China in the regular season, so that he could avail himself of the northeast monsoon to take his ship down the China Sea. While in this perplexing situation he unexpectedly enlisted the sympathy of Houqua, the senior Hong merchant. Houqua proposed to Captain Hubbell to furnish and sell to him a cargo of tea on twelve months' credit, on condition that he should take tea of such descriptions as he (Houqua) should advise, and follow his suggestions if they were worthy of consideration, Houqua to take the sea risk, which was to be included in the price of the tea, the payment for the cargo to be remitted in due course of time, after realization from sales in Europe. In the meanwhile Captain Hubbell was to give his promissory note at twelve months' date with interest at twelve per cent. per annum for the cost of the cargo. Captain Hubbell expressed great surprise and pleasure at the unbounded confidence manifested on the part of Houqua, who, however, had made his acquaintance on former voyages to China, and in whom he (Houqua) had taken a great personal interest. Houqua's proposition was accepted, also his suggestion that the destination of the ship should be Amsterdam, as he believed in a good result from a shipment of tea adapted to the wants peculiar to Holland. The ship at once loaded and made ready for sea. On making up the invoices it was found that after crediting the outward funds of the ship the balance due Houqua would be $103,000, for which sum Captain Hubbell gave his individual note as follows :

* A furnished factory was a large private residence with suitable arrangements for living and conducting trade, in which captains and supercargoes, with a retinue of servants, transacted their business.

† It had been also Captain Hubbell's experience; but on this occasion no reason is given for his limited supply of funds. His owners were wealthy.

"CANTON, CHINA, January 15th, 1808.

Twelve months after date, for value received, I promise to pay to the order of Houqua, Hong merchant, one hundred and three thousand dollars for cargo of tea per Ship Augustus, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum. (Signed) EZEKIEL HUBBELL."

He then addressed his associates in New York, enclosing copies of invoices and advising in detail the responsibility he had taken, naming a third party to whom he required they should on receipt of his letters at once approve of his transaction to the extent of their one-third interest each in the ship, or otherwise simply receive their portion of freight on the cargo and profit on the tea, from the proceeds of the cotton, when the accounts were finally made up.

Taking leave of his friend Houqua, he sailed from Canton in January, 1808, bound for Amsterdam, and arrived at Plymouth, in the English Channel, on July 3d, the same year. Here the startling news of the blockade of the ports of Holland, by the naval forces of Great Britain, awaited him, and hearing it for the first time, his surprise can well be imagined. Recovering quickly from the shock produced by such unexpected intelligence, he immediately took a post chaise for London, to confer with the eminent house of Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co.

Tea under the American flag was prohibited in England. The China trade was a monopoly of the British East India Company, who had the exclusive right of importing tea. The extreme arbitrary regulations of the Company opposed the landing of the cargo in bond until peace in Europe might release it. The non-intercourse act in America could not induce him to cross the Atlantic to New York. To remain at anchor, waiting the end of an uncertain war, would be fatal, for the ship was not coppered, and, in addition to a certain deterioration to the tea, she would certainly be destroyed by worms. Finally, after due consideration of the great risks to be incurred, he laid his plan before his London friends, to place his ship and cargo in Amsterdam. They seemed to think well of his proposed enterprise, although not disposed to openly advise it. Still, they were much pleased at the cool decision of Captain Hubbell, for he had decided upon a course of action with a firm determination to carry it out at all hazards.

With efficient officers and a reliable crew he left Plymouth and proceeded towards the Bay of Biscay. In this short cruise a new log-book and journals were written up, headed direct from "Canton to Amsterdam." As soon as they were completed, he steered away for the English Channel, and without calling, as customary in those days, at an English port for news, he continued steadily on to the North Sea, until within sight of the British naval forces blockading Holland.

His journal showed "160 days' passage from Canton, ship leaking badly, and short of provisions; had spoken nothing, nor called at any port." A boat, with an officer from the Admiral's ship, soon boarded the Augustus. After endorsing on the ship's Register notice that the ports of Holland were under blockade by H. B. M. naval forces, the officer requested Captain Hubbell "to remain under easy sail during the night." To this request he replied, "that the crew were almost worn out with fatigue at the pumps to keep the ship free," and adding that they were out of water and provisions, he asked to be supplied that afternoon with a small quantity of each. The officer said in reply that "the Squadron was short of everything, and their men were also upon an allowance of water, but he would report to the Admiral, and see what could be done on the morrow." To this Captain Hubbell replied, "that if they did not relieve his crew immediately, or to some extent, he should beach his ship before morning, because his men were becoming ungovernable, and would not hesitate to run her ashore." The boarding officer laughed, and taking his leave merely said in reply, "we will look after you, Captain, during the night, and see you again to-morrow." The morning opened upon a new scene. The sun rose brightly, and found the good Ship Augustus embedded in the sandy beach, near the entrance of the main channel to Amsterdam, fully protected by the fortifications, while in the distant offing the British fleet was seen, powerless to reach her, she being quite out of danger of any possible harm from the guns of the blockading forces.

The weather was fine, and the sea smooth, so the crew was able to keep the ship clear of water by constantly working at the pumps, and not more than the ground tier of tea was damaged by water.

Seeing the safe position of his ship, Captain Hubbell hastened to Amsterdam to confer with the opulent house of Messrs. Daniel Cromelin & Sons, to whom he had letters from Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co., of London. Through the influence of this prominent house, permission was obtained from Louis Bonaparte, then King of Holland, to land the cargo and place it in the King's warehouses, at Amsterdam. The allied forces were then marching towards Holland, which caused all trade to cease for the time, rendering tea scarce, and prices consequently high.

The main object now accomplished, the cargo was soon discharged and stored in Amsterdam. Captain Hubbell left his ship and her cargo in charge of his friends, and hastened back to London by a circuitous route, whence he directed his business in Holland by correspondence, in which he was assisted by his friends in London.

The ship was eventually floated off the beach, repaired, and put in charge of the first officer. Some months afterwards permission was granted by the British Admiral for her to pass out unmolested. She returned to New York, where she arrived in December, 1808.

Meanwhile, Captain Hubbell received letters from his associates in New York, in reply to his letters from Canton. The one party confirmed the transaction with Houqua, in China, and acknowledged their one-third interest. The other party declined, on the ground that the risk assumed by Captain Hubbell at Canton was unjustifiable, and refused under any and all circumstances to acknowledge any interest whatever, beyond the small investment of $25,000 originally shipped on joint account, thus leaving Captain Hubbell with a responsibility of two-thirds of the adventure to his own private account.

After considerable delay the cargo was sold, and at the end of six months accounts were made up, which, with remittances to Captain Hubbell, were received in London under protest. The enormous charges debited in the shape of heavy payments to various parties, said to be connected with the government, led to great dissatisfaction and suspicion as to the honesty of the Agents at Amsterdam. Still, the result was a large profit, leaving Captain Hubbell, for those days, not only independent, but rich. Returning to New York with the proceeds of the voyage, he remitted to Houqua, in Spanish dollars (including interest), $119,000.00, made up in China on receipt of the funds. The note was returned to Captain Hubbell, indorsed as follows :

“ CANTON, October 5th, 1809.

Received payment in full, with interest, as adjusted, $119,000.00.

(Signed) HOUQUA.”

Underneath is written :

“ Paid, thank God ! E. H.”

Owing to the difficulties and detention Captain Hubbell met with, a rebatement of interest was made by Houqua.

It is a remarkable and noticeable fact that Captain Hubbell, on his return to New York, found his old friends, Hoyt & Tom, who declined to acknowledge their one-third interest in the transaction at Canton, embarrassed in the seizure of the Corvette Ship, American Eagle, by the Government, under suspicion that she was fitted out for the party then claiming to be in power at San Domingo. At this crisis he was enabled to come to their relief with substantial aid, which saved them from a temporary difficulty.

From 1809 until the war of 1812 with England, he resided at his country home, in Bridgeport, Connecticut, where he occupied his time in gratifying his tastes, and occasionally assisting his friends in their various pursuits in life, and continued to do so until 1813, in which year he entered into an extensive speculation, making large purchases of woodlands near West Point, on the Hudson River, known as the Highlands.

The object was to furnish ship timber, in anticipation of the requirements of the Government at the Navy Yard in New York City. Large quantities of timber were felled and sent forward, but, unfortunately, proved unsuitable. He was not discouraged, however, hoping that an emergency might arise to compel the Government to use it, as it was then difficult to obtain suitable building material, except at an enormous price and in small supply, because the ports of the United States were continually under blockade by the English naval forces, and inland transportation was almost impracticable.

After investing considerable sums of money, however, from which little could be realized, the speculation was abandoned, entailing, for those days, a heavy loss.

At the close of the war, in February, 1815, he found himself obliged to sustain his friends, Smith & Hubbell, of New York, who were engaged in a shipping and mercantile business, mainly with Calcutta. This, in addition to his timber enterprises, and some losses on shipments to Spain, in 1809, seized by Napoleon I, under the Berlin and Milan decrees of 1806, weakened his resources to such a degree as to compel him again to think of foreign adventures.

In 1816 he visited Holland in hope of realizing something further from the proceeds of the cargo of tea, per Ship Augustus, sold at Amsterdam, as hereinbefore referred to. Soon discovering that he looked in vain for reclamations from his old correspondents, without uncertain and expensive litigation, he abandoned the intention and returned to the United States.

In 1817, after nine years spent mostly in retirement, he conceived and planned a voyage to the Eastern World. About this time Spain, passing the zenith of her glory, was rapidly losing control over her vast and wealthy South American States, and was finally obliged to open her possessions in Asiatic Seas to foreign trade. Already cut off as she was in her exclusive commercial career between the Philippine Islands and her possessions on the west coast of America, by the breaking up of the old and wealthy Philippine Trading Company, at one time wielding a capital of $12,000,000, she declared Manilla, the only port of entry in the Philippines, open and free to foreign commerce of all nations.

Anticipating such an event, he made up an adventure in the interest of his friends, Hoyt & Tom and others; and after rebuilding his old ship, Citizen, he once more took command of her as Captain and Supercargo, and with ample means in Spanish dollars sailed for Manilla. The voyage was not publicly known until many months after his departure from New York. At Manilla he met with the Ship Ladoga, of Boston. These two ships were the first American vessels that loaded at that port on the opening of trade to foreign countries. Nominally, the port of Manilla was open to the English in 1809, with such restrictions, however, that, meanwhile, no trade of any note could be carried on, and no resident Consul was recognized.

The Citizen was loaded chiefly with sugars and indigo at a low cost. Having surplus funds, he chartered and also loaded a French ship with similar goods and sent her to Hamburg. Meanwhile he proceeded in his own ship to New York, where he arrived in May, 1818. Although he had invested 100,000 Spanish dollars in loading the Citizen and the French ship for Hamburg, the result of both voyages was only a moderate return for the risk involved, owing to the demoralized state of trade throughout Europe and the United States.

Retaining his interest in the Citizen, she was dispatched again to Manilla in the spring of 1819, under the command of Captain Loring, with Captain Hubbell's son, George William, then twenty-three years of age, on board as Supercargo in charge of the business of the ship. She loaded at Manilla for Hamburg, where she arrived in May, 1820. His son, after dispatching the ship from Hamburg back to Manilla, in charge of Captain Loring, as Master and Supercargo, returned to New York, where he arrived in February, 1821.

Captain Hubbell continued to reside at his Connecticut home from the spring of 1818 until 1821, when he embarked in the Ship Ajax, a new vessel in which he was interested, and the building of which he superintended. His two sons, George William and Henry Wilson, the former twenty-five and the latter sixteen years of age, were passengers on this voyage, and had in view the establishing of a mercantile house in Manilla.* The Ajax sailed from New York, April 21, 1821, and arrived at Manilla the following August, after 120 days' passage. She loaded and returned to New York, where she arrived in May, 1822. He left his two sons at Manilla permanently settled for a general business, the younger in the capacity of clerk. During the year they prepared a cargo for the Ajax against her return as a regular trader in the Monsoon season. Captain Hubbell made four voyages in the Ajax, taking out valuable investments of English and French manufactures adapted to the wants of those people. The Ajax was finally sold, and within four months afterwards, in August, 1825, foundered in crossing the Atlantic on a voyage to England.

In June, 1825, he took command of the Ship Sabina, and proceeded to Manilla, where she loaded and arrived home April 22, 1826, his son, Henry Wilson, returning with him, after an absence of five years.

* See Biographical Sketches of George William and Henry Wilson Hubbell, pp. 126 to 147, inclusive.

On December 26th, 1826, he sailed on a voyage in the Ship Sabina to Rio Janeiro and Valparaiso (where he landed under very different circumstances from those encountered on his former visit to Chili in the year 1800), thence to Lima and Payta in Peru; Guayaquil in Ecuador; thence to the Sandwich Islands (which he also visited in 1801), and thence to Manilla. At the latter place he loaded his ship from proceeds of treasure which was taken over in the ship from Lima; together with returns from cocoa shipped at Guayaquil, and sandalwood from the Sandwich Islands. After an absence of fifteen months and eighteen days, he arrived at New York, April 14th, 1828, in a passage of one hundred and eighteen days from Manilla.* His son, Henry Wilson, in the capacity of Supercargo, was with him throughout the voyage.

He now withdrew from his nautical profession and mercantile adventures, and passed the remainder of his days at his pleasant home in Connecticut, the main building of which he erected in 1797. During the last five years of his life, as one of the incorporators of the Connecticut Bank at Bridgeport, he found employment in organizing and looking after the interests of the bank, which was successful under his administration as president. The immediate cause of his death was a severe cold which he took in the Highlands, while looking after the remnants of his old timber estates. He was ill but a few days, and died April 1st, 1834.

The subject of our sketch was possessed of noble impulses. He was benevolent and kind to all under his command. In his private relations he was courteous and genial. Unselfish in prosperity, he was unchanged in adversity. A large heart endeared him to many friends, and his death was lamented by all who knew him. He was a member of the First Congregational Church in Bridgeport, Connecticut, to which he was strongly attached.

The following inscription is from a tablet erected by his son, Henry Wilson Hubbell, to his memory in the church of which he was a member. His remains repose in the Bridgeport Cemetery.

"OBITUARY.

Died January 25th, 1842, at the residence of his son-in-law, in Bloomfield, Knox County, Ohio, Gideon S. Hubbell, in the 74th year of his age. He was a man of blameless character; long known as a person of temperate and industrious habits; economical in his life, and strictly pious in his walk and conversation. For more than twenty years he was an exemplary member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Having stored his mind in early life with useful knowledge, he was well prepared to beguile the passing hour by the narration of the events of other years, an employment in which he took great delight.

His death was as triumphant as his life had been useful. He was taken on Monday with an obstinate constipation, attended with incessant pain for about four hours, which he bore with unusual fortitude and Christian patience. His pain then measurably subsided, and left him with the use of all the faculties of his mind. From this time till his death he spoke with great calmness about his departure. When his son, Zalmon Hubbell, who had come from the State of New York, asked him, "If he loved Jesus," he exclaimed, "O, yes! he is altogether lovely." Shortly afterwards he closed his eyes in death without a struggle, only surviving the attack about twenty-three hours.

Bloomfield, O., February 17, 1842."

SULLIVAN DAVIS HUBBELL, of Hector, Schuyler County, New York, son of John Hubbell and Phebe Davis, was born May 3, 1769, in New York State.

Having been trained to rely solely on himself in early life, he ever manifested those strong traits of self-reliance and industry that had been instilled into his youthful training, and which nerved him with strength to surmount all obstacles.

In 1806 he shouldered his well-filled travelling bag, and started for what was then called the "Lake Country," making the journey on foot, to the head of Cayuga Lake, where the village of Ithaca, Tompkins County, N. Y., now stands. Here he made the acquaintance of a man who had unimproved land to sell, and bought one hundred acres, where Hector, Schuyler County, N. Y., now is, for three hundred dollars, after which he returned to Providence, Saratoga County, N. Y., for his family, and started in August, 1807, with his wife and eight children, and all his household goods, in two wagons, each drawn by a yoke of oxen. They drove two cows before them, from which to obtain milk, camped where night overtook them, and arrived at what is now Ithaca, in about four weeks; from there he and his family had to travel fifteen miles in order to reach their new home, accomplishing the distance in two days.

On arriving at their destination, they were sheltered by the nearest neighbor until Mr. Hubbell built a log cabin, into which he moved his family two weeks after their arrival.

Exchanging one yoke of oxen and a wagon for meat and grain for the family, he bent the combined forces of an iron will and a physical constitution which seemed never to tire, to carving out a home in the forest which surrounded him on every side; and when the first year was drawing to a close, he had cleared and fenced twenty acres and sown it with wheat.

As the country was being rapidly settled, he engaged in speculating in wild lands, buying largely from the original owners, or those who had drawn land from the Government for services rendered in the Revolution. He probably owned during his life more acres of land in the town of Hector than any other man who ever lived there,

He was a man of keen perceptions and almost unfailing judgment; and until the infirmities of age compelled him to retire, was one of the most prominent men of the county in which he lived.

In September, 1812, he enlisted in the service of the United States, and marched to the Canadian frontier, where his business qualifications soon attracted the attention of the Commanding General, and he was at once commissioned to purchase supplies for the army, and continued to act in that capacity until his return home in 1814.

He was above the average height and very muscular, had a powerful constitution, and would labor unceasingly from daylight until dark, apparently without fatigue.

He was charitable to a fault, freely gave of his abundance to all who sought relief at his hands, and was never known to turn an applicant for food or work from his door.

He was elected to the various offices in the gift of the people of the town in which he resided, and all trusts committed to him were discharged to the entire satisfaction of his constituents and his own honor; and his descendants look upon his public and private life as one they may well strive to emulate.

He died August 28, 1843; and his memory is cherished by all who knew him as an honest, charitable, religious man, and one of the noblest men that ever lived within the boundaries of Tompkins or Schuyler counties.

The fine homestead, consisting of four hundred acres, which he carved out of the dense forest, has, since his death, been owned by his descendants, and at present (1881) fifty acres (where the buildings and orchard were), are owned by his grand-daughter, Maxamilla Reynolds, the balance by her brother, Oliver C. Hubbell, and by the family of Charles W. Rathbun, a nephew.

SILAS HUBBELL, of Montgomery, Hampden County, Massachusetts, son of Captain Silas Hubbell and Elizabeth Edmond, was born in Newtown, Fairfield County, Connecticut, February 22, 1772.

He spent the first thirty years of his life in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New York, engaged in farming, coopering, and in the lumber business, taking rafts of timber down the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers.

The remaining fifty-four years of his life were spent practising medicine, and collecting what he could from the rich, so that he might spend his time and money freely among the poor, afflicted, and distressed.

He was a very active, energetic man, and departed from this life in New Haven, Connecticut, May 31st, 1856, passing calmly and serenely to his reward.

JONATHAN HUBBELL, of Nankin, Wayne County, Michigan, son of John Hubbell and Eleanor Burr, was born in Greenfield, Fairfield County, Connecticut, May 15th, 1772.

While very young he was apprenticed to a boot and shoe manufacturer, and acquired a good practical education by attending evening schools during his apprenticeship. After serving the usual time he engaged in the business which was connected with a tanning establishment.

While residing in Bethlehem, Connecticut, in 1808, he became a member of the Masonic fraternity (Solomon's Chapter), and in 1820 removed, with his family, to Washington (village of Little Rest), Dutchess County, New York. In 1822 he moved to Monroe County, New York (town of Perrington), making part of the journey on the Erie Canal. Here he engaged in farming until 1834, when he emigrated to Nankin, Wayne County, Michigan, where he died in August, 1852.

JAMES HUBBELL, of Bennington, Bennington County, Vermont. Son of Elnathan Hubbell and Isabella Breakenridge, was born in Bennington, October 17th, 1775.

He was admitted to the Bar in December, 1806.

Resided in New York City for many years, where he held the office of Magistrate under De Witt Clinton, which gave him much active and responsible employment. He afterwards returned to Bennington, and died there April 24th, 1840.

ISAAC HUBBELL, of Huntington, "Upper White Hills," Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of John Hubbell and Sarah Curtis, was born in Huntington, Connecticut, February 5th, 1782.

He was a planter, and died in his native town, February 2d, 1835, regretted by a large circle of friends and relations.

WILSON HUBBELL, of Newfield, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Amos Hubbell and Catharine Wilson, was born in what is now Bridgeport, Connecticut, April 7th, 1773.

Captain Hubbell followed his father's calling; made many successful voyages to the West Indies, and was the owner or part owner of several vessels.

He was married in 1797 to Pamela, daughter of John Hubbell, of Greenfield, Connecticut.

In 1799, while France and the United States were at war, Captain Hubbell and his sloop Delight were captured by a French Privateer, while on a voyage from Newfield to Havana, Cuba, via New Providence.

The Captain of the privateer placed his first mate in command of the Delight after the capture, with orders to carry her and her crew to France, placing on board two French seamen, and taking two of Captain Hubbell's men with him as prisoners, he returned to his vessel, and was soon lost to view in the distance.

On the afternoon of the third day after the capture, the French mate ordered William Cable, Captain Hubbell's first mate, to the helm, and leaving Captain Hubbell guarded by the two French seamen, entered the cabin and taking off his sword and pistols went to sleep.

Although Captain Hubbell was closely watched by his guards, he managed to elude their vigilance and enter the cabin where the French mate was sleeping. After securing his hands with handcuffs, which he always kept in a private drawer, he took possession of his sword and pistols, and also took from the mate's person the gold, and his own watch and chain of which he had been robbed; and after securely fastening the cabin door, left him still asleep.

By his superior strength and agility he overpowered the two French seamen, who in the meanwhile had been in search of him, and with the assistance of William Cable, who had been at the helm, bound them.

Those who had been his guards were now his prisoners. After bidding William Cable release Josiah Burr, the cook, who had been imprisoned in the hold of the sloop, he armed each with the knives and pistols taken from the two French seamen, being himself armed with the sword and pistols he had taken from the sleeping mate; and feeling that he was again Captain of the Delight, turned her prow towards home.

Towards sundown Captain Hubbell released the French mate from the cabin, and as he promised not to give them any trouble, also relieved him of the handcuffs.

Being pleased with his affable manners, he invited him to supper, an invitation accepted with many expressions of gratitude.

After supper Captain Hubbell, while walking the deck engaged in conversation with the Frenchman, took out his segar case and offered his prisoner a segar, which was accepted. After some further conversation the Captain seated himself on the leeward quarter rail, in the meanwhile smoking, talking, and admiring the beauties of moonlight on the ocean. The French mate, who stood beside him, accidentally dropped his segar, stooped and picked it up, and after some further conversation, dropped it again, this time directly between Captain Hubbell's feet. Stooping, as if to pick it up, he caught Captain Hubbell by the ankles, and before he could resist threw him overboard.

The sea at the time was calm, and as the Captain was an excellent swimmer, he swam for some distance after his ship, begging the obdurate Frenchman to spare his life. Deaf to all entreaties, this iron-hearted man allowed Captain Hubbell to perish in the waves. Thus ended the life of a young man who was the idol of his family and friends. Among the epitaphs in this work will be found a copy of the one inscribed on the stone erected to his memory, in the old Stratfield Burying Ground, in Bridgeport, Connecticut (see page 82).

It appears, from the records, that Wilson Hubbell's Sloop, Delight, Captain Powell in command, was captured September 6, 1796, and again in March or April, 1799, on which occasion he was in command and was thrown overboard.

"No. 14.—Sloop Delight, Registered December 28, 1798 (from 1798 to 1801). Owned by Wilson Hubbell. Master, Ezra Hubbell, Mariner, of Newfield, Town of Stratford, Fairfield County, Connecticut. Register detained aboard, as per abstract, 30 September, 1800, the quarter.

I, William Cable, of Fairfield, heretofore mate of the Sloop Delight, of Newfield, which vessel was captured by a French Privateer on her passage to the Havanna; and the Master of said Sloop, Wilson Hubbell, having been hove overboard by the enemy and drowned, I, the said William Cable, do solemnly swear that the Certificate Register, which was granted to the said Sloop by the Collector of the District of Fairfield, was, as I verily believe, detained aboard by force; and that if ever said Certificate shall be within my power, it shall be delivered up to the Collector of the Customs for the District aforesaid, so help me God.

WILLIAM CABLE." *

ASA HUBBELL, of Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, grandson of Captain Comfort Hubbell, and son of Lewis Hubbell and Hannah Hale, was born in Derby, Connecticut, December 30, 1783.

His father was a soldier of the Revolution—was conspicuous for his bravery in many battles, in one of which he was severely wounded.

Asa Hubbell was a man of unblemished character, great natural strength of mind, earnestness of conviction, and untiring industry.

When a boy, but twelve years of age, he left his father's home and went forth into the world to earn his own support, with a strong, ruddy, vigorous physical organization, as his only competence, and an unsullied name as his only inheritance.

Though so young in years, his frank, boyish spirit did not in the least shrink from the trying ordeal that he was about to pass through, as friendless and alone, with his little bundle in his hand, he bade good-bye to his boyish associates and friends, and stepped forth into the wide world, a child in years, but a man in spirit, will and resolution.

Through his brief school-days in childhood, his apprenticeship in boyhood, and his indomitable industry in manhood, he was always an unflinching votary of labor; active, earnest, honest labor; always a worker in whatever calling or pursuit he was engaged, whether as an inventor of some handicraft of mechanism, or as manufacturer of some ponderous implement of husbandry, or as farmer, superintending "the seed time and harvest of the soil," he was ever the same industrious worker—the same successful and prosperous citizen.

Not that he accumulated great wealth—not that he evolved any world-famous invention from his teeming brain—not that he wooed or even coveted popularity or fame—

"That voice alone
That ever lives upon the noisy tongues of men,"

but that he worked heroically on, devotedly loved by an unselfish, noble-hearted wife and mother, respected and revered by his sons and daughters, and honored and esteemed by his life-long neighbors and friends.

For the more than fifty years that he went out and came in—that he summered and wintered with the same circle of friends and acquaintances—not a taint of dishonesty to a fellow-man or woman, or child, ever cast a shadow on his good name.

His chief recreations were with the fishing rod—the trout-net for brooks, the seine-net for rivers, and the pigeon-net for the woods. That he was successful with either and all, is a fact no acquaintance of his will for a moment dispute.

He was exceedingly fond of poetry. "Pollock's Course of Time," "Young's Night Thoughts," "Thomson's Seasons," and "Milton's Paradise Lost," were his great and well-thumbed favorites. Byron laconically says:

"Many are poets who have never penned Their inspirations, and perchance the best;"

and it may with truthfulness be added, that many a soul attuned to the rhythmic melodies of nature, that loves the euphonic songs of the trees and birds and flowers, that hears the symphonies of archangelic songs in the balmy breeze or murmuring zephyr, or weird wailings of the damned in the howling winds and the mighty tempests—and yet are they so bound in the green withes of toil and labor, that the winged wanderers of fancy die ere they find utterance.

So with the subject of this sketch. He rarely penned the imageries of poetic inspiration that fluttered their rainbow pinions through his teeming brain, yet his soul was imbued with the very essence and spirit of poesy.

Many a poetic gem, gleaming with the fire of genius and flashing with the corruscations of inspiration, has the writer* seen when a boy, lying here and there, in the work-shop or in the house, written in the same bold manly style that characterized his writing.

That they were not preserved is to be regretted; that the writer did not write more is lamentable.

The only verses (except some of an entirely local character, that were written at the age of 82) that have been preserved, are the following, which appeared some forty years since in a local paper, as an advertisement of one portion of his business:

"TO THE FARMERS.

Ye bone and sinew of the land,
 Forever famed in song and story;
 Ye rocks whereon your country stands,
 Firm pillars of your nation's glory;
 Yon ripening grass, whose nodding plumes,
 Like emerald crests of Knights of Old;
 With thymy breath and sweet perfume,
 Ask you to reap their wealth of gold;
 Ask, when you glean that you shall take "A. Hubbell's" best REVOLVING RAKE.

Untrammelled by the cry, "hard times"—
 Uncorsetted by bank dependence,
 The honest farmer slowly climbs
 The lofty hill of independence;
 There seated on its summit's brow,
 In deep and pleasing contemplation,
 Points to "A. Hubbell's" RAKE and PLOUGH
 As stepstones to his elevation;
 As stepstones to his wealth untold
 And ruddy health, worth more than gold.

The undersigned this method takes (Anticipating your perusal)
 To say the best REVOLVING RAKES
 Are made and sold by him as usual.

Amenia, N. Y., 1838."

For a number of years previous to the year 1845 he had discovered upon his farm in Amenia, N. Y., indications of an iron mine, and in that year he opened a vein of ore, from which he mined some thousands of tons, but owing to the depression of the iron interests of this country at that time, he could see but little pecuniary gain in prosecuting the enterprise. Some few years later, however, he sold his farm, including the mine, to some wealthy and enterprising capitalists, who, entering vigorously into the business, mined and sold hundreds of thousands of tons of ore at a great profit; and the mine was sold a few years ago for $350,000.

* His son, William Lafayette Hubbell, of New York City, New York, also a poet and inventor.

From that period until he died suddenly with heart disease, in 1868, at the ripe age of 85 years, he lived with his children, possessing his mental and physical powers and activity up to the very hour of his death, and retaining his hold upon the admiration and esteem of all who knew him to the end.

"It is an awful thing to die,
But that dread path once trod,
Heaven lifts its everlasting portals high,
And bids the pure in heart behold their God."

JOHNSON HUBBELL, of Erie, Erie county, Pennsylvania, born October 19, 1785, in Lanesborough, Massachusetts, was the eldest son of Hickok Hubbell, of the same town. He was designed by his parents for the ministry, and was sent to Williamstown College to complete his studies. His physical strength was not sufficient to sustain his energy and ambition, and by too close application his health gave way, and he was obliged to abandon his long-cherished hope of becoming a minister, and became a merchant. In July, 1818, he married Miss Betsey Leonard, and moved from his native city to Troy, New York, where he went into the drug business, in which he continued until declining health compelled him to retire from an active life. His youngest daughter, Frances Adelia, having married N. W. Russell, of Erie, Pennsylvania, he moved, at their solicitation, to that city. While living there he went to Monroeville, Ohio, to visit his brother, Deodatus, and died at his house a week after his arrival. He was a man of thorough integrity of character, a gentleman and a scholar; faithful in all the relations of life, a sincere Christian, and died as he had lived, at peace with all.

Few outside of his family knew the great cross he bore in not being able to finish his studies. Although he had marked out great things for himself in life, He who knows the beginning and the end planned otherwise; it is worthy of mention that he read the Scriptures daily in Greek, not a rare accomplishment in these days of universal education, but rather an exceptional practice in his day.

Noble and generous in his disposition, he always contributed to the extent of his ability towards the Church, and at his death the poor lost a sincere friend.

He leaves an untarnished name the only legacy to his children. His eldest daughter, Elizabeth Formosa Josepha Ann Hubbell, still survives.

JULIUS CÆSAR HUBBELL, of Chazy, Clinton County, New York, son of Wolcott Hubbell and Mary Curtis, was born April 17, 1787, in Lanesborough, Massachusetts.

Mr. Hubbell became a member of the Bar in 1823, as is shown by the following diploma :

[STATE SEAL.]

“By THE HONORABLE
JOHN SAVAGE, Esq.,
CHIEF JUSTICE of the
STATE OF NEW YORK.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting :

KNOW YE, That Julius C. Hubbell, having been duly examined and admitted as counsellor in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, in this present term of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, I do hereby authorize and license the said Julius C. Hubbell to appear in the said Court, and there to practise as a counsellor, according to the rules and customs of the said Court and the laws of the State.

Given under my hand and seal the fifteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, in the forty-eighth year of the independence of the United States of America.

[SUPREME COURT SEAL.]

(Signed) JOHN SAVAGE.”

Mr. Hubbell was for many years the oldest lawyer in the State of New York. He died June 9, 1880.

HEZEKIAH HUBBELL, of Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of John Hubbell and Sarah Curtis, was born in Huntington, Connecticut, December 25, 1793.

In early life he was a farmer and blacksmith, and lived for a time in Pennsylvania, but soon returned to his old home in Connecticut, where he has since resided.

He is now (1881), in his eighty-eighth year, and still in possession of all his faculties, is very active, fond of fishing and walking, and takes great pleasure in working in his garden.

He has in his possession a gun over six feet in length, bearing the following inscription : “Nathan Hubbell, 1757. Made by Benoni Hill, of Stratford.” The last bear killed on the “White Hills” was shot with it.

Mr. Hubbell is the patriarch of the “White Hills.” It will interest members of the family to know that upon these hills (in the town of Huntington), there are some twenty families bearing the name, all descendants of Lieutenant John Hubbell, who died near Albany, New York, in 1690.

Truman M. Hubbell

TRUMAN MALLORY HUBBELL, of Philadelphia, Pa., son of Silas Hubbell and Mrs. Hannah Wheeler (nec French), was born in Montgomery, Hampden County, Massachusetts, September 19th, 1788.

In 1796 he moved with his parents to Unadilla, State of New York, where he lived until his mother's death in 1797-8. After her death he resided with his half brothers, James and Joseph Wheeler, on Partridge Island Farm, at the head waters of the Delaware River (near Delhi), Hancock Township, New York, where he was engaged in the lumber business. Here the subject of our sketch lived until he was about twenty-four years of age. When of age he went into the lumber and rafting business with his half brother, William Wheeler, and always took great pleasure in relating that he had "steered rafts of lumber down the river Delaware from Partridge Island forty-two times."

At the time of his residence in New York State the greater parts of the counties of Delaware and Otsego were wilderness, in which deer, bears, wolves, and panthers abounded. Many an hour has the writer of this sketch listened to the stories of his revered grandfather's adventures with these savage denizens of the forest. As an off-hand shot with the rifle, pistol, and shot-gun, he was unrivalled in his day and generation, and an interesting narrative might be written recounting his remarkable skill in the use of these weapons.

A long account of his "Extraordinary Wolf Hunt" can be seen in "The Cabinet of Natural History and American Rural Sports," Volume I, page 66; also an account of his "Encounter with a Panther" (same volume), page 137.

In his four days hunt after the "three-legged wolf" (so called because it had been maimed by a trap), and in his celebrated panther hunt, he was accompanied by his half brother, William Wheeler. As the accounts are both very lengthy, and are well worth reading, we would advise all interested in true hunting stories to peruse the original narratives in the aforesaid work, which can be seen in the Ridgway Branch of the Philadelphia Library (on south Broad Street).

Mr. Hubbell was personally acquainted with James Fenimore Cooper, the celebrated novelist, was the original "Deerslayer" in Cooper's novel of that name, became the owner of the rifle "Killdeer,"—mentioned in "Deerslayer"—and always took great pride in relating how it came into his possession, which is best described in his own words. "One day while deer hunting in New York State with Captain Addicks, whose family had been murdered by the Mohican Indians, and against whom the captain had sworn vengeance and extermination, we came suddenly upon a solitary Indian fishing from the rocks in a stream. He did not know of our proximity, for we were hidden from his view by the forest trees and bushes that grew on our side of the water. Captain Addicks motioned to me to remain silent, and then informed me in a whisper that the Indian we saw was the last of the Mohicans, but that he had never shot one of them without letting him know and see who fired. He then broke a twig to attract his attention, and drew a bead on him with the old rifle. The Indian looked up, and instantly recognizing Addicks, knew that his time had come to enter the happy hunting grounds, and throwing up his arms, commenced his death song, which was cut short by a ball through his heart."

Captain Addicks, who was the original "Leatherstocking,(?)" then turned to me and said, "Truman, my task is done, I have kept my oath, and for years followed the murderers of my family, until the last of the Mohicans has fallen by my hand. I have now no further use for 'Killdeer,' and as you are the only man worthy to use it, I give it to you and hope you will always keep it."

Any one who cares to take the trouble, can find, in the personal description of "Deerslayer," an exact description of the subject of this sketch. In the novel, however, "Deerslayer" is said to have received "Killdeer" from the hands of "Judith."

In 1811 Mr. Hubbell rented the Chester Saw Mills from Richard Flower, whose daughter, Mary Ann, he married in 1817, and continued the lumber business there until about 1818, in which year he established a lumber yard in the District of Northern Liberties, Philadelphia County (now Philadelphia), on the Delaware River, near Brown Street wharf.

In 1823, he went to Savannah, Augusta and Macon, Georgia, for the first time, to buy cotton for the account of John Welsh, of Philadelphia, who made large sums on his shipments. Mr. Hubbell also made over one hundred thousand dollars for himself in buying and selling cotton on his own account.

He continued to make annual visits South to buy cotton, during the fall and winters up to 1830-1, and had many remarkable adventures while traveling through that, then, lawless country. On one occasion he and a friend carried two million dollars in United States Bank notes, for deposit on account of the bank. They were followed in the stage coach by three desperadoes, against whom they were finally compelled to defend themselves with loaded pistols, being greatly assisted by Mr. Hubbell's faithful pointer dog, "Rover." They frustrated the several attempts to steal the valise containing the money, and carried it in safety to its destination.

In 1824-5, while deer hunting, by invitation of the Indians, with Mr. Alfred Cummings, of Augusta, Georgia, in what was called the Cherokee Nation Country, Mr. Hubbell found in a brook, the first piece of gold discovered in that State. He had the gold then found fashioned into a bas-relief of his famous pointer dog Rover, and enclosed (under crystal), in a watch-seal, now worn by his eldest son, William Wheeler Hubbell.

Mr. Hubbell became a member of the Masonic fraternity while in the South, and returned to Philadelphia in 1831 to remain permanently. With money made in cotton, he entered largely into building operations in the District of Moyamensing, Philadelphia County. In the improvement of the District and in the establishment of public schools, he took a very prominent part, and was elected to the Legislature of Pennsylvania in 1834-5, where he rendered efficient service in promoting the interests of his constituents, and was recognized as a man of very great natural abilities.

In 1845 he removed to Catawissa, on the Susquehanna River, in Columbia County, Pennsylvania, near which he cultivated a large farm, and laid out the village of Hubbellville, in Beaver Valley adjoining the McCauley Mountain Coal Mines, where he continued to reside until 1870, when, in the eighty-second year of his age, he and his wife came to Philadelphia to reside with their son William Wheeler Hubbell, with whom they lived until his wife's death in 1876, when he went to reside with his son Richard Henry Hubbell in Chester, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, and died there May 10, 1878, in the ninetieth year of his age.

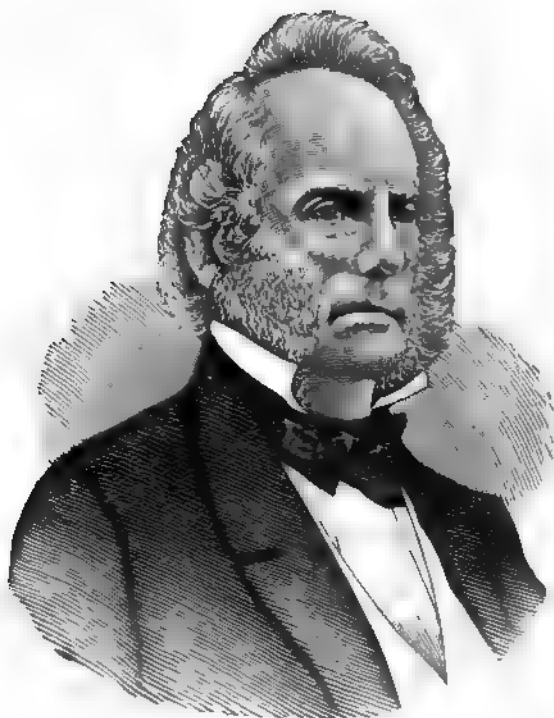

In personal appearance, Mr. Hubbell was a remarkably fine looking man, he was about five feet eleven inches in height, very erect, had blue eyes, brown hair, and a ruddy complexion.

His great skill as a sportsman made him well known throughout the country, and his manly bearing and superior conversational powers attracted to him hosts of friends and admirers.

But, in that grander life,
Where all must meet at last,
I shall behold thy well-beloved face,
Hear thy remembered voice once more,
And feel again thy friendly grasp.

He died May 19, 1874, in Oswego, New York.

“The death of a citizen so widely known and whose life has been so much the property of the public as that of the late Hon. Hiram Hubbell, requires a word further than we were able to say yesterday. Judge Hubbell’s family came originally from Connecticut, but more immediately from Ballston Springs, New York. He was many years a resident of Pulaski; at one time was a representative in Assembly; also clerk of Oswego County, and, we believe, the first elected clerk; he also was one of the Associate Judges of Oswego County, and held various other offices during his useful life.”

Chas B Hubbell

CHARLES BENJAMIN HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, born March 20, 1789, was the youngest son of Captain Amos Hubbell and his second wife Eleanor Hubbell.

Mr. Hubbell was for many years a successful merchant in his native city.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Thompson, of Stratford, Connecticut, by whom he had twelve children.

His obituary, copied from the Bridgeport Standard of May 13, 1873, speaks of him as he was ; no biographical sketch that might be written could add lustre to his name ; he died as he had lived, loved, honored, and respected by all the inhabitants of his native city.

"The Hon. Charles Benjamin Hubbell died yesterday afternoon, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. P. M. Thorp, on Golden Hill, after a brief illness. He had been failing for a few months past, but with the exception of a cold and cough, seemed to be troubled with no specific disease, and did not show alarming signs of weakness till a few hours before his death. He retained his mental and bodily vigor to a remarkable degree, and attended worship a week ago Sunday at the North Church, where his presence has been so constant for many years. On Saturday last it became evident that the weight of years, which he had borne hitherto as few men ever do, was telling upon him, and his once vigorous constitution had lost the elasticity with which it had risen from previous attacks, so that he sunk gradually under an increasing weakness, passing away quietly and painlessly, falling asleep in the fulness of years.

At the time of his death Mr. Hubbell was probably the oldest citizen born here, and he had seen Bridgeport grow from a very small village to its present proportion. At his last birthday, March 20th, Mr. Hubbell was eighty-four years old, and those who saw him then remember that his tall figure was as erect, his mind as clear, and his manner as prompt as ever. Born in Bridgeport, in what is now Park Avenue (then Multon Lane, and afterwards Division Street,) eighty-four years ago, always living here, and doing business here from the time that he was nineteen years of age, identified with the place through all the active years of his business life, taking a large interest in its welfare, and maintaining that interest to the last, even after he had retired from active life, he was a man universally known and respected, and whose loss will be very widely and generally felt and deplored. He was engaged in active business for a period of nearly forty years, being in the general mercantile, shipping and drygoods business, and was noted during all that time for honorable dealing, sterling integrity, promptness, and dignity of bearing. In the years 1852 and 1853 he filled the position of Mayor of the then growing city with efficiency and honor, and he was at various times called to fill other positions of trust, the duties of which he always discharged with integrity and ability. He was President of the old Pequonnock Bank for a number of years, and was a prudent and able financier. He was successful in business, and retired upon a competency something over twenty years ago, but had personally attended to the details of his own affairs ever since, and never ceased to take an active interest in all matters affecting the welfare of the city. He attended the North Congregational Church all his life, and was for many years a member of that Church, and always a regular attendant on the ministrations of the Sanctuary. He had no dread of death, but was sustained by the firm faith he ever professed, and expressed his entire willingness to go whenever the summons should come. He was a man of great benevolence, and under a somewhat bluff exterior carried a large and warm heart, ever open to the appeal of suffering humanity, and was ever doing, in an unostentatious manner, deeds of charity and kindness, which endeared him to a wide circle of friends among all classes. Mr. Hubbell was twice married, and by his first wife had a large family, most of the members of which are still living. His second wife survives him.

Although Mr. Hubbell had outlived the allotted threescore years and ten by nearly a score, he had never, as is the case with many old citizens, dropped out of public notice, or ceased to take an active interest in the affairs of his fellow-men. His erect figure, dignity of manner, and striking appearance, made him a man of mark wherever he went, and he was as well known perhaps as any citizen of the community. He was a man to whom may be applied most fitly the words of the great poet: 'Take him for all in all, we shall not look upon his like again.' While the sympathy of the community will be freely extended to his family, he will be mourned not as one cut down in the prime of life, but remembered and honored as one who, in the fulness of years, with his life work well done, and leaving an honorable record behind him to his children and the community in which he had always lived, answered to the summons of his Great Master cheerfully, and was gathered like a full ear in the harvest.

After the adjournment of the Common Council last evening, news having been received of the death of Mr. Hubbell, it was announced by the Mayor, and resolutions of an appropriate character expressing the sorrow of the Council were passed, together with one that the Council attend the funeral in a body.

The funeral of Mr. Hubbell will take place from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. P. M. Thorp, on Golden Hill, Thursday afternoon at three o'clock."

ELLEN HUBBELL, daughter of Aaron Hubbell and Sarah Silliman, his wife, was born August 15, 1793.

On July 17, 1811, she married Daniel S. Odell, who died November 22, 1821, in Mobile, Alabama, and in 1824 she married William Thurber, by whom she had one son. After Mr. Thurber's death she married, in June, 1839, John H. Keller, who died May 12, 1849, without issue.

The following notice of her death is from the Morning News, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, September 21, 1880:

"In the death of Mrs. Ellen Keller, which occurred in this city September 4, Bridgeport has lost one of its oldest native born residents. Mrs. Keller was the daughter of Aaron Hubbell, a revolutionary soldier, and was born in the old family homestead formerly situated on what is now known as North avenue, at a point just east of Clinton avenue, August 15, 1793, and had consequently passed her eighty-seventh year. Her first husband, Daniel S. Odell, was also descended from some of the earlier settlers in this community. A considerable portion of her life was spent in New York City, but for several years past her home has been with her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Willits, in Bridgeport, at whose residence she breathed her last. Her remains now rest in Mountain Grove Cemetery, in the vicinity of the spot where her childhood's days were passed, and where her ancestors settled more than two hundred years ago.

The family of which this venerable lady was a descendant is one of the oldest in this region, and its branches, since its settlement here in the early history of Connecticut, have become widely extended throughout the land, its numerous members have borne their part in the manifold interests of industry and religion, and many of them have been prominent in the various walks of life. Mrs. Keller was highly blest in her domestic relations, and her children grew up to occupy spheres of usefulness and responsibility. Upon them and their children, besides a large circle of near relations and connections, is left the impress of her cheerful piety and household graces. Indeed, a long and faithful Christian life like hers could not be without a gracious influence. In all its stages her womanly virtues were apparent. A true humility, unfeigned kindness, a gentle, confiding, child-like spirit marked her character to its close. Those only who guarded and watched her so affectionately during her declining years, can know how submissive she was to the Divine will, and with what a loving and unquestioning trust she rested on the Divine arm. Truly 'the memory of the just is blessed.'"

JOSIAH HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Joel Hubbell and Charity Hubbell, daughter of Josiah Hubbell, of Old Mill Hill, on "Hubbell's Hill," was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut, in 1795, and died May 31, 1879.

The following obituary is from the Bridgeport Daily Standard of June 2, 1879:

"In our obituary column to-day will be found notice of the death of an old citizen, Mr. Josiah Hubbell, at the advanced age of 84½ years. For quite a number of years Mr. Hubbell has been so thoroughly withdrawn from the busy walks of life that few of the present generation know that such a man lived among us, and yet for 40 years prior to 1860 he was one of the active and prominent business men of the place. His store was on the east side of Water, at the foot of Wall street, the same now occupied as a meat market, by Mr. Edward J. Banks. For many years, in connection with his brother, Captain Gershom E. Hubbell, he conducted a grain and grocery business; also, Boston and New York coasting, the brother going as master of the vessel. He was also for many years engaged with another brother, David, in the manufacture of saddle trees, outside market for which was found largely in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

The firm of J. & G. Hubbell built and owned in all five vessels. One of them, the 'Virginia,' was the largest schooner ever built in Derby. She was lost on a trip from Philadelphia to Richmond, Virginia, with a load of coal. The crew, including Captain Gershom E. Hubbell, barely escaped with their lives. The loss was total and no insurance.

Some old citizens will remember the sloop 'Fame,' which was their regular New York packet for many years, and did well if she made a round trip in ten days, and yet that was a specimen of the means of transit and communication between these points at the time.

The last vessel they built was the 'Housatonic,' a sloop of 80 tons, which was intended for a fast packet to run for freight between Bridgeport and New York. She had very high masts, and on her second trip upset off the bar of Bridgeport harbor, which involved an expense of $1,500 to set things right, and injured her character as a reliable freighter. She was afterward sold to the firm of Morford & Trubee.

The home of Mr. Hubbell was on the (then) high bluff on the east side of Water street, where now stands the packing establishment of Mr. F. A. Bartram, and the grounds extended through to Middle street.

Mr. Hubbell, in his active days, held many prominent positions. He was alderman of the city in 1837-8, 1842-3, was justice of the peace and coroner many years, was one of the first promoters and for many years a director of the Connecticut Bank, also one of the corporators of the Bridgeport Savings Bank, established in 1842. Of the twenty-two corporators of that institution, only four now remain, viz.: William H. Noble, Gideon Thompson, Thomas Ranson, and Schuyler Seeley.

He was the first to introduce Anthracite coal in this market. There was much incredulity as to its usefulness. Capt. Thaddens Hubbell, who lived on the site of the present Citizens' Building on Main street, was among the faithless ones, and took a specimen home to try it on his hickory fire in the old-fashioned fire-place, only to have his incredulity confirmed. After the great fire of 1834, which desolated Main street both sides, in the vicinity of Wall street, and Wall street to Middle street, Mr. Hubbell purchased the southeast corner of Main and Wall streets, belonging to the heirs of Asa Hubbell, for $2,000. This he sold in 1838 to Charles Hill, cashier of the Old Bridgeport Bank, for $4,000, which was thought a large speculation at the time. Mr. Hill in 1838 erected the building now owned by Mrs. George S. Sanford, embracing three stores on Main street, with one hall over them, which was our first City Hall.

Mr. Hubbell also purchased about this time the Captain Samuel Hawley place on the west side of Main street south of Chapel street, now owned by Mr. N. Wheeler.

The exciting times connected with the building of the Housatonic railroad occurred soon after, Mr. Hubbell taking sides with those who opposed the loan of the credit of the city to promote this enterprise. When the test case to try the validity of the city's obligations was decided in the highest state court, and judgment was issued, Mr. Hubbell was one of the first to have his property levied upon. He had just stocked up his store for the winter, for which he had borrowed some money, and although the sheriff, who had taken possession for one day only, called him up at 10 o'clock in the night and quietly returned him his keys without disturbing a thing, yet exaggerated stories were circulated to the injury of his credit, and led to an embarrassment from which he never recovered.

Although withdrawn from active participation in city matters so many years, he has ever taken a deep interest therein, and the annual Municipal Register has had no more attentive and appreciative reader.

Mr. Hubbell was descended from one of the original settlers of this parish of Stratfield, viz.:

Richard Hubbell, Sen., who with his son Richard, Jr., were among the nine male members of the Stratfield church at its formation in 1695 (now the First Congregational church, Bridgeport). Their home was on the spot now occupied by Mr. Chas. A. Hotchkiss on Clinton avenue. The subject of this sketch married Charlotte Baldwin, of Poughkeepsie, New York, and had eight children, four of whom survive and are residents of this city, viz.: Edward Hubbell, Mary Louisa, Mrs. Russell T. Curtis, now Mrs. J. H. Osgood, Captain John B. Hubbell of the Bridgeport Steamboat Company, Charlotte B., wife of G. W. Arnold. Jane Elizabeth, wife of Doctor H. L. W. Burritt, Walter, Louis Henry and Frances Ann, are deceased.

Mr. Hubbell united with the First Congregational Church, October, 7th, 1821, at which time there was a large accession. Among them such names as John Brooks, Jr., Sherwood Sterling, William Wright, and Burr Knapp. In 1831 he was dismissed with thirty other male and seventy female members to form the Second or South Church, with which he ever retained his membership. He has been a great reader of the Scriptures and has read the Bible through five times in the last eight years."

WALTER HUBBELL, of Canandaigua, Ontario County, New York, born February 25, 1795, in Bridgeport, Connecticut, was the son of Abijah Hubbell and Clarissa Fitch.

Mr. Hubbell graduated at Union College, Schenectady, New York, in 1814, and the same year went to Canandaigua, New York, where he entered the law office of N. W. Howell and John Greig. He was admitted to the Bar in 1817 and continued the practice of his profession until his death, March 25, 1848.

GEORGE WILLIAM HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, eldest son of Ezekiel and Catharine Hubbell, was born November 26, 1796, in Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut. His parents were desirous he should receive a collegiate education, and he partially prepared himself for such a course, but his inclinations leading him to choose a commercial life, he entered, at the age of sixteen, the counting-room of Smith & Hubbell, of New York.

In 1815, immediately after the war with England, when he was nineteen years of age, Smith & Hubbell employed him as Supercargo, with the business of the brig Cannon, under the command of Captain Paul Delano, on a voyage to Portugal and Gibraltar. In 1816—Buenos Ayres, then fighting for her independence—he was again employed by the same house to embark in the brig Ellen Tooker, under the command of Captain Adam Pond, to take the consignment of the vessel and cargo, consisting of materials of war and ammunition of all kinds. This adventure, arriving at a time the Provinces of Uruguay and Buenos Ayres were still at war with Spain, favorable results were looked for. On the contrary, finding an over-supply of similar investments, as he did, and consequent competition and delay to realize, the result proved disastrous to all concerned. After the sale of the vessel and cargo he lingered some time in the La Plata, closing up his business, and returned home late in the year 1817.

The following spring, in the month of June, he took charge of the business of the ship Citizen, under the command of Captain James Loring, and as Supercargo made a voyage to Manilla, where he loaded her for Europe, and arrived at Hamburgh in May, 1820. Disposing of her cargo, and despatching the ship on another voyage to Manilla, under instructions from the owners in the United States, and placing her in charge of Captain Loring as Master and Supercargo, he returned to New York, where he arrived in February, 1821. In March following he married Mary Ann, only daughter of Enoch Foote, Esq., of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

In April, 1821, he and his brother Henry Wilson Hubbell, the second son of Ezekiel and Catharine Hubbell—born in Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, October 30, 1805—embarked as passengers in the new ship Ajax, commanded by their father, and sailed for Manilla. Henry had just finished his education at the Wilton Academy, Connecticut, under the tuition of Hawley Olmstead, afterwards Professor of Astronomy, at Yale College. The object of George was to establish a mercantile house at Manilla—with his brother Henry as one of the clerks at the start—and transact a general business. The ship arrived out in August, 1821, having on board 90,000 dollars in Spanish coin, with several invoices of English, French and miscellaneous goods. Part of these funds were for the Citizen, belonging to the same owners, which ship arrived at Manilla from Hamburgh many months before the Ajax. An establishment was soon arranged and organized for business, and on the first of January, 1822, commercial circulars, under the firm name of George W. Hubbell were issued. These two ships both loaded and sailed in the regular monsoon on their return to New York. The Citizen was wrecked on the coast of New Jersey; and the Ajax arrived safely, April 15, 1822. It may be here specially noticed and recorded that the name of the Hubbells was fairly and permanently established at Manilla in 1822, and has continued, now Peele, Hubbell & Co., to the present period of 1881. This firm and the house of Russell & Co., in China, established at Canton, in 1825, are the only two American houses of ancient standing in existence at the present day, eastward of the Cape of Good Hope. The house has been successful and favorably known in all the commercial centres of the world as a responsible and highly respected firm. At the time of his death, as hereinafter referred to, Mr. George W. Hubbell, the original founder of the house, had been the United States Consul for many years, and was the first recognized by Spain in her East India possessions.

From 1822 to 1825 the Ajax made three successive voyages under the same command, consigned to George W. Hubbell. The ship Sabina, also commanded by Ezekiel Hubbell, in 1825-26, loaded at Manilla for New York. Meanwhile the business of the house increased, particularly with New York and Salem.

In 1823 the house purchased and loaded the brig Cadet, of Boston, with a valuable cargo of sugars and China silks, adapted to the wants of Chili and Peru. Henry, then under eighteen years of age, was entrusted with the business of the voyage as Supercargo. Aside from the knowledge he had derived during the two years he was in the office of his brother George, he had only been commissioned with a small adventure from Manilla to China and back in July and August, 1823. Full and careful instructions for his guidance were prepared, the voyage mapped out, and then left to his judgment to act for the best as circumstances might render necessary.

The Cadet, under command of Captain James Bennett, sailed from Manilla January 15, 1824. Passing down the China Sea, the Indian Ocean, and to the southward of New Holland and New Zealand, she arrived at Valparaiso in the month of April, following. During the voyage the crew became mutinous and the vessel arrived with several men in irons. This difficulty weighed upon Captain Bennett's mind to such a degree, that, soon after his arrival he destroyed himself. Without delay Mr. Hubbell engaged a suitable man to fill his place, and the business of the vessel went on without interruption. Part of the cargo was sold at Valparaiso. The accounts closed, the vessel was soon made ready for sea. At this time the Spaniards, still in possession of the Castle of Callao, and control of the city of Lima, and the port reported to be under blockade by the limited naval forces of Peru, and several Spanish armed cruisers on the coast, he joined the Supercargos of the ships Liberty and Governor Clinton, of New York, and sought convoy down the coast from the United States Sloop of War Peacock, then at Valparaiso, which was unhesitatingly granted by Captain Carter, in command. After seven days' passage, calling at Coquimbo en route, the Cadet and her companions, in the absence of the blockading fleet, safely anchored in the harbor of Callao unmolested.

Lima at that time was alternately in temporary possession of the Spanish and Peruvian forces. Completely demoralized, as that beautiful city was, with no sale for anything except flour and provisions, he decided, after idling away a month or more, to proceed down the coast to Truxillo.* He did so; and disposed of a further portion of his cargo at that place. Meanwhile, leaving the silver received for the proceeds of his goods, he concluded to return to Lima, and make one more effort to realize for the balance of the cargo, and call at Truxillo, on his return to Manilla, for the funds he had left at that place. With the knowledge that Callao was again blockaded, he felt some little doubt as to safely reaching his destination. Nevertheless, he was determined to attempt it. Instructing Captain Woodbury in writing to proceed to Callao at all hazards, which relieved him as commander of any responsibility, they weighed anchor. After seven days at sea, about sunset, the port then fifty miles distant and the wind favorable to shape a course for the harbor, they pressed forward in that direction. About midnight, atmosphere hazy, stars dim and sea smooth, with a steady southeast trade wind blowing, they quietly glided between two vessels of the blockading squadron, a frigate on the one side; and a brig upon the other, and only discovered their proximity by faintly hearing the watch cry of "All's well;" and immediately on the other side the same repeated. Still quietly following their course, unnoticed by the enemy, they found themselves at the break of day safely under the guns and protection of the United States Frigate United States, at anchor in the harbor of Callao. Commodore Hull, then in command of the United States Naval forces in the Pacific, having very little respect for the blockade, and although somewhat surprised, he was very much pleased at the safe arrival of the Cadet, and kindly offered any assistance needed. [These details are embodied in this brief sketch more for the purpose of showing the then political disturbed state of the country and trade, which confronted a young man of limited experience, and little knowledge of the world, carrying the responsibility which he did, and at a time, when Spain was struggling to save the last of her Vice-Royalties in America: the whole country in the hands of lawless bands; trade irregularly conducted: duties evaded, and vessels exposed to capture: the ship China of New York seized, and both vessel and cargo confiscated by the Spanish authorities: the ship General Carrington of Providence, Rhode Island, captured and brought into port and condemned: the late William S. Wetmore, of New York, her Super-cargo imprisoned: to which when we add temptations surrounding him of every kind, to which he was exposed, and which once fallen into would have been ruin to himself and friends, it can be readily seen that his position was one of great responsibility even for a man of mature years.] In the midst of this disturbed state of things, he immediately proceeded to Lima, with grave doubts as to whether he could succeed in negotiating the business he had in view. Nevertheless, he did make arrangements with his friends Messrs. Richard Price & Co., a responsible and influential English firm, to make him moderate advances upon the balance of his cargo still unsold. These advances were shipped on board the Cadet in bar silver, and the goods landed, and safely stored in Lima. Instructions were given to sell the consignment so soon as the fate of Peru was determined (which was looked for daily, as the two hostile armies in the interior were rapidly approaching each other), and remit to the United States any balance of account there might be realized. He then hastened back to Truxillo, where he took on board the silver awaiting his arrival, and on December 10, 1824, sailed on his return voyage to Manilla, where he arrived in March, 1825, after an absence of fourteen months. [On the 8th of December, only two days before he sailed from Huanchaco*, the battle of Ayacucho was fought, under General Sucre in command of the Peruvian forces, which resulted in the defeat of the Spanish Army, under command of the Viceroy General Laserna, who was in this final struggle killed. The terms of this victory resulted in a capitulation which included the surrender of the Castles of Callao and the garrisons throughout Peru, and a reasonable time allowed the Spanish Officers to embark for their homes in Spain. This surrender, which secured the independence of Peru, severed the last link of the vast Spanish possessions in America, over which Spain had held uninterrupted dominion for nearly three hundred years, and the old Empire of the Incas was again under the control of a degenerated Peruvian population.] On the return of the Cadet to Manilla the owner, George W. Hubbell, loaded and embarked in her for Cadiz and Gibraltar; at the former port, she delivered a cargo of sugar; and proceeded to the latter, where she was sold. Mr. Hubbell then returned to America. He arrived at New York in October, 1825, after an absence of four years and six months.

His brother Henry he left in charge of his business at Manilla, where he remained until January, 1826. He returned home with his father Captain Hubbell, in the ship Sabina, and arrived at New York on the 22d of April following, after an absence of five years, leaving the business of the house for a short time in charge of competent and reliable parties.

[We cannot overlook in our numerous interviews with Mr. H. W. Hubbell, the vivid recollection and reference that he makes to the exciting subject, which engrossed the attention of the public on this his first landing from a long sojourn abroad: that of the building of two ships of war for Greece, by Messrs. Leroy, Bayard & Co., and G. G. & S. Howland; the latter at a later period, under the firm name of Howland & Aspinwall, with whom in our sketch hereafter Mr. Hubbell becomes closely related. Probably no question ever engaged the feeling and interest of the citizens of New York in those days, to the extent which this absorbing topic did. Occurring in the height of the deep sympathy for the Greeks in their desperate struggle for independence, the most remarkable in history, the eloquent speeches from Webster, Clay and Everett, intensified the feeling. The million of dollars contributed in money, in addition to provisions and clothing, largely by America, to build two small frigates of 44 guns each, resulted in the sale of the one to the United States to cover the cost of the two. Finally, the Greek agent, Mr. Contostavlos, a gentleman of wealth and culture, claimed heavy damages of Messrs. G. G. & S. Howland, the financial agents: and by mutual consent his demand was left to a tribunal of arbitration. Mr. Samuel Williams, the eminent and sole American banker in London at that period; and the house of Messrs. Ricardo & Co., also a respectable London firm, were involved in the case. The Greek fund in the custody of Ricardo & Co. was transferred at the instance of the Messrs. Howlands to their correspondent, Mr. Williams. Soon after the removal of the account, Mr. Williams suspended payment and failed. His acceptances of G. G. & S. Howland's drafts were in course protested for non-payment and returned to New York with heavy damages. This unfortunate and unhappy occurrence left the New York house, in connection with their extravagant charges and disputed commissions in the building, armament, and equipment of the two ships, in no enviable position. Powerful influence bearing upon the arbitrators, and strongly defended by the Press, led to a verdict acquitting this prominent firm from any responsibility in the disastrous result of a loss of several hundred thousand dollars, which overtook the unfortunate Greeks on this occasion. About this time Messrs. Leroy, Bayard & Co. suspended payment and failed, and were not involved in the final issue as between the Greek agent and Messrs. G. G. & S. Howland. The one ship named the Hudson made but one cruise under the United States flag; she proved of slight construction, and was condemned. The other called the Hope was handed over to the Greeks, and destroyed at the battle of Navarino, October 1827, in which the combined fleets of England, France, and Russia annihilated the Turco-Egyptian fleet, and compelled the Sultan, after a most barbarous war of seven years, to acknowledge the independence of Greece.]

During the summer of 1826, Henry was commissioned to take charge of a portion of the cargo of the Sabina to Carthagena in Colombia. It was shipped in the brig Tampico, Captain N. B. Palmer, in which vessel he embarked, and sailed in June, making a remarkably quick passage of ten days. After disposing of his consignment he returned to New York, in the brig Bunker Hill, where he arrived in August, 1826.

In December, 1826, a voyage was made up to load the ship Sabina with a cargo for Rio Janeiro* and the West Coast of the Pacific. She sailed December 26, 1826, under command of Captain Ezekiel Hubbell, and consigned to him and his son, Henry, on board as joint Supercargos. They landed a portion of the cargo at Rio Janeiro, and refilled the space with sugars. They proceeded thence around Cape Horn to Valparaiso, Lima, Payta and Guayaquil; thence to the Sandwich Islands, at which places they realized the outward cargo, and with the proceeds thereof, mainly in Peruvian dollars, continued the voyage to Manilla, where they arrived in October, 1827. The ship was loaded as on former voyages, with Manilla produce, and sailed for New York, where she arrived April 14, 1828, performing the voyage around the world in fifteen months and eighteen days. At the termination of this adventure Captain Hubbell retired from the sea and foreign enterprises.

In October, 1827, George W. Hubbell returned to Manilla in the ship America, belonging to Messrs. Thomas H. Smith & Son, of New York, where he arrived in March, 1828, and occupied his former position as chief of his house. The ship was laden with a valuable cargo to his consignment. After landing a portion of it at Manilla, she proceeded to China, where she loaded for New York, and arrived home November, 1828. During his visit home Mr. Hubbell increased the business of his Manilla house, both in Europe and America. [Thomas H. Smith & Son, the largest operators engaged in the China trade at that time, and without a parallel since, suspended payment and failed in July, 1828. During the spring of 1827 they shipped 1,500,000 Spanish dollars in coin, in addition to large amounts of opium, quicksilver, furs and metals—followed up in the autumn with the America and other vessels with important shipments. Aiming at a monopoly of the tea trade proved a rock upon which they were finally wrecked, carrying down several Philadelphia firms and Messrs. Smith & Nicol, of New York.]

In May, 1828, Henry, as Supercargo, in the employ of Messrs. Hoyt & Tom, sailed in the ship Sabina from New York, under the command of Captain John W. Stirling, with a valuable cargo, and arrived at Manilla in the month of October of the same year. With a return cargo she sailed for New York in December following, where she arrived May 1, 1829.

In June, 1829, still in the employ of the same house, he again sailed in the Sabina, Stirling, Master, and arrived at Manilla in October, 1829. Disposing of the outward investment, he proceeded to China, and arrived at Canton in the month of November following. With ample means to purchase a full cargo, he invested his funds in fine tea, and sailed for New York the 26th of December, and arrived home April 4, 1830, in the short passage of 100 days. [During his sojourn at Canton on this occasion, it may be noted that an effort was made by the chief of the East India Company's factory to compel the Chinese to permit foreigners to live at Canton with their families; and sailors armed with guns were brought up from the company's ships at Whampoa to resist any attempt to coerce the ladies away; but the Viceroy succeeded in dismissing them after an altercation of several months, with threats to stop the trade. The debts of two of the bankrupt Hong, amounting to about $2,000,000, were also settled and paid by six instalments with 12 per cent. interest, and the united responsibility of the Co-Hong for the debts of its members to foreigners ordered to cease. An important event which occurred this year (1829), that of the opening of a new channel to the American trade for placing funds in China, may be also added. For many years Spanish dollars chiefly furnished the means with which to buy a return cargo of tea and silks. This new feature in the trade was a confirmed credit on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., of London, for £20,000, negotiated by Mr. John C. Greene, then Supercargo of the ship Panama, of New York. These bills at that time were taken by remitters to British India for proceeds of opium and cotton, and sent forward by heavy sailing vessels (called country ships) to Calcutta and Bombay. Passing through several hands in India, often withheld by the Hindoos for months, and finally four months in transit by sea around the Cape of Good Hope to England, covered about eight months from the date of the bills before they reached London. Drawn at six months' sight made fully fourteen months to maturity of the acceptance. On reaching London they were so disfigured by numerous native endorsements in India that the drawer's name occasionally became almost obliterated. At this time Mr. Hubbell had authority from Messrs. Hoyt & Tom, of New York, to draw, if needed, on Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co., of London, for the equivalent of sixty thousand dollars in sterling at Canton. The demand for bills on England by remitters to India was so great, that without a confirmed London credit, his exchange was taken with a local endorsement at a trifle less than the bills under the credit negotiated by Mr. Greene. These bills, drawn in sets of £250, at six months' sight, did not reach London for nine months. This slow transit continued until the opening of the overland route through Egypt, in 1842, when correspondence between England, India and China was at once transmitted in about fifty days. Soon after the expiration of the East India Company's China branch charter in 1834, the American trade has been principally carried on through the medium of sterling exchange under letters of credit on London.]

In April, 1830, soon after his arrival home, he took passage in the packet ship Sylvanus Jenkins to Liverpool. His immediate business in England was to prepare a shipment of British and Scotch goods adapted to the Manilla market, in anticipation of the arrival of the Sabina at Liverpool. She arrived in June, and was despatched without delay, consigned direct to George W. Hubbell, at Manilla. On this voyage Anson Ezekiel Hubbell, third son of Ezekiel and Catharine Hubbell, was a passenger. He was born at Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, April 17, 1807. He had been a clerk in the house of Messrs. Booth & Tuttle, New York, for several years, looking forward to joining his brother George as a partner in the house at Manilla. He, however, died on the passage, and was buried at sea August 4, 1830, longitude 30° west, latitude 28° south.

After the departure of the Sabina, Mr. Hubbell lingered a short time in England, in looking after and enlivening a correspondence with his brother's house at Manilla. At this time the political condition of affairs in England and France was unsatisfactory and threatening. The reform agitation throughout Great Britain was increasing, and forebodings of future events were gloomy. Trade was depressed, confidence shaken, and riots frequent throughout the country. During this short interval George IV, the worn-out voluptuary, died unlamented, and the accession of William IV gave little hope of his favoring reform. This state of things impeded business, and discouraged him in remaining any longer in England. Early in July he left London and visited France. He was in Paris during the revolution, which, after three days' severe fighting, resulted in the abdication of Charles X* in favor of his grandson, the Duke de Bordeaux (the present Count de Chambord, then ten years of age), and the consequent downfall of the Bourbon dynasty and accession of Louis Phillip to the throne of France. Having no special object in remaining any longer on the Continent, he embarked at Havre in the packet ship Edward Bonnafé, and arrived at New York, September 22d, 1830. [It is worthy of note at this late period—1881—that during his visit to England and France on that occasion, Mr. Hubbell did not meet with an American traveller either in London or Paris.]

He remained at home until April, 1831, when he again embarked in the packet ship Sylvanus Jenkins, and sailed for Liverpool, having in charge important commercial matters with Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co., of London. The renewal of the East India Company's branch charter with China, to expire in 1834, and strongly opposed by the English people, was then under discussion in Parliament, and which, directly bearing upon his future plans, he watched with great interest. In London his information was eagerly sought for with reference to the course and detail of shipments of British goods (of the same character of shipments manufactured for the East India Company) for American account. About this time Mr. Joshua Bates, member of the opulent house of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., of London, correspondents of Messrs. Thomas Perkins & Co., of Boston, who were largely engaged in shipments from England to China under the American flag, was examined before a committee in the House of Commons. Important information obtained from him regarding the economy of the business as carried on by free traders hastened the determination of Parliament not to renew the China branch of the East India Company.

During the spring he prepared a cargo of goods in anticipation of the arrival of the Sabina, to be loaded for Manilla. She arrived at Liverpool in May under the command of Captain William Robinson, and despatched in June following. Not strong in health, he embarked in the ship and proceeded as far as the Island of Madeira, where he landed, after ten days' passage. Without anchoring, the ship proceeded on her voyage consigned direct to his brother George, at Manilla. After landing her cargo, she was despatched to China, and loaded at Canton for New York, and arrived home in May, 1832. Making a short stay at Madeira, Mr. Hubbell returned to London, in the British brig Brothers where he arrived in August, 1831. He remained in England until October, when he embarked in the London packet ship Cambria, for New York, and arrived home in November, 1831.

Soon after he returned home, he received news of the sudden death of his brother George, who died at Manilla, on the 3d of May, 1831, in the thirty-fifth year of his age. His death left the business of the house to be managed by Mr. John McAuley, in winding up of old and open accounts, which was conducted satisfactorily to all concerned. Meanwhile, and during the month of December, 1831, he opened a negotiation with J. W. Peele, of Salem, Massachusetts, who was then about sailing for Manilla, as Supercargo of the ship Sapphire. The result of this negotiation was an arrangement to continue the house of George W. Hubbell, deceased, at Manilla, with J. W. Peele and Henry W. Hubbell as co-partners, and reorganize under the firm name of Peele, Hubbell & Co., Mr. Peele to remain at Manilla as the resident partner, associating Mr. McAuley with him in the business. At this time Mr. Hubbell's relations with England and China, were rapidly extending, and unwilling to again settle himself permanently at Manilla, it was agreed that he should, within a certain period, supply a satisfactory substitute to join Mr. Peele. In due time Mr. Henry Lawrence, of New York, then absent on the west coast of Chili and Peru, was proposed and accepted by Mr. Peele. Everything satisfactorily arranged, the Sapphire sailed and arrived at Manilla in May, 1832. Mr. Peele, on his arrival, accepted the services of Mr. McAuley, and issued circulars bearing date July 1st, 1832, announcing the new firm of Peele, Hubbell & Co. On the first of July, 1834, Mr. Hubbell retired, and in the same circular Mr. Henry Lawrence, then at Manilla, was from that date admitted a partner. Mr. McAuley died soon afterwards. Mr. Hubbell continued to advance the interest of the house in soliciting consignments and extending their correspondence in the United States, England and China, and also continued active personal and confidential relations with them on his own account. Mr. Peele and Mr. Lawrence retired from the house in 1843, and returned home, leaving Mr. Alfred H. P. Edwards, Thomas Pearce and William H. Osborn, their successors.

After arranging with Mr. Peele to continue the Manilla house, he chartered the fine ship Superior, of 575 tons, for a voyage from Liverpool to China and New York, under the command of Captain J. W. Sterling. He then embarked in the packet ship Hibernia, February 1, 1832, for Liverpool. The financial arrangements to carry out his plans in this enterprise he made with Messrs. Peter Remsen & Co., of New York. They furnished him with credits on Messrs. Timothy Wiggin & Co., of London, to the extent of £50,000, to be used in making advances on British goods for English account, to be shipped by the Superior, and consigned to him under arrangements whereby the proceeds in China should be invested in tea and silks, and returned by the same ship consigned to Messrs. Peter Remsen & Co. for account of the concerned. This house, George B. Reese, of Philadelphia, and Henry W. Hubbell were equally interested in the charter of the ship, and also the commissions in China and America; also, in shipments made on their joint account from other sources. The ship sailed from Liverpool May 20th, 1832, and arrived at Canton on the 10th of September following. After realizing for this valuable consignment about $400,000, the ship was laden with a cargo of fine tea, silks, etc., and sailed for New York, where she arrived April 21st, 1833. [It may be admissible to state that this enterprise was conceived and arranged in England in 1831-2, at a time the East India Company's commercial privileges with China and monopoly of the trade was drawing to a close. The regal manner in which the business was conducted, and the enormous expenses which it involved, compelled the company to require excessive prices for their tea, which, in addition, paid a duty of four shillings sterling per pound. Their Supercargos and the chief of the factory at Canton were supported in princely elegance; their patronage at home competed for at extravagant bids, and their ships, merchant men-of-war, mounting 30 guns. This extravagance had created a growing feeling of grave dissatisfaction. The English people were unwilling any longer, as a tea-drinking nation, to endure the enormous prices which the system involved, and a determination of the country to have the trade with China opened was irresistible. About this time the great measures of reform, which had passed, inaugurated a new state of things politically, and Parliament finally, after 168 years' monopoly by a powerful and influential trading company, fixed upon 1834 as the time the Company's charter would expire, when British relations with that country should be thrown open to free trade.]

The cargo per Superior, and shipment of surplus funds by other vessels, were sold immediately on arrival, and resulted in a fair and satisfactory return to the parties in England and all others interested, and terminated the charter of the ship.

Mr. Hubbell remained at home a few months. During the interval he chartered the ship Albion, Putnam, Master, for a voyage to Liverpool, China, and back to New York. He then embarked in the packet ship Caledonia August 16th, and arrived at Liverpool, September 7th, 1833. Anticipating the arrival of the Albion, he had made ready for shipment British goods, mainly on English account, under advances, and on her arrival he loaded and despatched her in October, consigned direct to his friends, Messrs. Gordon & Talbot, at Canton. He then remained in England awhile, looking after the interest of Messrs. Peele, Hubbell & Co. During this period the abolition of slavery was decreed, Parliament voting the enormous compensation of twenty millions sterling to the owners of 600,000 slaves, and the country still rejoicing over the great political victory of the reform bill, which passed in 1832, the people were clamorous for a coronation. In October, 1833, William IV and Queen Adelaide were crowned with great splendor in Westminster Abbey. Soon after witnessing this imposing and solemn ceremony, he embarked in the packet ship Roscoe for New York, where he arrived December 2d, 1833.

In January, 1834, he interested himself in the one-half purchase of the ship York, and also the control of her voyage to England and China. He embarked in February in the packet ship Europe for Liverpool to prepare in advance a cargo of British goods. The ship soon followed, and arrived in due season. On this occasion Alexander Hubbell, the fifth son of Ezekiel and Catharine Hubbell, born at Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, June 13th, 1813, was a passenger. He was then twenty-one years of age, and had been a clerk in the Connecticut Bank at Bridgeport, Connecticut, of which institution his father was President. He was now employed to assist his brother Henry in the voyage of the York, and fit himself for business in China. On the 20th of April the ship, under command of Captain J. W. Sterling, and ready for sea, Mr. Hubbell and his brother embarked, and on the 15th, 1834, they arrived at Canton. [The charter of the China branch of the East India Company expiring at this time, a peaceful continuance of the trade was somewhat dubious, and for awhile interrupted business. The Chinese required new regulations in their future intercourse with the English. The Viceroy of Canton was unwilling to recognize the newly-appointed superintendent of the British trade, the Right Honorable Lord Napier, who was sent out by the King, and arrived with his suite in July, 1834, and soon after proceeded to Canton. The refusal of his Lordship to confer with the Hong merchants, and of the Governor to receive any communication, except a petition, placed the two parties in an awkward position. The Company had always sent their communications through the Hong merchants as a petition. The close confinement which his Lordship had been obliged to observe after his arrival in July, and the servants in his factory having all left, and the trade stopped by order of the Viceroy on the 2d of September had, in addition to the harassing nature of his position, seriously impaired his health, and on the 14th of September he announced his determination to retire to Macao until reference could be made to England. As soon as his Lordship had left Canton trade was resumed, and continued with quiet and regularity. The suffering and annoyances he experienced on the passage down to Macao were too much for his debilitated frame, and he died soon after his arrival at that place a few months after landing in China. This event prepared the way to the subsequent contest in 1839 and 1840.]

Disposing of the outward cargo of the York and purchasing a return one of tea, he sailed from Canton December 31, 1834, and arrived at New York, April 14th, 1835.

During the summer of 1835, Mr. Hubbell entered into a joint charter of the ship Mattakesett with his friends, Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall, to load her on joint account with British and Scotch goods for Manilla and China. He proceeded to Liverpool in the packet ship Caledonia, where he arrived the 10th of September. He prepared cargoes in advance of the arrival, not only for the chartered ship, but also for the ship York. They were both loaded, despatched, and sailed the same day. The York to China direct, consigned to Messrs. Gordon & Talbot, at Canton, and the Mattakesett to Messrs. Peele, Hubbell & Co., Manilla. On the 1st of December, 1835, he returned to New York in the packet ship Europe, where he arrived January 2d, 1836. On the 31st of March following, he married Jane Maria, daughter of Charles Bostwick, Esq., of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

During the winter of 1836, he again chartered the ship Superior, under the command of Captain John W. McEwen, for a voyage direct from New York to China and back. She sailed in May, consigned to Gordon & Talbot, at Canton. His brother Alexander was a passenger under an arrangement to be employed in the counting-room of the consignees. She loaded, mainly with freight, and arrived, on her return home, in May, 1837. Alexander continued in the employ of his friends at Canton, until November, 1837, when his health failing, he was obliged to leave China. He returned home in the ship Nabob, and arrived at New York in May, 1838, and died August 31st, 1840, aged twenty-seven years.

The York arrived on her second return voyage from China in January, 1837, via Batavia, and the Mattakesett soon after, from Manilla direct, when her charter ceased. These two cargoes, coming on the market at a time the country was upon the verge of universal bankruptcy, trade paralyzed and during the winter, the suspension of the Bank of the United States, and the failure of three prominent London banking houses Messrs. Thomas Wilson & Co., Timothy Wiggin & Co., and George Wildes & Co., all extensively involved in their relations with America, it is unnecessary to remark that the result was disastrous to all concerned.

The York made a third voyage to China direct and back, and on her return home she arrived in May, 1839, and was sold. This closed Mr. Hubbell's relations with his friend George B. Reese, of Philadelphia. Peter Remsen & Co. went into liquidation in 1836.

During the year 1839, he entered into an arrangement with Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall to represent them in China, for a period of years in a joint business between China and New York. They purchased the ship Luconia, of 500 tons register, each one-half interested, as a commencement of the business. She proceeded to Mobile for a cotton freight and arrived at Liverpool in May, 1839. Meanwhile, with his family, he sailed in the packet ship Gladiator, February 28th, 1839, for London with a view of taking them with him to China. Looking after some special business for his New York friends, and arranging credits and other means for the China enterprise, at the same time extending their correspondence in England, gave him full employment. Troubles in China foreshadowed, caused his family to return to New York early in June in the packet ship Roscius, commanded by Captain Collins. The Luconia arrived at Liverpool and with little delay discharged her inward freight, and taking in ballast only, she was soon despatched. Mr. Hubbell embarked in her. She sailed on the 18th of June, and arrived in China waters October, 1839. He found the British trade stopped and immediate relations between England and China interrupted, and war imminent. [The details and merits of the opium question which ended in war between England and China, the latter paying an indemnity to the former of $21,000,000 for the opium destroyed by China, and expenses of the war, is now a matter of history. An interesting account, and the most reliable record of that war may be found in Dr. W. S. Williams' Middle Kingdom, Vol. II.] Nonintercourse with the English, however, led to profitable employment for the Luconia, and also the ship Ann McKim, consigned to his care. Covering British property inward, disposing of it and investing the proceeds in tea and raw silk, and getting it away from Canton under the American flag, was a source of great profit to the American merchants resident at Canton, who became the medium of the English houses in covering and conducting the business of this vast amount of property.

After employing his two ships for six months in transporting British property between Canton and the outer anchorages, and the season drawing to a close, he despatched the Luconia to Manilla to load for New York. During the season he had shipped largely of tea to London, transhipped to English ships outside of the Canton River, in preference to shipping to the United States. His health not good at that time, he was unwilling to remain in China any longer; and as the Ann McKim was safely out of the river, with a full cargo of tea and raw silk, on joint account with his New York friends, and the trade permanently interrupted at the near approach of the British naval forces and transports, he decided to return home in this ship. Expecting the arrival of the Ship Konohassett daily from the west coast of Chili and Peru to his consignment, he made arrangements with his friends, Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., to detain her on arrival until the expected blockade of the Canton River was raised, and then load her with a full cargo of tea for account of the concerned, consigned direct to Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall, New York. Immediately on arrival of the English naval forces in China waters, and notice of the blockade officially announced, he sailed on the 25th of June, 1840, and calling at Batavia and St. Helena, arrived at New York in November following. He left the ship off the coast of New Jersey in a pilot-boat, instructing the captain to remain near to Sandy Hook until he received orders from New York to come into port, and meanwhile, to communicate with no one. He reached New York the same evening, and proceeded to Mr. William H. Aspinwall's residence, in College Place, where he remained incog. until Tuesday morning following. The Luconia, from Manilla, with sugars and hemp, arrived a few days after the Ann McKim. The effect of the news of the blockade of the Canton River, of which he was the bearer, may be readily imagined and unnecessary on this occasion to furnish it. We therefore, continue our sketch under a changed state of things. Supercargos were abolished about the year 1840. Commission houses established throughout the Eastern world, and competition of trade so great that foreign enterprise could no longer bear the expense, and thereafter ships went and continue to go consigned direct to established houses. [The name, Supercargo, originated centuries ago, with the British East India Company. Their agents abroad were known as Supercargos, and their residences and places of business were called factories. To become a Supercargo and reach the responsibility of a voyage to China was the height of the ambition of the young American in the counting-room of mercantile houses fifty years ago. Frequently navigating unknown seas, visiting remote places of trade, and declining to take any correspondence, carried with it a never-failing source of interest as compared with maritime commerce of the present day, when science has brought navigation to such perfection, and reliable sailing directions and charts for every sea in common use, and trade now opened and overdone with all parts of the world, leaves little of interest to anticipate in any direction to which foreign enterprise may be invited.]

Soon after Mr. Hubbell left China, arrangements were made with the authorities at Canton whereby tea found its way down the inner-passageto Macao, a distance of one hundred miles, and both American and English ships succeeded in obtaining cargoes. Meanwhile the Konohassett arrived, and was loaded with a full cargo of green tea and sailed for New York, where she arrived in July, 1841. The cargo was sold immediately and resulted in a very profitable voyage.

In the winding up of the joint business on this occasion, Mr. Hubbell considered himself independent and resolved to withdraw from foreign commerce and quietly settle himself at New York City, but the taste for distant adventures still lingering, induced him not only to continue his relations with China, but to increase his interest, and entrust it to the management of agents abroad. He entered into new arrangements with his friends Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall, by which the Ship John G. Costar was purchased, in one-fourth of which he became interested, and which, added to his one-half interest in the Ship Luconia, and at this time one-fourth of the Ann McKim, he at once found himself engaged in a business of no little moment. The managing owners were to furnish ample funds to load these ships through letters of credit on London, and other means, making their commissions for so doing, and thus the business was inaugurated. In 1842 these plans were in the course of operation. Mr. William Lawrence, of New York, the recognized agent of Messrs. Howland & Aspinwall, in China, and approved by Mr. Hubbell, was passenger in the Ann McKim. She sailed late in November, 1840, and the Luconia soon followed via Bombay. For some time after his arrival at Canton he unfortunately found himself embarrassed with two ships in port under his care. The one lying at her anchors seven months, and the other a much longer period. Meanwhile, Mr. Lawrence suddenly died, which event left matters in an unpleasant situation. At a later period, under advices and instructions from the owners, the two ships were finally loaded by Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., and despatched direct to New York. The John G. Costar, with Mr. R. P. Dana on board as Supercargo, arrived at Canton in August, 1842, from Bombay, with a cargo of India cotton on owner's account. Having other means under his control, he awaited the forthcoming crop and loaded his ship with a cargo of fresh tea, and sailed for New York in December, 1842, and arrived the middle of April, 1843. The long detention of the two ships, and thereby losing the season, brought their cargoes to an over-loaded market, and the result proved disastrous. Mr. Hubbell was the great sufferer and left in a position so weakened, and displeased with the management of the business, that he was unwilling to continue his interest and risk the chances of success through the same channel in which he had met with disaster. The vacancy made by the death of Mr. Lawrence was filled by Mr. Samuel Comstock, and closed Mr. Hubbell's relations with this distinguished firm. This unfortunate result led, in 1846, through the influence and kind feelings of these friends, with whom he had been in close relations of business for many years, to placing him, with his moderate means still left, in a domestic business with which he was unacquainted. An unsuccessful experience in this new field, terminated in 1847, in the unfortunate liquidation of a limited business in a very short space of time.*

With a view to recover his losses experienced from 1843 to 1847, he resolved to turn his attention to his former field of operations in China, and sailed from New York in the Steamship Niagara, June 25th, 1849, for England: thence by the Peninsular and Oriental Steamer Ripon, from Southampton to Gibraltar, Malta and Alexandria. From Alexandria through the Mahmoody Canal to Rosetta; and thence by an Egyptian Steamer up the Nile to Cairo. Remaining a few days at Cairo and its vicinity, he took his leave of the Pyramids and the tombs of the Caliphs, and proceeded across the desert on camels and donkeys, eighty-four miles to Suez, at the head of the Red Sea. Here passengers found shelter in a large hotel, belonging to the Pasha of Egypt, with tolerable accommodations. [There was nothing of special interest to break the monotony in traveling over a sandy desert, except the mirage, between two and four o'clock in the afternoon, when the sands are heated, and which at first sight presents a strange illusion, and occasionally a Gazelle or Antelope seen bounding across the beaten camel tracks traveled by caravans for thousands of years between the valley of the Nile and the Red Sea. At Suez, a wretched filthy Arab town of about 2,500 inhabitants, he was detained several days waiting the arrival of the steamer from India with homeward-bound passengers. During the interval he ventured on a donkey to the "Wells of Moses," called in scripture "Mahra" or bitter waters; about nine miles south of Suez on the eastern side of the sea in Arabia Petrea, where it is supposed the Israelites first halted after their exodus from Egypt. The water of these wells he found saline and brackish; and still used by the Arabs at Suez, transported thither daily in hog skins on camels and donkeys.]

The Steamer Precursor from Calcutta finally made her appearance; and after coaling, the outward-bound passengers gladly rushed on board. Soon made ready to start on her return trip to India, she weighed anchor and proceeded down the sea to Aden (the Gibraltar of the East, now in possession of the English), on the coast of Arabia, historically called "Araby the blest:" thence to Point de Galle on the coast of Ceylon. At this place the passengers for China were transferred to the Steamer Pekin, and proceeded thence across the bay of Bengal, through the straits of Malacca, calling at Penang and Singapore, and thence to Hong Kong, where she arrived October 20th, 1849. [Nothing particular occurred during the trip from Suez except the unusual weather experienced in the southern part of the Sea. The distance from Suez to the straits of Bab el Mandeb, the outlet of this sea, is about twelve hundred and fifty miles; and the average passage by steamer about six days. The third day out, after leaving the Gulf of Suez, an extraordinary atmosphere encompassed the route. The sea was smooth, with not over a ten mile northerly breeze, which, with a southerly course and speed of the steamer, produced almost a calm. The sun not glaring; no clouds; everything in the dim distance wearing a reddish appearance; thermometer never rising above 92°: at the same time a sensation of terrible heat and great prostration. Passengers suffered with vertigo and were frequently struck down when walking the deck, and there was no relief beyond bathing the head continuously with sea water to create a moisture on the heated skin. The temperature of the water was from four to six degrees higher than the atmosphere, peculiar to the southern portion of the Red Sea. During the three days two deaths occurred, and all suffered more or less. The sixth day out from Suez, early in the morning, to the joy of all on board, the steamer passed through the straits into the Arabian Sea, when as if by magic every one was relieved. The simoon that prevailed and had been blowing in the southern part of the sea all the month—as reported by the Arabs at Aden—was something more than a severe sirocco and cannot be described. While the good ship traveled along steadily over a smooth sea, a solemn silence seemed to seize the officers and all on board. The crew, although natives of India, realized the unusual weather. The mercury in the barometer ranged at extreme low figures, and as subsequently reported by professional writers then in Egypt, and in that vicinity, it was something that had not been experienced for many years, and the most unfavorable month to pass the Red Sea.]

After ascertaining the condition and prospects for business in China under the new regulations of trade with foreign countries, he visited Manila. At this place he loaded the Bremen Ship Aristides for New York and returned to China in the French Ship Paquete d' Bordeaux. In March, 1850, he sailed from Hong Kong in the Peninsular and Oriental Steamer Malta on his return to America, by the same route which he passed over on his outward journey, and arrived at Southampton 25th May. He proceeded to London and soon after embarked in the Steamer Canada at Liverpool, and calling at Halifax arrived at Boston June, 1850. [At Point de Galle, passengers from China were transferred as usual to the homeward-bound steamer from Calcutta making the connection at that place. On board this steamer, Prince Jung Bahadoor and suite—Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Nepaul—were passengers. They occupied a large portion of the accommodations on board for which they paid 46,000 rupees, or its equivalent, $20,000. This young dashing fearless Oriental, had murdered his uncle Mahtabar Singh, for which he was awarded a place in the new ministry. Soon after, in 1846, he shot down fourteen Nobles with his own hand, in the audience hall of the Palace, which made him Prime Minister. A narrative of these savage acts and reasons therefor he calmly and willingly related. He was "en route" as Ambassador to England with costly presents to Queen Victoria. Upon the eve of landing at Southampton the Prince presented to each of the passengers on board a heavy bladed short hanger, or sword, used by the Nepaulese Infantry when charged upon by Cavalry at close quarters. At the time of his envoy to England he was thirty-four years of age.]

Mr. Hubbell was engaged at home for some time in winding up and settling the estate of his mother, who died during his absence, at the age of seventy-five years. In February, 1851, he again embarked on his return to China in the American Steamer Franklin, via England. Finishing his business in London, he took passage in the Peninsular and Oriental Steamer Euxine, and sailed from Southampton, following the same route as on his previous voyage through the Mediterranean to Egypt and across the desert to Suez. On this occasion he made the transit of Egypt in comfortable two-wheel vans arranged for six passengers, and drawn by six Arab horses. Continuing from Suez by steamer down the Red Sea and through the Arabian, Indian and China Seas, he arrived at Hong Kong in May, 1851. He was occupied at Canton about ten months, except a short interval, during which he made a visit to Manilla where he loaded the British Ship Blackfriars for New York, and returned to China in the French Ship Ville de Paris. She was the first vessel under the English flag with a cargo from Manilla to America after the removal of discriminating duties against foreign bottoms. His China orders all executed, and his interest suddenly calling him home, at the request and desire of his friends to consult with him in the building of ships suitable for the China trade, he left Canton March, 1852. Pursuing the ordinary overland route through Egypt, he embarked at Alexandria and landed at Marseilles; thence by rail to Paris and thence to London. At Liverpool he sailed in the American Steamer Baltic and arrived at New York the middle of June following. Making arrangements to return immediately to China and there to remain for several years, he took passage in the American Steamer Atlantic and sailed from New York August 16th, 1852, for Liverpool. From London he proceeded to Paris, Marseilles and Alexandria; thence by the old beaten track, called the "overland route," and arrived at Hong Kong October 16th, 1852. From this time onward he was permanently occupied at Canton, and with success, until March 25th, 1856, when he took his leave of China for the last time. [His sojourn in Eastern Asia and its Archipelago, and his extensive correspondence therewith, covered from time to time a period of about thirty-five years of almost continuous relations with those countries from his early visit to Manilla in 1821, and Canton in 1823. During this period, his personal observation of events included some or most of the great changes both commercial and political to which that Ancient Empire of China has had to succumb in her relations with Western Nations: and we may add the sailing and return of the United States Naval Expedition from China waters to Japan under command of Commodore Perry, which resulted in a favorable treaty negotiated with that country in August, 1854, by which Japan became opened to commercial intercourse with the United States of America.] He returned by the regular overland route and after leaving Egypt, he varied his former Mediterranean trips and passed through the Ionian Islands to Corfu and Trieste. From Trieste he made a short visit across the Adriatic to Venice and back: thence to Vienna, Prague, Dresden, Berlin, Leipsig, Cologne, Paris and London to Liverpool, where he took passage in the Steamship Asia for New York and arrived home the first of July, 1856, after an absence of about four years.

Remaining at home a few months and entirely relieved from business cares, he made arrangements to go abroad with his family to pass a year in Europe. With his wife and eldest daughter, the latter then eighteen years of age, he sailed in the American steamer Fulton, on the 20th of November, 1856, for Havre, making the passage in twelve days; passed the winter in Italy, and availed of the summer months for traveling on the continent; also, through England and Scotland. On his return home he embarked in the Cunard steamer Persia, Captain Judkins, and arrived in New York in the month of October, 1857, after a passage short of nine days from Liverpool.

This trip terminated his travels by sea, a tabulated statement of which is hereto annexed. Throughout this vast distance, traversed in almost every sea, he was never overtaken by accident or distress of any nature, though he had many narrow and providential escapes. His voyages and distances sailed, which summarize over 370,000 miles, would hardly be worthy of notice if compared with the authentic reports of professional navigators and naval officers. The annexed table is furnished simply as the historic record of a merchant; every voyage stated was entered upon with a carefully conceived and special object in view, which system continued by sailing vessels, as before stated, until about 1840. The character and magnitude of his business from early life were such as assured him relations, both social and commercial, with the leading houses of the great mercantile centres of the world. Few of his countrymen living at the time this brief narrative is written can more fully and accurately refer to prominent commercial events at home and abroad, and to political questions connected therewith, for more than half a century, than the principal subject of this sketch; but we are constrained to pass on to the most eventful and the most trying experience of his life, already covering, though brief, more space than we intended to occupy. To do it justice and relate in extenso the magnitude of his business operations from 1857 to 1868, which abruptly terminated in an unnecessary assignment, covering liabilities of over three millions of dollars, fails to come within our assigned limits. The winding up of these vast transactions at home and abroad; the irregular management and liabilities of the assignees, one of them a defaulter for a large amount in his trust; the enormous and unnecessary sacrifice of property, estimated at nearly $500,000; the useless litigation created by attorneys, which alone absorbed no less than $175,000, including cost of administration; the extraordinary manipulation and novel proceedings, unheard of in the settlement of a commercial embarrassment, would furnish material for a volume of no small dimensions, a few salient points of which is all we can give to complete this hastily written sketch.

Conversant with maritime commerce and its relations with China and Eastern Asia generally, Mr. Hubbell interested himself, in 1857, with friends to some extent in tonnage, mainly as an investment in the freighting business, especially with those countries ; and at the same time with a view to pleasant occupation in conducting the correspondence and occasionally interesting himself and the other owners in small adventures in aid of giving dispatch to these ships. With a foreign credit ample to meet his moderate requirements, he confined himself within a safe and narrow compass, not desirous of again exposing himself to commercial hazard, and quite content and satisfied with his then pecuniary condition. Thrown, however, into the atmosphere of distant operations through these limited investments, he unfortunately soon found himself again interested in a very extensive business, and in 1864 the sole correspondent, and also, to some extent, managing owner of no less than twelve ships and steamers, and connected therewith a heavy importer of merchandise from India, China, Manilla, and Eastern Asia generally ; also, relations with England. The extensive correspondence, which the business entailed, and the charms of which still maintaining its ascendancy in the various branches of domestic and foreign enterprise, led him to a point—not unusual in the course of a large business—where he required assistance. Unexpectedly, his associate, Mr. R. L. Taylor, a capitalist, became alarmed at the extent of their liabilities ; and at the moment, his mind demoralized and incapacitated to calmly view the situation, he was unfortunately over-influenced by his friend and confidential adviser, Mr. John R. Gardner, and in face of a very large amount of available securities, and without consulting Mr. Hubbell, he decided upon the suicidal act—quite ignorant of the consequences to follow—and hastily made an assignment. Mr. Hubbell, overtaken with surprise, not for a moment entertaining even such a possibility, was compelled, after great urging, to execute the fatal instrument conjointly with his friend, Mr. Taylor. Mr. Gardner, the principal of the three assignees, at once assumed the sole management of the assets, and while recklessly realizing a large amount of the property, suddenly died, when it was discovered he was a heavy defaulter in his trust covering over one hundred thousand dollars, aside from a much larger amount previously loaned to him by his friend, Mr. Taylor, upon his (Gardner's) sole responsibility ; while endeavoring to retrieve the immense losses he had incurred, he held the agency and full powers of attorney of Messrs. Fielden Bros., a rich banking house in England. This position, with an unlimited credit, gave him a high and strong standing, far above and beyond suspicion. It enabled him to conceal his unfortunate private speculations and shortcomings of several years' growth, until finally, led to desperate alternatives, he conceived the ultimate hope of overcoming his embarrassments by the use of the assigned assets. Meanwhile, his principals in England were unknowingly suffering in a large amount of trust funds and balances in his hands belonging to them, all of which startling facts his death only brought fully to light. But for this unfortunate position, and his great influence with Mr. Taylor and his friends, within six months, such was their visible success, as shown subsequently, Taylor & Hubbell would have been financially relieved. On the contrary, the estates once in the hands of attorneys under an assignment to a controlling power, which Mr. Gardner's standing gave him, it was utterly impossible, under such circumstances, to arrest the destructive course of the property. Had there been the slightest doubt or suspicion of his financial condition, or had Mr. Taylor been possessed of greater powers of mind and firmly stood upon his financial strength, no fatal result would have befallen them, as they were, in face of very heavy losses, unquestionably solvent; but panic-stricken, as he was, and his feelings intensified, under the influence which Mr. Gardner wielded, caused the disastrous and unhappy event.

In August, 1874, the joint assignment of Taylor & Hubbell, also their individual estates were released by the assignees and the assignors reinstated. At the same time individual releases between Mr. Taylor and Mr. Hubbell were also exchanged. Mr. Taylor died in January, 1879.

We may add, that during Mr. Hubbell's home commercial life he was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and one of the original founders of the Mutual Life Insurance Company; also, a trustee of several institutions, and one of the early members of the Union League Club. He was a liberal contributor to the expenses of the war, and among others assisted President Lincoln in the sum of $1000 each, his salary being then only $25,000 currency per annum.

In view of the many ancient and eminent houses of the past to which we have had occasion to refer in our narrative as overtaken by misfortune, and with whom the living subject of our sketch had extensive relations, it may not be considered inappropriate in closing to record the following lines, that—

"In the fluctuation of mercantile speculation there is something captivating to the adventurer, even independent of the hope of gain. He who embarks on that fickle sea requires to possess all the skill of the pilot and fortitude of the navigator, and after all, may be wrecked and lost, unless the gales of fortune breathe in his favor. This mixture of necessary attention and inevitable hazard, the frequent and awful uncertainty, whether prudence shall overcome fortune, or fortune baffle the schemes of prudence, affords full occupation for the powers of the mind, and trade has all the fascinations of gambling, without its moral guilt."

NOTE.—The Author has included in this sketch much that is irrelevant; however, as many of the passages are interesting, he hopes they will be read with satisfaction.

Harvey Hubbell

HARVEY HUBBELL, of Long Hill, Fairfield County, Connecticut, is a gentleman so well known to members of the Hubbell Family, that I deem it superfluous to write his biographical sketch, preferring to give an original letter received from him a few months ago, believing that it tells the story of his life in a much more effective manner than my humble pen could presume. I also append an article from the Bridgeport Standard of March the 6th, 1878, written in commemoration of the celebration of his eightieth birthday.

“LONG HILL, FAIRFIELD COUNTY, CONNECTICUT, July, 1880.
WALTER HUBBELL, Esq.,

DEAR SIR: According to promise I give with my poor trembling hand, a brief history of my life; if it is of any use to you, or any one, you are welcome to it, if not, please put it among your waste papers.

I take from the old family Bible: ‘Harvey was born March 6th, 1797,’ in the town of Huntington (now Monroe), in County of Fairfield, State of Connecticut. After receiving a commonschool education, I served four years as an apprentice to the tailoring business with my father. At the age of twenty, my father gave me my time, and in company with three other young men, I started for the then far-off State of Ohio to seek my fortune. We were thirty-three days on our journey, leisurely walking from place to place. I settled down at my trade in Columbus (the capital of the State), and after spending a little less than two years, returned to Connecticut to marry a lady to whom I was previously engaged. On my return home my father entreated me to give up the West and remain in Connecticut for his sake. I did so, and settled in Weston (now Easton), in Fairfield County. I took apprentices and drove the business pretty strong, but living at a central location I was put forward as a military captain, then as justice of the peace, and in every conceivable form I had offices more than I could attend to, and found them not at all profitable. I found that it interfered with my business, and in 1836, sold out and removed to New York City, where I had charge of a large clothing house in the New Orleans trade. Subsequently I became a partner under the name of Taylor, Hubbell & Co. We did a flourishing business; the year the war of the Rebellion broke out our assets were $853,000, and our liabilities $125,000, but so recklessly was the war waged that we had barely enough money to pay our debts before it was ended. In 1862 I removed my family to Long Hill, Connecticut, where I located a factory for the manufacture of gentlemen's underwear, and was successful in doing a business sufficiently large to restore in part my former prosperity, and now in my old age have enough to live upon without anxiety or scantiness of living.

I was married to my first wife at about twenty-two years of age, and we had five children: Orange Scott Hubbell, Charles Elliott Hubbell, Harriet Atwood Hubbell, John Wesley Hubbell, and Wilbur Fisk Hubbell. In 1856 I was married to my second wife, and we had three children, Carrie Hubbell, Harvey Hubbell, and Carrie L. Hubbell. The first, Carrie, died when but six months old (a sweet child, now lying in Greenwood).

The above is a brief outline of my career. I could write a volume that would be of interest to no one but myself. Now, friend Walter, if the foregoing is worthy of your notice, you can make any alterations you may think advisable, but if it is worthy of record, I cannot consent to have it go before the world without an expression of my profound reverence for the Christian religion, and a thorough conviction that sound morals, and a just sense of religious responsibility, are essentially connected with all true and lasting happiness. With profound respect,

I am yours very truly,

HARVEY HUBBELL."

"On Tuesday afternoon and eve, the 6th of March, 1878, a numerous company of relatives and friends gathered at the residence of Harvey Hubbell, Esq., to celebrate the anniversary of his eightieth birthday. Mr. Hubbell has reached the age of fourscore years with his faculties of mind and body preserved to a remarkable degree, and presents in his old age a fine specimen of a true Christian gentleman. Before the war of the Rebellion, he was located in New York City, and was a member of a mercantile firm for the manufacture of fine clothing, doing the largest business of the kind in the country. Very extensive salesrooms for these goods were also established in New Orleans, La. But of late years Mr. Hubbell has retired to this vicinity, not far from the home of his childhood, and established the business known throughout the county as 'Hubbell's Factory of Long Hill.' Here a very thriving business is carried on, and labor given to hundreds of people, the sewing machines are run by steam power, and fifty hands are employed to attend them (mostly women). Work is also sent in all directions into many of the households of the town and adjoining communities, thus carrying with it the opportunity of labor and the comforts which industry brings. Mr. Hubbell is a most excellent Christian gentleman, possessing noble traits of manly character, is a thorough business man, and has a large circle of friends and acquaintances who hold him in the highest esteem and cherish towards him a very warm affection. His vigorous old age and comfortable surroundings are the natural and just rewards of a long life of industry and Christian virtue. He is now at leisure, the business being conducted by his stepson, G. F. Hadley. May many years yet be given him in the evening of his life. Social pastimes and conversation were the order of the hour. His pastor being necessarily absent, some remarks were made with much feeling by Rev. N. T. Mervin, eulogistic of the man whose anniversary the company were celebrating. A prayer closed the entertainment."

SAMUEL HUBBELL, of Baltimore, Baltimore County, Maryland, son of Aaron Hubbell and Betsey Jennings, was born in 1804, in Fairfield County, Connecticut; was a graduate of Princeton College, studied divinity, and became a Presbyterian minister in Baltimore. He married Catharine Tilden, daughter of Mr. Tilden, of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. They had but one child, Rachel Eliza. The Rev. Mr. Hubbell died of yellow fever while on a visit at his father-in-law's house. His widow married Major Owings, of Baltimore, who died soon after. Rachel Eliza Hubbell married Leon Barnard, an Englishman. He died leaving one child, Catharine Barnard, who at the present time (1881) resides with her mother in Baltimore.

HIRAM HUBBELL, of Altamont, Labette County, Kansas, son of Peter Hubbell and Sally Hurlburt, was born in Danbury, Connecticut, November 11th, 1805, and died in 1878, as can be seen by the following obituary from the Unadilla, New York, Times, of January 2d, 1879:

"In Altamont, Labette County, Kansas, November 17th, 1878, at his residence, after a short illness, Hiram Hubbell, aged 73 years and 6 days.

Mr. Hubbell was born in Danbury, Connecticut, and while a lad his parents moved to Schoharie County. In early life he was apprenticed in this village to Deacon Seeley, a blacksmith, whom he served seven years. He married Melissa, daughter of Abijah Cady, in Masonville, and with his younger brother, Solon, moved to Butternuts, and engaged in carriage-making. His natural mechanical turn of mind and fondness for machinery and working of metals, led him to associate himself with H. R. Torrey, the pioneer of the foundry and machine shop of that place. The early death of Mr. Torrey induced him to come back to Unadilla and start the foundry and machine shops contracted by him with Weidman & Laraway. He ran them successfully for a number of years, doing a general business, making woollen machinery a specialty. Unpleasant copartner-ship connections induced him to sell his interest, and he moved to Waverly, New York, and finally to the West, where he lived up to the time of his death. He was rather liberal in his views, a strong Henry Clay Whig, with anti-slavery sympathies; an earnest Methodist of over 40 years, a conscientious, consistent Christian, and died steadfast in the faith. The peculiar affection of the throat, of which he died, prevented him from expressing himself in the latest hours of his life. He leaves a wife and seven children, and numerous friends to mourn his loss."

Luman Hubbell

LUMAN HUBBELL, of Winsted (in Winchester), Litchfield County, Connecticut, son of Silliman Hubbell and Hannah Taylor, was born in Danbury, Connecticut, August 28th, 1797.

His parents moved to Winchester in 1800, and at the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed to Earl P. Pease, a woollen manufacturer of Norfolk, Connecticut, and took up the branch of "blue dyeing," in which he became so proficient that he received one thousand dollars per year for his services, "a large salary in those days."

He resided in Massachusetts for several years, and returned to Winsted in 1828, where he became a permanent resident.

In 1831 he formed a partnership with Mr. Coe, under the firm name of Coe & Hubbell. A large business was established by this house, and in 1846 they erected a new store, and were preparing to move into it when Mr. Hubbell was attacked by a sudden illness, from which he died October 8th, 1846.

He had struggled from boyhood to "raise himself up" into what proved to be a noble manhood.

His efforts in the temperance cause were successful, and the deep and heartfelt interest he took in the emancipation of the slaves in the South showed that he really believed that all men were equal in the eyes of the law. His unobtrusive piety endeared him to all. He was a kind neighbor, and was ever foremost in all public improvements.

During his busy life he held many offices of trust, and had a decided taste for agricultural pursuits, being at his death a breeder of Devonshire cattle.

LUCAS HUBBELL, of Phelps, Ontario County, New York, son of Hickok Hubbell and Ann Loomis, was born in Lanesborough, Massachusetts, in 1793.

He was tutor and professor in the University of Vermont (in Burlington), and afterwards became pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Lyons, New York, remaining there for fifteen years, removing to Phelps, New York, where he died in 1846, after a pastorate of seven years.

JAMES HUBBELL, of Rochester, Monroe County, New York, son of Ezra Hubbell and Elizabeth Owen, was born in Peekskill, New York, January 7th, 1798.

He graduated at the New York Medical College in 1824, and commenced the practice of medicine in Palmyra, New York, the following year. He was a prominent physician in Palmyra for thirty years, and finally removed to Rochester, where he bought a large tract of land in the northeastern part of the city, and continued in the real estate business until his death.

Dr. Hubbell was at one time a Presbyterian, but united with the North Street Methodist Episcopal Church in 1851.

He was wise in counsel, devoted in spirit, liberal in giving and faithful in duty. In him the poor and unfortunate always found a friend.

He died November 13th, 1863, and in his will left a legacy of $500 to the church, also a building lot for a parsonage.

WILLIAM DAVID HUBBELL, of Columbia, Boone County, Missouri, son of Ezra Hubbell and Alice Lewis, was born January 12th, 1798, in what is now Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut.

His father was a sea captain, and was lost at sea in January, 1805, while on a voyage from St. Bartholomew to St. Kits, and his mother died soon after, and was buried in the Episcopal Cemetery in Stratford, Connecticut.

In 1810 he went to reside with his uncle, Captain William Hubbell, near Georgetown, Kentucky, an account of whose terrible battle with Indians can be seen on page 85.

Mr. Hubbell is a successful business man, and is much respected.

A very complete account of his remarkably active career has been given in the Richmond Conservator (Richmond, Ray County, Missouri), of March 11th and 18th, 1881.

MILOW W. HUBBELL, of Delaware County, New York, son of Joseph Hubbell, was born February 17th, 1798, and died February 20th, 1880. His obituary notice is given in full.

"Died, at his late residence, near Kelley's Corners, Delaware County, New York, after an illness of several weeks, Milow W. Hubbell, aged eighty-two years, three days. Deceased was born in the State of Connecticut; his parents and grand-parents emigrated to this State while he was quite young, and settled on what is now known as 'Hubbell Hill' while the country was a wilderness, where deer, bears, and wolves roamed unmolested.

While in his fifteenth year he accepted (as a substitute) the place of a conscript in the war of 1812, and was in the army three months when it was disbanded, and he was discharged.

His father died at forty-five years of age, and he assumed the responsibility of caring for his widowed mother and the younger children, laboring hard to procure a subsistence.

At the age of twenty-one he married Mary Faulkner, with whom he lived nearly fifty-four years (surviving her nearly seven years), to whom were born eleven children—seven sons and four daughters—seven of which still survive.

Deceased was a man of untiring integrity as a tiller of the soil. Strong and unflinching, as a politician, in his political views (in early years having held different offices in the town), and unswerving in his religious views."

LORING CURTIS HUBBELL, of Champlain, Clinton County, New York, was born in Lanesborough, Massachusetts, April 1st, 1798, is the son of Wolcott Hubbell, of Lanesborough, and his wife Mary, daughter of Major Thaddeus Curtis, a veteran of the Revolution.

Mr. Hubbell was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of New York in 1823.

In 1829, he married in Pensacola, Florida, Mrs. Amelia Noriega, widow of Colonel Jose Noriega of the Spanish Army.

Julius Loring Hubbell was born of this marriage, in Naples, Italy, December 6th, 1841, and was baptized under the United States Flag, in the presence of Mr. Hammet, United States Consul, by Rev. Mr. Remy, protestant chargé of the Prussian Embassy then at Naples, where Mr. Hubbell was spending the winter with his family under a passport from the United States.

Charles Augustus Hubbell, the second son by this marriage, was born in Mobile, Alabama, March, 1858, and married Editha Bachele, daughter of Colonel William Bachele, a distinguished lawyer and planter of Mississippi.

In 1866 Mr. Loring Curtis Hubbell married a second wife, Mrs. M. L. Brackenhoff, widow of the Rev. Abram B. Brackenhoff and daughter of Hon. Flory Moore, of Champlain, Clinton County, New York.

PHILO PATTERSON HUBBELL, of Winona, Winona County, Minnesota, son of Nehemiah Hubbell and Jemima Hayden Patterson, was born in the town of Painted Post, Steuben County, New York, February 1, 1799.

Mr. Hubbell was "brought up a farmer" until 1821, when he went to Onondaga County in his native state to visit relatives, and while there was engaged by Mr. Wilson, who had a contract on the Erie Canal, for whom he worked at drilling rocks, for which he received ten dollars per month and board, remaining with his employer until the drilling was finished in the fall. He then entered the store of William Girvan, by whom he was employed for one year, at the expiration of which he was employed in the store of Richard and George Petrie.

In 1825 he was engaged by James W. Goodman, a merchant of Claiborne, Alabama, who was to establish a business in Mobile, in the aforesaid state. Unfortunately, the vessel in which the goods were shipped was wrecked at or near Key West, Florida, and the enterprise ended.

In 1826 he returned to New York, and visited his parents in Steuben County, after which he returned to Little Falls, Herkimer County, where he remained until the fall of 1827, when he went to Buffalo, New York, where he married Miss Ann Eliza Backus, on June 26, 1828.

In the spring of 1829 he visited his old home in Painted Post, with his wife.

In the spring of 1831 he opened a hotel and was its proprietor for twelve years. The Post Office was established at his hotel, and he was appointed Postmaster, a position he held for several years, a change in the administration causing his removal.

In 1842 he was appointed superintendent of the "Chemung Canal and Feeder," and held the position for three years.

In 1845 he removed to Windsor Locks, Connecticut, and in 1846 returned to his old home in Painted Post, New York.

In 1847 he moved to Corning, New York, where he embarked in mercantile business, and was appointed Postmaster, an office he held until removed by a change in the administration.

In the fall of 1850 he was elected clerk of Steuben County, and held the office for three years.

In June, 1856, he moved with his family to Winona, Minnesota, where his eldest daughter was residing, having married Mr. Charles Henry Berry, in 1850.

During the construction of the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, Mr. Hubbell was appointed Inspector by Governor Sibley.

He has held the office of County Commissioner for fifteen years in Winona County, is an elder in the Presbyterian Church of Winona, and has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity since 1820. As a christian, as an honorable man, kind husband and father, he is loved and respected by all who know him.

From "The Winona (weekly) Republican," of Wednesday, February 9th, 1881:

"Masonic Hall, in this city, was the scene of an unusually large and pleasant assemblage on Tuesday evening, the 1st inst., the occasion being a reunion and reception given by Winona Lodge, No. 18, A.: F.: and A.: M.: in honor of P. P. Hubbell, Past Master, Past Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Prelate, being his eighty-second birthday anniversary.

About 150 members of the order were present, including members from St. Paul, Hastings, a delegation of twenty from Rochester, together with others from Chatfield, St. Charles, Lewiston, Stockton, Kasson, Minneapolis, Anoka, Benson, Pickwick, Lake City, St. Peter, Rushford, Lacrosse and Milwaukee.

Immediately after the lodge had been called to order, Father Hubbell entered the hall, accompanied by the Committee of Escort. Father Hubbell was introduced to the Worshipful Master, T. A. Richardson, by Brother I. B. Cummings, chairman of the Committee on Escort.

Upon taking the position as the acting Master of the Lodge, Father Hubbell expressed his thanks for the greeting and privilege extended to him, remarking that in this his desire to have the pleasure of opening the Lodge again was fully gratified. He then conducted the opening ceremonies, during which a prayer was offered by Rev. J. J. Hillmer, Chaplain of the Lodge.

On assuming charge Brother Dye stated that the first order of the exercises would be a reception greeting, giving every brother present an opportunity to personally greet the honored guest of the evening. This was a very impressive social scene. Father Hubbell was seated in a large chair in the East, supported by two members of the Committee of Escort. The members of the Order passed up in single line, each one being introduced and shaking hands with the venerable Father, who had a friendly word of greeting for each one. At the conclusion of this greeting the public grand honors of Masonry were given, followed by the singing of the ode: 'All hail to the morning that bids us rejoice'—a favorite of Father Hubbell's.

At the request of the Master of Ceremonies some very interesting remarks were made by Father Hubbell, giving his Masonic history, and closing with a beautiful tribute to Masonry.

He stated that Painted Post Lodge, 203 (New York), was organized when he was a boy at his father's house, his father being one of the oldest Masons in that part of the State. The Lodge was organized by Joseph Enos, Jr., who was Grand Lecturer for the western part of New York. Father Hubbell sent in his petition on his twenty-first birthday, February 1st, 1820; was initiated in Painted Post Lodge in March of the same year; passed in April, 1820; raised in May, 1820. In 1822 he removed to Little Falls, New York. In 1824-5 he received the Chapter degrees in Mohawk Chapter, No. 83; removed to Buffalo, New York, in 1827, and in 1828 attended a Masonic funeral procession in honor of DeWitt Clinton; removed to Painted Post in 1829. At this time the Lodges throughout the State had very generally suspended work, owing to the Morgan excitement. In 1832 or 1833 Father Hubbell was a petitioner with other brethren for the revival of the charter of old Painted Post Lodge, which was granted, and numbered 117. He continued a member of this Lodge until 1850; was then demitted from Painted Post Lodge at Corning, and having been elected Clerk of the county of Steuben, removed to Bath, where he joined Steuben Lodge, No. 112. In 1852 and 1853 he served as Worshipful Master of that Lodge. In 1854 he returned to Corning, and in 1856 came to Minnesota, being demitted from Steuben Lodge, No. 112, and was a charter member of Winona Lodge, No. 18, also one of the petitioners for the organization of the Chapter at Winona, which was granted. Father Hubbell has been Master of the Lodge, and served as King in the Chapter, and has represented the Lodge at the meetings of the Grand Lodge for several terms, and been elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge for one term. When a Commandery of Knights Templar was organized in this city he became a member of the same, and served as Prelate for a number of years. After the death of Prelate Ames, Father Hubbell received the appointment of Grand Prelate, which position he still holds.

The Master of Ceremonies then called out Brother J. M. Cole, Past Grand Commander, announcing that the fraternity recognized him as the 'King Solomon' of the Order in this city and a long and intimate friend of Father Hubbell, both having come from the same section of the East. Brother Cole addressed Father Hubbell, and at the conclusion of his remarks, presented two Masonic books, the 'Encyclopædia of Free Masonry' and the 'Antiquities of the Orient Unveiled,' bearing the inscription: 'Presented to Father P. P. Hubbell on his 82d birthday anniversary, by his Masonic Friends, February 1st, 1881.'

This feature of the evening was a surprise, and brought forth a feeling response from the recipient.

Several letters from parties who were unable to attend were read, prominent among which was the following:

'RED WING, January 31st, 1881.

'B. H. Langley and others:

BROTHERS: The invitation of Winona Lodge, No. 18, A. F. and A. M., to the reunion and reception to be given by it on the 1st prox. to Brother P. P. Hubbell, in honor of the anniversary of his eighty-second birthday, is received.

I deeply regret that other engagements render it impossible for me to be present on that occasion, and with you join in paying to our venerable brother that tribute of brotherly love and esteem so eminently due to him whose Masonic life extends over a term of years greater than most of us can count as the period of our human existence.

Although I have not the privilege of claiming with our brother that intimate acquaintance and friendship enjoyed by those of you with whom he has passed so many of the declining years of his life, yet it has been my good fortune frequently to meet him, both officially and socially, and like all with whom he comes in contact, I have become inspired with respect for him as a man, and love for him as a consistent, faithful, zealous Mason, and have ever found him one of whom it can truthfully be said:

"Age sits with decent grace upon his visage,
And worthily becomes his silver locks;
He wears the marks of many years well spent,
Of virtue, truth well tried, and wise experience."

Please extend to Bro. Hubbell my congratulations upon the recurrence of that day which entitles him to count as the years of his pilgrimage a number greater than that beyond which we are taught that strength is but labor and sorrow—and permit me with you to join in the heartfelt prayer that he may be spared to join with you in many other like testimonials of the love and high esteem which he occupies in the hearts of his brethren. He justly deserves every tribute of respect and mark of affection which you can pay him as a man, Mason and Christian. And to you, my brothers, I am sure our worthy brother will join with me in saying in the words of one of his favorite poets:

“ Within your dear mansion may wayward contention,
Or withering envy ne'er enter;
May secrecy round be the mystical bound,
And brotherly love be the centre.”

Wishing you all a happy and long-to-be-remembered occasion, I am,

Yours fraternally,

W. C. WILLISTON,

R.: E.: Grand Commander.'

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Lodge was formally closed, and the members and visiting brethren participated in a banquet in the hall adjoining. The accompanying exercises consisted of singing, together with a few remarks, and closing with 'Auld Lang Syne,' much credit being awarded to the quartette for their fine music.

The company then adjourned to the main hall and joined in social intercourse, during which Father Hubbell sang with much feeling 'Burns's Farewell.'

An interesting feature of the evening was a collection of old Masonic certificates and documents, together with regalia, jewels, etc., used by Father Hubbell in his early days.

The occasion throughout was one of unalloyed pleasure, and will be long remembered by all who participated therein."

HORATIO WILLIAM LAW HUBBELL, of Philadelphia, Pa., eldest son of Walter Hubbell, Esq., merchant of New York City, was born on Brooklyn Heights, N. Y., July 9th, 1799. Jonathan Law, the last Colonial Governor of Connecticut, was his maternal great-grandfather, his maternal grandfather, the Hon. Richard Law, was a member of the Continental Congress and first Chief Justice of Connecticut. At an early age he had the misfortune to lose his father, and his education was conducted under the supervision of his mother until he entered Union College, at the age of fourteen. The climate of Schenectady, N. Y., not agreeing with him, he was transferred the following year to Yale College. A very amusing pamphlet published about 1850, gives his views of the imperfect system of education adopted at this latter institution, and suggested changes that would take Yale from the rank of colleges and place her amongst the foremost Universities of the age. Many of these suggestions have since been adopted and their wisdom vindicated by the enlarged facilities and prosperity of her Alma Mater. He graduated with honors in the class of 1818. Selecting Philadelphia as his future residence, he entered (as a fellow-student with the late Justice Sharswood and Hon. Henry D. Gilpin) the office of the Honorable Joseph R. Ingersoll, for many years one of the leaders of a bar renowned for legal erudition and culture—an office famous for the thoroughness of the instruction furnished to the students and from which many of the most eminent lawyers and judges have been furnished to Philadelphia and other cities. After his admission to the bar, General Hubbell traveled extensively in Europe, where his acquaintance with the classics and principal modern languages gave him unusual advantages for the acquisition of an enlarged and useful knowledge.

In 1825 and 1826 he visited Saxony, and in connection with his friends William Hart, Esq., and Captain Samuel Candler, of New York, imported the first flock of Saxony sheep ever brought to the United States.

In addition to his acquirements as a linguist, his mathematical attainments were of the highest standard, and a work which he wrote upon gunnery has been adopted as a text-book in one of the military academies of this country; what is very unusual, he was not only eminent as a mathematician, but of much excellence as a poet. It is seldom that logical exactness and a lively imagination are combined in one individual as they were in General Hubbell.

In 1842 he was elected brigadier of the third brigade, Pennsylvania Volunteers, comprising the troops in the southern part of Philadelphia County. During the year 1844, in which most disgraceful riots took place, the exertions of General Hubbell and the activity of the troops under his command saved the Catholic Churches of St. Paul and St. Joseph from the fury of the mob.

The greatest lustre General Hubbell has added to the name has given him a world-wide reputation. It is that of being the first to suggest the practicability of communicating between Europe and America by means of a telegraphic cable, and suggesting the existence of a plateau at the bottom of the ocean.

Of course there was opposition, as there always is to every new project which proposes something useful to the community. When his memorial was laid before Congress in 1849, asking for the use of a Naval vessel to make soundings, and try the experiment, the only Senator who viewed the project favorably was the Hon. Jefferson Davis, so far at least as to move the reception and filing of General Hubbell's memorial,

"As probably it would be a matter that after-generations might be willing to lay hold of and investigate to their satisfaction."

General Hubbell was a facile writer, and a frequent contributor to the magazines and periodicals of his time.

For fifty years his legal practice was extensive, and his sterling integrity and the earnestness of his oratory made him very successful with juries. Prior to the consolidation of the City of Philadelphia, he was at different times the Solicitor for the districts of Southwark, Moyamensing and Kingsessing. In his personal character, his sincerity, warm-heartedness and magnanimity were striking traits. His affection for his family and friends was constant, and his attachment to his native country—the whole country—was most conspicuous ; of its capabilities and future grandeur he was never weary of speaking.

In September, 1841, General Hubbell was married to Miss Rebecca Brooks, the third daughter of John Brooks, Esq., of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. For thirty-four years they shared life's joys and cares, when death suddenly deprived him of his companion. While visiting relations in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on July 23, 1875, he fell a victim to apoplexy, a disease which seems the cause of death among men of intellect in this country ; a few shocks of a slight character had given warning, the previous winter, of the impending danger. When the last summons came, it was fortunate that it reached him when amidst those who were near and dear to him. He survived the attack only a few hours. His remains were interred in South Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, on July 27th, 1875, and the following epitaph was placed upon his monument :

"The Eminent Jurist,
The Patriotic Citizen,
The Man of Honor and Truth.
The Faithful Friend,
The Dutiful Son,
The Tender and Devoted Husband and Father."

HORATIO NELSON HUBBELL, of Columbus, Franklin County, Ohio, was born in Trumbull, Fairfield County, Connecticut, September 9th, 1799. He was the eighth of a family of nineteen children. His father, Nathan Hubbell, returned from the Province of Nova Scotia to Connecticut, his native state, in 1793. At the age of sixteen he was an apprentice to the hatter's trade, in the town of Brookfield. About this time he experienced a change of heart, and consecrated himself to a life of benevolence in the service of God. His mind immediately turned to the Christian ministry, and missionary work, as coveted fields of usefulness. These desires were warmly cherished and pursued, until Providence plainly opened before him another sphere of labor, nearly allied to the one on which his heart was fixed.

Among the first deputation of missionaries to the Sandwich Islands, which sailed in 1820, was the Rev. Samuel Ruggles, of Brookfield, Connecticut, Mr. Hubbell, from intercourse with this excellent man, became deeply interested in the enterprise in which he had embarked. Accordingly, after the expiration of his apprenticeship, September 9, 1820, he applied, and was admitted to the Cornwall School, for the purpose of preparing himself for missionary work, and devoted himself assiduously to his studies, defraying his expenses entirely by his own efforts. He was licensed to preach the gospel by the Association of Hartford, February 7, 1826.

On the first of the succeeding September, he sailed from Bridgeport, Connecticut, for Boston, Massachusetts, on his way to Nova Scotia to visit some relatives, and to find some field for useful missionary labor. During the delay of a fortnight in Boston, waiting for a passage to Halifax, the anniversary of his birth-day occurred. And the following extract from his diary will exhibit his feelings and principles, at this period of his life.

“ This day, September 9th, I arrive at the age of 27. Thus my days and years rapidly pass. How many of my age far outstrip me in influence and usefulness? O, that the talent God has endowed me with, might be rightly improved. O, that I might have a prevailing disposition, an abiding desire to glorify God, wherever my lot in his providence may be cast. How fleeting are my years? ‘ My moments flee apace.’ And O, that as they bear me on to eternity, they might bear me heavenward.”

He sailed for Halifax, on September 14, 1826, where he arrived after a passage of two days. A tedious passage of a week, in a small fishing vessel, brought him to Guysborough, the residence of his relatives. Spending a month in pleasant intercourse with a large circle of relatives, and declining to take charge of a parish in the vicinity, he returned to Connecticut, having been absent two months.

In the Spring of 1827, on the suspension of the Cornwall School, Mr. Hubbell was invited to take charge of some twelve Indian youth, and conduct them to the Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, to complete their education. The journey was performed by way of the Erie Canal, and the party reached Cleveland in about two weeks. The facilities for travel at that time were so imperfect and uncertain, that after a delay of a few days the company left on foot, taking a straight course through the woods, first to Massillon, and thence passing through Columbus, to Oxford. After conducting his charge safely to their destination, he returned to Columbus, and engaged in teaching.

A few months previous to his arrival, a warm interest in the instruction of the deaf and dumb had been awakened in the community, an interest excited and matured into practical results chiefly by the efforts of the venerable Dr. Hoge, of Columbus. An act incorporating an institution for this purpose had just passed the General Assembly, and a Board of Trustees had been organized, of which Governor Trimble was (ex officio) President, and Dr. Hoge Secretary. It was soon perceived that the only way of bringing the Institution into successful operation, was to select a suitable person who should spend a sufficient time at an eastern Institution, to qualify himself for instructing the deaf and dumb. Mr. Hubbell was engaged for this purpose, and in March, 1828, went to Hartford, Connecticut, to prepare himself for his work. He remained there more than a year and a half, witnessing the daily processes of school-room instruction, and receiving lessons in signs from the experienced masters of the art connected with that school.

On returning to Columbus, he opened his school for the instruction of deaf mutes, October 16, 1829. A single circumstance connected with its commencement may be cited as a specimen of the difficulties which were to be encountered at that time in conducting an enterprise of this character. The act incorporating the Institution was passed in April, 1827. During the interval of more than two years before organizing the Institution, efforts were made to enlighten the public mind with regard to the number of the deaf and dumb, their sad condition of darkness and ignorance while uneducated, and the entire possibility of their education, as shown by the result of the experiments in institutions already established in the country. A few weeks previous to the time assigned for opening the school, circulars stating the character and objects of the Institution, and inviting parents to send their deaf mute children, were extensively published in the leading papers of the State. Yet, when the time arrived, three pupils from the vicinity of Columbus were all that could be gathered, and two of these were of unsound mind.

Mr. Hubbell, however, was not a man to be discouraged by obstacles. Before the close of the first year the number of pupils had increased to ten, and in the course of the second year to twenty-two. When the school was once established and became known, pupils flowed in rapidly, till the house rented for its use was so much crowded that it became necessary to erect a permanent structure for the accommodation of the pupils.

Mr. Hubbell resigned his position as Superintendent of the Institution in January, 1851, but at the request of the Trustees, continued to perform its duties until the succeeding October. During many of the twenty-two years of his connection with the Institution, he had discharged the combined duties of Superintendent, Steward and Treasurer. Within this time four hundred and sixty-two deaf and dumb children had, for a longer or shorter period, enjoyed the privileges of instruction. The Institution, from the small beginning of one sane pupil and two idiots, had grown to be the fourth in the country in the number of its pupils, and had blessed with its beneficence nearly a generation of the deaf mutes of the State. Six flourishing schools, now enjoying vigorous growth, and exerting a blessed influence, have sprung from the seed planted by Mr. Hubbell in the generous soil of Ohio.

He was one of thirty-one persons who, in 1839, united to form the Second Presbyterian Church, of Columbus, and took a deep and active interest in the enterprise, which at first labored under many embarrassments, and contributed liberally of his means to its advancement. For many years he held the offices of elder and trustee.

Mr. Hubbell, though not engaged in active service after he closed his connection with the Institution at Columbus, retained a warm interest in all labors designed to relieve the unfortunate. His sympathies were moved in behalf of the idiot population of the State, and during the session of 1854 he presented a memorial to the General Assembly, urging the establishment of an Institution for their education and training; thus taking the incipient steps which have since resulted in legislative action, securing the desired object. He also engaged with zeal in the work of colportage. The cause of missions never lost its hold upon his affections, and he never ceased by his prayers and benefactions to advance its prosperity.

The last year of his life was spent in preparing for the press a work entitled "Dying Words of Eminent Persons." It embraced the last recorded words of persons who had acted a conspicuous part in the world's history, from all professions, countries and times, accompanied with brief biographical sketches of the individuals whose dying moments were depicted. Its design was to present in marked contrast with every other principle, the power of Christian faith to sustain the soul in the hour of its extremity. The course of investigation to which he was led in collecting materials for the volume, was a source of great satisfaction to his own mind, and doubtless contributed much to prepare him for his peaceful and triumphant death. On Saturday he completed and arranged his manuscript, and on the succeeding Monday was called himself to be an actor in the scenes through which he had followed so many others.

The death of Mr. Hubbell was at last sudden and unexpected. His disease, an affection of the heart, had been for some months increasing upon him, and gave him much uneasiness. On the morning of January 19, 1857, he was attacked with severe paroxysms of palpitation and distress, which greatly alarmed his family. He soon perceived that his hour had come, was ready, called his family around him, and took leave of each member; sent messages to the absent, to his former pastor, and to the church, for which he expressed his unabated affection. He spoke of his love for his family, of his faith in Christ, of his readiness to depart, and of the blessed society he should soon join. That religion, whose sustaining power he had studied in the case of so many other believers, seemed abundantly to sustain and comfort his own soul. His last moments were emphatically moments of deep and holy joy. His last words were words of peace. And the place where he died, so consecrated was it by the manifest presence of Christ, and so hallowed by the holy triumphs of Christian faith, yet seems holy ground.

Perhaps the most prominent characteristic of Mr. Hubbell was energy combined with Christian benevolence. His energy was untiring. Obstacles, difficulties, discouragements, only stimulated him to greater exertions and more determined perseverance. That he possessed a heart of disinterested and warm benevolence, the entire current of his life bears testimony. The monument which he has left of his labors for the deaf mutes of Ohio and the great West will long remain to reflect honor upon his memory, and to attest his title to a place among the real benefactors of mankind.*

FERDINAND WAKEMAN HUBBELL, of Philadelphia, Pa., was one of the brightest ornaments of the Philadelphia bar, and one of the most learned and distinguished jurists of the country. He was born in the City of New York, May 4th, 1801, and was the second son of Walter Hubbell, Esq., of that city, and Anne Law, his wife.

His lineage through both parents was derived from New England, his maternal great-grandfather, Jonathan Law, was the last Governor of Connecticut under the Colonial system, and his grandfather, the Hon. Richard Law, of New London, Connecticut, was a lawyer of eminence, Chief Justice, and a member of the Revolutionary Congress. Mr. Hubbell's father was extensively engaged in mercantile pursuits in the City of New York, and died at an early age. His mother, a woman alike remarkable for her superior mind, and personal attractions, feeling and appreciating the benefits of a cultivated mind, used her utmost endeavor to give her children the advantages of education. She lived to an advanced age to share in the successful career of her son; who never forgetting her personal sacrifices, cherished her declining years, by placing and supporting her in the home of luxury and ease.

Mr. Hubbell pursued his classical studies at Princeton and Union Colleges, and was a graduate of the last-named, under the presidency of the venerable Dr. Eliphalet Nott, and read law with the late Charles Chauncey, Esq., of Philadelphia, whose confidence and esteem he ever retained. From the time of Mr. Hubbell's admission to the bar, we can only contemplate him as the lawyer, for in that character his whole future was absorbed, and his brilliant intellect laid on the altar of his profession, in connection with his zeal, his integrity, and his fastidious fidelity to his client, and his cause. He was a lawyer pure and entire, everything around him gave way to his profession; to that shrine he dedicated his days and nights, and the dawn frequently surprised him in the preparation of his cases.

His scrupulous care and conscientious attention would not delegate to another what he might do himself, and although nature would frequently revolt at this onerous burden, still the unyielding energy of his will bent her to his purpose, until the severity of this mental labor gradually undermined a naturally sound constitution, on which he had relied too confidently, and sent him to the grave in the maturity of his manhood: the strain of business was too severe upon him, too many sought him for aid, for counsel, for advice, and for assistance: his energies could not supply all, could not last forever: he perished, and like the immortal Dunning, at the premature age of 52 years his sun declined in the meridian of its glory, at the noon-tide of its power. A victim to his noble conscientiousness, a martyr to his faithfulness, was the criticism of his friend and admirer, the Hon. William Rawle, Esq. Mr. Hubbell's legal learning and information were unbounded: whilst a student of law, he was in the habit of regularly studying fifteen hours each day: with such application, his learning was necessarily deep and extensive, and his iron memory held it always at command. His legal judgment founded on such a basis was therefore seldom at fault: led with security, and decided with confidence.

The legal characteristic of his mind was a microscopic power of analysis, that traced every subject to its most attenuated filament: and a metaphysical cast of thought, with a subtlety peculiar to itself, which detected the most delicate distinctions.

These intellectual traits gave him that commanding power which he always held, as a counsellor and advocate; and enabled him to develop his opinions with almost mathematical precision, and with great power and force of language. His power of generalization was so great, that in every case he undertook, he determined readily and with ease the leading principle from a multitude of precedents; and for this reason, and with the same facility, he referred every individual case, however modified by circumstances, to the general rule that controlled it.

In the department of a special pleader he had no superior in the United States. It was a branch of the profession that he peculiarly delighted in, because it exercised that logical accuracy of thinking for which he was so eminently distinguished, and the numerous pleas which he has left upon the records of our courts will serve as models to the future aspirants of judicial fame.

In his arguments to the Bench there was an earnest fearlessness that did not hesitate a moment about the correctness of its positions, and a confidence that his arguments would prevail with the presiding judges; because when he undertook a cause, he ascertained by the severest scrutiny and study that he was right, and then demanded from the Bench what its justice was bound to administer.

As an advocate to the jury he was warm and impressive, consummately skilful in urging upon them the force of the evidence; sternly argumentative, his manly tone of eloquence generally succeeded in convincing their understandings by the perspicuity of his statements and the clearness of his elucidations, without having resource to the flourishes of rhetoric or the flowers of oratory.

As his thought was logical, his language was necessarily concise and comprehensive; there was no useless waste of phraseology, and his meaning was conveyed in a distinct and unmistakable manner. He helped to build, to elaborate, and (if the expression may be allowed), to CLARIFY the jurisprudence of the great commonwealth through a period of thirty years; and the result of his great labors will be found where those of a lawyer only are to be found—in the reports of the State of Pennsylvania.

But the intense thought, the acumen, the mental power, labor, and industry, which led to that result, can only be estimated by those few men who stood by his side, saw his noble efforts, and know how near he came to the perfection of his profession.

Such was the character of Ferdinand Wakeman Hubbell as a lawyer.

As a general scholar Mr. Hubbell's classical attainments often afforded him, when he could snatch a moment of leisure, that delight which only the literary can feel in the lore of antiquity. He reveled in the odes of Horacé, almost all of which he knew by heart in the original tongue, and the terseness of Tacitus pleased his taste, because, perhaps, it resembled his own habits of condensed expression.

We have hitherto spoken of his giant intellect; yet amidst all his cares, and the abounding industries of his life, he never forgot the duties due to his Creator.

Mr. Hubbell was a Presbyterian from conviction, and for this cause, and in connection with his great legal abilities, he was selected to be associated with those brilliant minds that have adorned the forum of our country (William C. Preston, of South Carolina; John Sergeant and Jòseph Ingersoll, of Philadelphia), who brought the powers of their great minds, their learning and their ability, to sustain the rights of the Presbyterian Church against those who were endeavoring to assail its apostolic and divinely instituted government, and its peculiar and essential doctrines.

Mr. Hubbell's grand opening of the Presbyterian Church case lasted four and a half hours. In it he exhibited a thorough knowledge and just appreciation of the fundamental doctrines of the church, as well as its form of government and order of discipline; but the clear manner in which he showed forth the encroachment upon its rights, by those holding congregational views (which views were insidiously undermining the Presbyterian constitution), can better be expressed in his own forcible language.

"The New School party is emphatically a New England party, it being composed in a great measure of New Englanders, or their descendants. New England Calvinism is not Presbyterianism; they are Congregationalists, or Independents, and are the lineal or collateral descendants of the English Independents, who, under the guidance of Cromwell, drove out Presbyterianism after Presbyterianism had driven out Episcopacy.

Our New England brethren are proverbially shrewd, acute, indefatigable, and ambitious, and are seldom introduced into our institutions without becoming masters of them. The party which I represent, termed the 'Old School,' have long apprehended a design in their adversaries to convert the funds, the institutions, and above all, the name of this venerable Church, into the means of furthering this peculiar system of theology, and various other projects of their own."

Of his personal interest in the welfare of this branch of God's Church, another quotation may not be inappropriate, as it is the grand peroration of the whole speech, the touching appeal for unbiased judgment.

"Ours is, perhaps, gentlemen, the unpopular party. There may, perhaps, be some severe and uninviting features in our faith. It is, however, of too high and inflexible an origin to be accommodated, at will, to the prejudices of the many. We count not upon the approbation of the light and frivolous, but I am convinced that all thinking and discreet men will unite with us in a fervent aspiration, that our visible Church, the ark of a pure theology, may endure until that great day, when the angel of the Apocalypse shall raise his hand to heaven, and swear that time shall be no longer."

We must not omit to mention that this grand argument lasted fourteen and a half hours; and when we think of the energy, the deep research, the wasted tissue, the midnight oil, the time spent never to return, on this important case, we can give no better tribute to his labors than that of Dr. William Engles. That prominent divine and editor of The Presbyterian [the organ of that Society], in speaking of Mr. Hubbell, after his death, says:

"The memory of Ferdinand Wakeman Hubbell should be dear to every Presbyterian, when we remember his successful efforts in the celebrated case of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The clear and powerful argument in which he sustained its rights, the succinct and lucid manner in which he stated the points of controversy, the clear and intelligible enunciation of the points of doctrine, the cogent reasoning by which he connected them with the rights of property, and the finally triumphant results of the labors of himself and colleagues, will never be forgotten. We cannot refuse this mournful tribute to the powerful and cultivated intellect that has passed away."

In his domestic relations, also, Mr. Hubbell exhibited the best traits of a man and a Christian; as a son, a husband, a father and a brother, he had a heart, kind benevolent and expansive, with charity to all men, ready to dispense aid, and glad to soothe and solace the unfortunate.

Those who knew him best, knew how often his generous hand, his sympathetic soul was opened to alleviate the wants and distresses of suffering humanity.

His charities were not sounded in the streets, or heard by men, but are alone known to the Searcher of hearts. In conclusion, it may be said, to the honor of Ferdinand Wakeman Hubbell (at the time of his sudden death), and to the honor of his distinguished colleagues of the bar, to find that in a profession in which there exists so much self-emulation and contention, the living had the nobleness to render that homage to the dead that his hard-won merits deserved. The feeling was spontaneous, but just, all seemed to own the loss of a friend; all paid that tribute of affection to the amiable traits of a heart that had ceased to beat forever.

He has bequeathed to his profession and posterity the example of a well-spent life. Such a memory should be long and fondly cherished; the earth has lost his spirit, while the grave has added to its mouldering trophies the mortal remains of an illustrious man.

The beautiful tribute paid to Mr. Hubbell's memory, in the classical epitaph, penned by his friend, the erudite scholar and refined lawyer, Ellis Lewis, Esq., has been inscribed on the marble shaft that marks his last resting place in that beautiful cemetery, Laurel Hill. There, near the scenes of his triumphs, and near that adopted city he loved so well, his ashes now repose.

ALGERNON SIDNEY HUBBELL, of Newark, New Jersey, youngest son of Wolcott Hubbell and Mary Curtis, was born in Lanesborough, Massachusetts, about 1800, in the old homestead, which has been standing more than one hundred and fifty years, and is still in the possession of the family.

He read law with Judge Buel, of Troy, and was admitted to the bar of

New York at an early age. On returning to Massachusetts he became a law partner of the late Governor Briggs, of that State, and remained a few years in Lanesborough, during which time he was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. In 1836 he married Miss Julia Jackson, of Passaic, New Jersey, and removed to Newark, in that state, where he has since been engaged in the practice of law, which he still continues. He has been twice a member of the Legislature of New Jersey. Was a member of the Constitutional Commission which drafted the present Constitution of New Jersey, and has filled many offices of trust in the different institutions of the City of Newark.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS HUBBELL, of Champlain, Clinton County, New York, son of Silas Hubbell and Sarah Henderson, his wife, was born in Champlain, in 1803.

He was an eminent member of the Bar, and died on April 25, 1853, leaving six children.

The following resolutions were reported and adopted unanimously by the County Court of Clinton county, on hearing the announcement of his death :

“On the 26th day of April, 1853, the death of Frederick A. Hubbell, Esquire, of Champlain, was announced to the County Court of the County of Clinton, then in session, when, on motion of H. G. Robbins, Esquire, seconded by G. M. Beckwith, Esquire, and followed by remarks showing the high estimation in which Mr. Hubbell was held as a man and a lawyer, the Court, as an expression of its respect for his character, adjourned to the next day.

Immediately after the adjournment, a meeting of the members of the Bar of the County of Clinton was convened in the Court rooms. Hon. Lemuel Stetson was called to the chair, and James Averill, Esquire, appointed Secretary. After some very feeling and appropriate remarks by the chairman, G. M. Beckwith, A. C. Moore and H. G. Robbins, Esquires, were appointed a committee to draft and report resolutions expressive of the feelings and grief of the Bar in this afflictive providence. At a subsequent meeting of the Bar, the following Resolutions were reported and unanimously adopted, and, at the request of the Bar, the Court, after stating that he fully approved of the resolutions and proceedings of the Bar, and expressing his respect for the character of the deceased, ordered the resolutions to be entered upon the minutes of the Court. The following is a copy of the resolutions:

Resolved, That we have heard with deep sorrow of the death of Frederick A. Hubbell, Esquire, of Champlain, who for about twenty years has been a member of our Bar.

Resolved, That by the death of Mr. Hubbell we have lost an esteemed friend and brother, who by his kindness of manner and his untiring industry, by his great purity of character, and by a uniform exercise of professional courtesy, has endeared himself to the whole Bar of this county.

Resolved, That, as a mark of our respect for the character of our deceased brother, the Court of this county, now in session, be requested to direct these resolutions to be entered on its minutes.

Resolved, That these proceedings be published in all the newspapers of this county, and a copy be forwarded to the family of the deceased, with the expression of our grief, and our sincere sympathy in their great affliction.

JAMES AVERILL,
Secretary.

ALRICK HUBBELL, of Utica, Oneida County, New York, son of Matthew Hubbell and Elizabeth, daughter of Doctor Ebenezer Man, was born October 4th, 1801, in Utica, and died there January 18th, 1877.

The following obituary is from the Utica Herald:

"Our city was greatly startled yesterday by the very sudden death of Hon. Alrick Hubbell.

Mr. Hubbell had long been the oldest native resident of Utica. He was born here on the 4th of October, 1801, when our population was only a few hundreds in the midst of an almost virgin wilderness, to which his father had migrated from Lanesborough, Berkshire County, Massachusetts. When he was about sixteen years of age, he became secretary to Colonel Benjamin Walker, who had been an aid to General Washington. This employment indicates that young Mr. Hubbell gave then evidence of the business capacity which marked his whole career. After a service of about a year in which he accompanied Colonel Walker on his tour for collecting dues on his lands in the country about, this connection was terminated by the death of Colonel Walker, of whom Mr. Hubbell never ceased to speak in terms of admiration.

In early manhood Mr. Hubbell entered into partnership with the late Edward Curran, in the leather trade, and for many years the firm of Hubbell & Curran held rank with our foremost establishments in extent of transactions, as well as in its strength and character. About 1855, Mr. Hubbell retired with a handsome competency, and has since devoted himself to the management of his property, and to more general operations.

Mr. Hubbell was never content to shut himself up within himself. His overflowing energy led him to activity for the common weal, and he was always efficient and thorough in every trust committed to him. As chief engineer of our fire department he has had few peers in his courage and devotion. He was an alderman in 1841, was one of the commissioners for building the present jail, and was twice mayor of the city, in 1856 and 1857. In 1858-9, he served in the State Senate. In all of these capacities he made the public interest his object, and it may be doubted if Utica has ever had a mayor who served it more diligently and more faithfully. In the Senate he was conscientious and clear-eyed in his efforts for right legislation.

In 1819, the Baptists organized a second church, the first of their denomination here having been Welsh. Mr. Hubbell, in that year, had been baptized by Elder Galusha, in Whitesboro. In the next year he transferred his relations to the new Broad Street Baptist Church in Utica, and was its first clerk, and long one of its trustees. He was a teacher in its Bible class, and was not diverted from this duty by public labors. He was through life zealous in behalf of his denomination, often attending and presiding at its conventions, and consecrating his time and means to its extension. Last September he was moderator at the annual meeting of the Oneida Association, and was the oldest living Baptist within its bounds. He was a leading member of the Baptist Education Society, and for many years rendered good service as trustee in the corporation of Madison University, and on its building and finance committees gave it the advantage of his talents and experience. It is decisive evidence of the lasting earnestness of his religious principle that he spent the last hours that he was able to be about the streets, last Tuesday, in collecting means to relieve the necessities of a superannuated Baptist clergyman.

Mr. Hubbell was first a whig and then a republican. His political convictions were very strong, and his fidelity to them never flinched. Into the work of raising volunteers at the outbreak of the rebellion, he threw his whole heart. When ready money was needed, he provided it, taking the securities, and often advancing largely from his private means for the convenience of the volunteers. Our earlier regiments particularly were the recipients of many courtesies from him in this way.*

He was at one time a working director in the Utica and Black River Railroad; and to the street railroad he gave no little time and attention to its experimental days. Among the last business he did, was attention to his duties as one of the commissioners for the city, in the Utica and Clinton Railroad. He was interested in many of our public enterprises as a stockholder, and has, in many ways, contributed to the growth and prosperity of our city.

Mr. Hubbell was gifted with strong natural talents. He was careful and accurate in his business habits. He possessed a large measure of public spirit. In the offices which he filled no one ever charged him with neglect of duty, nor with seeking his own profit out of them. In the denomination with which for half a century he was actively connected, few laymen in this region were more influential or more frequently consulted. As that of one who went back almost to the origin of our local community, his death is more than the passing away of an individual; it is the snapping of ties between the present generation and its predecessors.

Mr. Hubbell leaves a widow who has long been in feeble health. Two sons, Henry S., and Alfred S., are in the furnace business in Buffalo, and his two surviving daughters are Mrs. Albon P. Man, of New York, and Mrs. J. C. P. Kincaid, of this city. His health had not been rugged for some years, but his activity and energy had concealed that fact from all but his intimate

* When the first regiment of troops was organized in Utica there were no funds with which to defray their expenses to Washington, their wages, etc. Mr. Hubbell allowed himself to be appointed paymaster and himself advanced all the necessary funds, accompanying the regiment to Washington for this purpose. The sums thus expended were subsequently refunded to him by the State.

friends; and he falls, though full of years, like a giant of the forest, whose failing strength its stalwart stature had taught all men to forget."

The following extracts are from an obituary notice which appeared in the Utica Daily Observer, of January 18th, 1877, a paper opposed to Mr. Hubbell in politics.

"Many of our readers will remember the first great war meeting which was held in Utica in April, 1861. The excitement was high, and intense enthusiasm prevailed. A subscription was started to aid the families of volunteers. Mr. HUBBELL was in his element. He headed the list with $100, we believe. Another rich and generous citizen gave $200. Not to be outdone in any work of that sort, Mr. HUBBELL arose and said that he would give $200 in addition to the sum which he had already given. The announcement was greeted with cheers, which broke forth anew when his competitor for the honor of giving away money announced that he would add $200 more to his subscription. The cheers grew into a whirlwind of applause when he increased his gift to $500, and his friendly rival pledged an equal amount. If the love of approbation could prompt a generous heart to such a noble deed, we should count that love a virtue, and not a fault.

In politics Mr. HUBBELL was a pronounced partisan of the Republican school. He had been an active Whig, and helped to organize the Republican party in this county. He never doubted, perhaps never questioned, the absolute excellence of his political faith. It was imbedded in his nature as deeply as his religious feelings. If he was sometimes unreasonable in his advocacy of extreme opinions, it cannot be denied that he was perfectly honest.

In his home-life the more tender and beautiful side of Mr. HUBBELL's character found expression. He was a thoughtful husband, a devoted father, and a most genial and agreeable host. He loved little children, and the innate purity and goodness of his nature was shown by the ready love which they gave him in return. Many young men and women in Utica can recall the time when they were little boys and girls, and ALRICK HUBBELL stopped his carriage or sleigh in the street to take them in and give them a ride. It was a little thing hardly worth mentioning, perhaps, but it illustrated the kind-heartedness of the man quite as forcibly as any words of eulogy.

Mr. HUBBELL died in the fullness of years, honored by a community whose welfare he had always sought to promote. He squared his life strictly by his sense of duty, and won an enduring place in the roll of Utica's worthiest citizens."

STEPHEN HUBBELL, of New Haven, New Haven County, Connecticut, son of Nathan Hubbell and Ann Wakeman, was born in Wilton, Connecticut, April 22d, 1802.

At the age of fifteen, he was placed under the tuition of Hawley Olmstead, who had an Academy at Wilton. After spending nearly five years in this Academy, he taught school in what was then called Saugatuck, now Westport, Connecticut. He afterwards entered Yale College and graduated in the class of 1826.

In the following year he entered the Theological Seminary, at New Haven, Connecticut, where he remained three years. After this he supplied the pulpit.

of Mount Carmel Congregational Church for six or eight months, and was ordained pastor of the church and congregation on May 18th, 1830, a pastorate which was terminated at his own request at the end of six years.

He was installed as pastor of the Wolcotville Church, on February 29th, 1837, and remained until September 29th, 1839, when he was regularly dismissed.

His third pastorate continued twelve years, in East Avon, Connecticut, but was abruptly terminated on account of the displeasure entertained by the parish against the book "Shady Side," written by his wife. Instead of being stimulated to higher and nobler attainments in the future, the parish determined to execute judgment upon Mr. Hubbell's family for the supposed offence.

In August, 1853, he was installed as pastor at North Stonington, Connecticut, where he remained for almost seventeen years, doing the best service of all his toiling years in the ministry.

From North Stonington he went to Long Ridge, in Stamford, Connecticut. The elements of the congregation were of an unusually mixed character, and the tide of business enterprises and family relations, were all moving from the place rather than flowing towards it. Here he managed to procure aid from the kindred of himself and wife, to repair the house of worship, and beautify its interior; and by this the external circumstances and condition of worship were very much changed in the place. He continued to labor here with his accustomed earnestness and untiring energy, hoping that some signal change of internal life might be seen and realized, to the great comfort and advantage of the community, but while all his hopes were not realized, such were the apparent improvements that the remembrance of these labors are not without consolation in his years of retirement.

Mr. Hubbell now resides in New Haven, Connecticut, and in the winter of his years takes comfort in reviewing the precious past, and anticipating the glorious future.

He married first Martha, daughter of Noah Stone, M.D., of Oxford, Connecticut, and for his second wife Harriet Thompson, daughter of Ezra Hawley, Esq., of Catskill, New York, on May 11th, 1859, in Albany, New York.

WILLIAM MORSE HUBBELL, of Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Isaac Hubbell and Sally Hawkins, was born in Huntington, Connecticut, February 11th, 1806.

In early life he attended the district school.

He was always very studious, mathematics being his favorite branch. He became so proficient in that particular branch that he studied surveying, and became county surveyor, a position he held for many years.

He was a prominent politician—an old-time Democrat—represented his native town several times in the State Legislature, and held many positions of trust and responsibility in Huntington, where he resided during his life.

He died March 30th, 1856, honored and respected by all who knew him.

LEVI HUBBELL, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, son of Abijah Hubbell and Clarissa Fitch, was born April 15th, 1807.

He died December 8th, 1876, as can be seen by his obituary from the Milwaukee Sentinel of December 9th, 1876.

“At 9.30 P. M. yesterday, Hon. Levi Hubbell died at his rooms on Wisconsin Street. It will be remembered that last Sunday morning he fell on an icy pavement in front of the First National Bank and broke his leg. He was carried to his rooms, the fracture was set by Dr. O. P. Wolcott, and kind friends attended him with care. The shock caused by the fall was very serious, but no fears of his general health were entertained till Wednesday night, when it became apparent that a serious derangement of the intestines existed. Physicians essayed in vain to give him relief. He continued to sink, suffering great agony with praiseworthy fortitude, till yesterday morning, when he became quite unconscious. The last few hours his sufferings seemed less intense, and death came as gently as slumber. Quite a number of his warm friends were by his bedside during his last moments. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. E. Sanderson, Mrs. N. J. Emmons, and Messrs. W. Durand, W. Sanderson, Frank Dillingham, W. B. Hibbard, and Dr. O. P. Wolcott. Owing to the suddenness of his illness none of the members of his family, except his daughter who arrived from Chicago, had time to reach the city before his death. They were immediately telegraphed for and will arrive to-day.

Judge Hubbell was born in Ballston, Saratoga County, New York, April 15th, 1807, and was sixty-eight years old. He graduated from Union College in 1827, and commenced the study of the law with John Hubbell, at Canandaigua. In January, 1833, he was appointed Adjutant-General of the State of New York by Governor Marcy, and held that office till his removal to Ithaca, in 1836, when he resigned. He had been admitted to the bar in 1831, and took an active part in politics during these years, being editor of a Democratic paper, the Ontario Messenger, part of the time. He was chosen to represent Tompkins County in the Legislature in the year 1841.

In June, 1844, he came to the then village of Milwaukee, in the Territory of Wisconsin, and at once became a member of the law firm of Hubbell, Finch & Lynde. At the first judicial election held upon the organization of the State in July, 1848, he was chosen judge of the Second Circuit, comprising the counties of Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson and Dane. The Circuit Court judges were then members of the Supreme Court. Upon the expiration of the term of Chief Justice Stowe, Judge Hubbell was chosen by his associates as Chief Justice, and held that office till the separate organization of the Supreme Court in 1852. In 1851 he was re-elected Judge of the Second Circuit, his opponent being Hon. Asahel Finch.

In 1853 charges of impeachment were brought against him, and he was tried by the Senate. The trial was one of the marked events in the history of the State. The present Chief Justice, Hon. E. G. Ryan, was the principal counsel for the prosecution, and the late Hon. Jonathan E. Arnold for the defense. After a protracted trial lasting till July, Judge Hubbell was acquitted on every count.

The Judge had the sympathies of a large portion of the community during his trial, and his acquittal gave the people opportunity to manifest their joy at the result, and exhibit their unwavering confidence in him as a citizen and an officer of the law. A special train left this city to receive him at Waukesha, and on the return of the excursionists a band of music, carriages and a large assemblage of citizens were in waiting, and hailed the appearance of Mr. Hubbell with long and continuous applause. The band led a cortage of carriages and procession of citizens to the United States Hotel, where the Judge and his friends stepped out amid the shouts of thousands. In the evening huge bonfires were aflame in the principal streets, and another large crowd of people gathered before the hotel. The Judge, Jonathan E. Arnold, Gen. McManman and others, were called for in turn, and Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Arnold spoke eloquently and feelingly of the causes that had resulted in impeachment, and reviewing the proceedings. Mr. Arnold, then a leading member of the Milwaukee Bar, was very forcible in his denunciation of the enemies of the Judge, and created great enthusiasm among the people when he referred to their friend's career in their midst. At the close the Judge and his friends re-entered the carriages, and another procession, even larger than that of the afternoon, escorted the party to Mr. Hubbell's residence, near the corner of Astor and Division, where parting speeches by Hon. John White and others closed a reception the like of which has never since been witnessed here.

The deceased, while in the zenith of his career, was a man of great individuality, and, as he never wavered from any position he deemed right, he had enemies as bitter as friends were warm in their attachment to him.

In 1856 he resigned the office of Judge, and resumed the practice of the law, in which he was very successful. In the presidential contest of 1860 he was a warm supporter of Stephen A. Douglass. They had studied law together, and were always fast friends. At the breaking out of the war he espoused the Union cause with all the fervor that always characterized him. In 1863 he represented the Seventh Ward in the Legislature, being elected as a war Democrat. Since that time he has always acted with the Republican party. In 1871 he was appointed United States District Attorney for the Eastern district of Wisconsin, and held the office till June, 1875, when he was requested to resign. During the greater part of last year he was engaged in defending the whisky suits, and showed all his old-time ability as an advocate.

Judge Hubbell was twice married. His first wife was Miss DeWitt, of Albany, one of New York's most beautiful and accomplished daughters. She bore him two sons. The eldest has lived for many years in California. The other, Col. R. W. Hubbell, is a successful lawyer in Oconto. He served with distinction in the late war, and has been many times a member of the State Legislature.

The Judge's second wife was Miss Beall, daughter of Lieutenant-Governor Beall, of Wisconsin. They had a son and daughter. The son is Dr. Singleton Beall Hubbell, now a physician in Medford, Wisconsin.

The Judge, always a handsome man, was singularly well-preserved, and retained all the elasticity and buoyancy of spirit of youth till the very last. A courtlier gentleman never graced society in Milwaukee."

FENELON HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Richard Hubbell and Sarah Tomlinson, was born July 25th, 1810, in Huntington, Upper White Mills, Fairfield County, Connecticut. He came to Bridgeport in June, 1826, to learn the trade of cabinet making, at which he served five years and one month.

In the fall of 1831 Mr. Hubbell worked at his trade in Macon, Georgia, and in the spring of 1833 returned to Bridgeport. The following summer he became connected in business with F. W. Parrott, the firm being known as Parrott & Hubbell, manufacturers of furniture.

In the fall of 1835, the above-mentioned firm failed for several thousand dollars, and in paying one hundred cents on the dollar (which was contrary to the bankrupt law passed by the Whig Congress in 1836), Mr. Hubbell was for the following sixteen years obliged to adopt the strictest economy that he might conscientiously liquidate his indebtedness, which he did to the last penny, notwithstanding the advice of many of his friends. He still carries on the furniture business under the firm name of Hubbell & Curtis, Mr. Carlos Curtis becoming a member of the firm in 1850.

As an honest, exemplary man and sincere Christian, Fenelon Hubbell has always stood foremost among the men of Bridgeport. In September, 1830, he became a member of the First Methodist Church, on Beaver Street (corner of Broad), and since that time has been a constant communicant. He is to-day not only one of the pillars of the Methodist Church, in the city of his residence, but one of the most earnest of that denomination in the State of Connecticut.

The furniture warehouse of Hubbell & Curtis is not only the largest of the kind in the city of Bridgeport, but probably does more business than any house in that line in southwestern Connecticut.

LUCIUS HUBBELL, of Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut, twin son of Isaac Hubbell and Sarah Hawkins, was born April 20th, 1807, in Huntington, Connecticut.

Like his brothers, William M. Marcus, Francis B., and Peter, he attended the district school in his boyhood, and when old enough learned the trade of a stone-mason, a calling in which he had no superior in Connecticut.

During his active life, he assisted to erect the following buildings, many of which he built by contract: State Prison, in Wethersfield, Connecticut, in 1827; Episcopal Church in Stratford, Connecticut, in 1828; his own family residence in Huntington, Connecticut, in the White Hills; and a house in Waterbury, Connecticut, in 1829; and a church, on Chapel Street, New Haven, Connecticut, with two towers. He also worked on buildings in the following towns during his life: New Haven, Connecticut; Birmingham, Connecticut; Great Barrington, Massachusetts; Milford, Connecticut; Newtown, Connecticut; Norwalk, Connecticut; and Bridgeport, Connecticut; a stone dwelling for his daughter, in Monroe, Connecticut. He contracted and built in company with Harvey Johnson, a factory for Edward N. Shelton, and D. W. Plumb; a rolling-mill for Anson G. Phelps; the foundation of an iron and steel works in Birmingham, Connecticut; a grist-mill in Birmingham, for Sheldon Smith. Contracted for, and built in company with Francis B. and Nicholas W. Hubbell, a stone factory in Shelton, Connecticut, in 1872, for Edwin Wooster. Contracted for and built in company with Francis B. Hubbell, a stone factory in Huntington, Connecticut, for William Wakeley and John Shelton. Contracted and built a residence in Birmingham, Connecticut, for Thaddeus G. Birdseye, in company with Francis B. Hubbell, and the two brothers also built three vaults in Mountain Grove Cemetery, Bridgeport, Connecticut, for a private family.

Mr. Hubbell erected, without assistance, an imposing monument in the yard of the "Little White Church," on the White Hills. This monument is forty-three feet in height, and as a work of art is unsurpassed in the town of Huntington. It can be seen for miles, and is often mistaken for the spire of the church. When it is considered that for eight years this accomplished artisan labored during his leisure hours to complete this monument and carved and placed in position every stone with his own hands, some idea of his great industry may be formed.

He died in 1874, and his remains now repose beside those of his wife in the vault beneath his famous granite monument, upon which is the following inscription :

"In Memory of
LUCIUS HUBBELL,
Who became a distinguished stone-mason,
as this monument will attest.
Erected with his own hands and finished in the fiftieth year of his age.
Died Dec. 28, 1874, Æ. 68.
In hope and faith we trust he died,

SOLYMON HUBBELL, of Ohio, son of Jedediah Hubbell and Hannah Turner, was born May 18th, 1807, in Ferrisburgh, Vermont, and died October 19th, 1874, in Bedford, Ohio.

* Both inscriptions were copied from the monument by the Author while visiting members of the family on the White Hills, in June, 1880.

He delivered the following address at an annual re-union of the Hubbell family, in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, on October 20th, 1870.

“RESPECTED RELATIVES AND FRIENDS:—

In an attempt to address you upon this occasion, with my limited knowledge of our ancestry, and the consequent inadequacy to do justice to the subject; and as it will be expected that he who makes the attempt, will as far as possible seek to gratify that expectation, I shall be under the necessity of drawing pretty largely upon the statements of facts and incidents in the history of our forefathers as gathered from those with whom I have corresponded in my recent efforts to obtain a correct chronology of our ancestors since the time of their first landing on this Continent.

From an old Family Bible now in the possession of Mrs. Philena Clark, of Bloomfield, Morrow Co., Ohio, a sister of Harvey Hubbell, of Stepney, Fairfield Co., Connecticut, I gather the following very important piece of information.

James Hubbell*—who 'tis said lived to the age of 104 years,—together with a brother whose name is unknown to me, sailed from Wales and landed in America early in 1600. His oldest son was Andrew; the third in descent was Matthew; the fourth, Gideon; the fifth, Burton; and sixth, Jay, an only son who died at the age of six years.

The brothers settled in the (now) State of Connecticut, and Harvey Hubbell writes me that the old farm is still owned by the descendants of the said James Hubbell.

It would appear from the numerous progeny in direct descent from the brothers (for they are about as numerous as the Children of Israel as compared in point of time), that they were not unmindful of the divine mandate ‘multiply, and replenish the earth.’ I trace the lineage of the other brother, beginning with my father's family, back to the year 1730.

In the fall of 1811, my father, Jedediah Hubbell, with my mother and six children, viz.: Leora, Orrin, Sarah, myself, Maria and Abraham, together with my grandparents, started from Ferrisburg, Addison Co., Vermont, in company with his brother, Ephraim Hubbell, Martin Shellhouse, Noble Bates and their families, for the ‘far west’ State of Ohio, and after a long and tedious journey of six or seven weeks without encountering any difficulties other than those incident to travel at that early period, arrived at Cleveland and settled in Newburgh, on the banks of Mill Creek, about six miles from the lake shore. Being at that time but little over four years old, I could not as a matter of course, appreciate the cares and anxieties superinduced by paternal affection, and excited by the fearful apprehensions of disaster at each revolution of the wagon wheel whilst passing through what was at that time known as the Cattaraugus Woods, for the mud was as deep as John Bunyan's slough of despond, and hemlock roots as plenty as candidates for office pending an election: indeed so bad were the roads that we abandoned them entirely in places and traveled upon the beach of the lake. Taking into the account the distance, time of year and condition of the roads, more perhaps could not have been accomplished by the most sturdy pioneers of the West, and it will be readily seen that it required not only a strong motive and a settled purpose, but also that untiring energy and ability to endure, characteristic of the early settlers of this country, thus to isolate themselves from the endearments of home and friends and endure the hardships, toil and fatigue of a long journey, and necessarily slow as compared with the facilities for traveling at the present day, for there is a slight difference between the movements of the horse team of 1811 and that of the iron horse of 1870.

I believe that my father and uncle Ephraim purchased the Cleveland (now Newburgh) mills together. Nothing occurred to break the monotony of ‘pioneer life’ worthy of note, until the declaration of war by the United States against Great Britain. As all are familiar with the history and final result of the war of 1812, it is unnecessary to remark farther here, but there are a few incidents intimately connected with our own history which I will notice.

* This James Hubbell was the twelfth child of Richard Hubbell, of Pequonnock, Fairfield County, Connecticut (the first Hubbell in America). He was born in Fairfield County, and is numbered 13 in the Genealogical Record.

At the time of Hull's surrender of the garrison at Detroit, it was feared that the British and Indians would immediately turn their forces upon Cleveland and its environs, as it was at that time in point of military importance next to Monroe and Sandusky City, and it was reported that they were moving both by land and water for the port of Cleveland with a view to massacre and plunder.

The endeavor to repel so strong a force being considered inadvisable, it was deemed important that all should seek safety in flight, and as it happened with the people of Windham, Connecticut, during the old French and Indian war, although the circumstances were not exactly the same,—

'Soon all were running here and there in mighty consternation,
Resolving of the town to make a quick evacuation:
Away they went across the fields, hats, caps and wigs were scattered,
And heads were broke, and shoes were lost, shins bruised, and noses battered.'

I distinctly remember the hurry and bustle on the occasion. It was a race for life. Our household goods were hurriedly stowed away in the crevices of the rocks contiguous to our dwelling on the banks of Mill creek, our horses were harnessed, some light articles of furniture and necessary provisions put aboard of the wagon, the family stowed away under the same canopy that protected them on their journey from Vermont, and away we started for the township of Aurora by way of the 'Tinker-creek' road. We arrived at Parker's tavern about midnight, halted for a few moments and then pushed on like a man fleeing from justice, but early on the following day were overtaken by Gaius Burke who had remained at home, and finding that we were not likely to be molested by the enemy, had mounted his horse and overtaking the fugitives, bade them return in peace and quiet to their respective habitations, so we returned home right glad to save the property from pillage, but with no design to blame the man who first alarmed the village.

A tolerable degree of peace and quietude ensued, and for a time people felt secure, and betook themselves to their various occupations. Having said thus much of our early history and that of our ancestors, I will now submit a few reflections relative to their title to moral character, and I realize the propriety of exercising caution in speaking of their merits, and a commendable degree of diffidence in attempting to eulogize either the living or the dead, lest I be regarded as an egotist, or as making an effort to set them forth in an unwarrantable light, or above what their merits will justify.

I do nevertheless indulge in a feeling of pride when I contemplate that high moral character, that they, as a family, have sustained during a period of more than two hundred years, and of them it may with propriety be said that the world is none the worse for their being in it.

I speak not now of that which is generally regarded as christian morals, but of that great and ennobling principle so essential to the existence of what we deem to be the noblest work of God—an honest man—upright in purpose and practice.

Many indeed are the ingredients essentially necessary to the compound, and if in every case they have not possessed all (and 'tis acknowledged that there are exceptions to all general rules), yet as a whole, I believe they are entitled to these considerations that if as a family or a people they have not always occupied the highest positions in life, they have not degraded to the lowest.

Many of them have filled with credit honorable positions both in Church and State, and I believe they have invariably discharged the duties of their respective positions with credit to themselves and fidelity to their constituents.

As a people they have been law-abiding, subject to the powers that be without vassalage, dignified without ostentation, prudent and economical without parsimony, confiding without duplicity, and arduous in the accomplishment of their purposes with due regard to the rights of others.

I know of none of the name who has been deprived of his liberty for violating the laws of his country, or made to expiate his crimes upon the gallows, but I believe they have always been forward to obey the demands of the Government in its time of need as well as in its time of prosperity. In the recent struggle through which the Government has just passed so triumphantly, I enumerate some ten or twelve of our intimate connections, who have marched at their country's call to aid in quelling the great rebellion, some of whom have fallen and now fill a soldier's grave in the land where they fell.

William, my brother's son (and I regard his name as worthy of mention here), enlisted for the second time, was taken prisoner at the battle of the Wilderness, confined in Andersonville prison, and was there inhumanly starved to death. When we consider the direct or indirect causes of that tremendous struggle, that it was not begun on our part with a view to the acquisition of territory belonging to others, nor yet with a view to national aggrandizement superinduced by that unhallowed ambition which in ancient times and European countries has deluged the earth with blood, but that as it was a struggle for national existence we feel a degree of pride in contemplating the heroic achievements of our soldiers, both living and dead, and therefore we speak of them here as virtues in their lives worthy of record in their history and to be cherished by us with gratitude to the great Disposer of all events for that mighty interposition in the final result.

It has been the means of erasing one of the foulest blots in our national history, but further remarks are perhaps unnecessary. I will now speak of them in relation to their pecuniary condition. As a people they have not been immensely rich, nor yet immensely poor.

There may have been some exception to this, but, as a general rule, I believe it is correct that they have mostly engaged in some laudable occupation, by which they procured the necessities and even the luxuries of life, in many cases.

I know that it is considered by some, that labor is degrading; but how do you reason? 'Tis demanded that man shall, by the sweat of his brow, eat bread. If then, I eat the bread of idleness, I not only violate a divine law, but I live upon the unrequited toil of another; not only so, but I violate other items of moral laws. I am forced to either violate plighted faith, or steal. If, then, labor be degrading, theft and non-fulfillments of promises must be ennobling or exalting. I therefore consider the man that labors as fulfilling a law of his being, and as such I rank it among the virtues of our people or kinsmen. Labor is a general term, and has therefore many departments, mental as well as physical.

I believe they will compare favorably in both with the majority of their peers.

Having said thus much of our relations regarding their business habits, together with other virtues (for I regard it as a virtue), I will now consider their eligibility to the claims of honesty of purpose. In speaking of the claims to this ennobling trait of character, I shall consider it in the light of obedience to divine law, for it is true that one may be upright in practice with his fellows in all legal matters, and yet dishonest and unfaithful to his own convictions of revealed truth and required obedience to divine law.

A king, who has originated many wise maxims, in giving a synopsis of all, says: what is it but to love mercy, deal justly, and walk humbly with God.

Loving mercy superinduces just dealing, but walking humbly with God embodies the idea of passive or strict obedience to divine law in our own family. This trait of character develops itself more conspicuously perhaps than would be the case with the entire fraternity. There was a time when there were eleven members of my father's family who made a public profession of the christian religion, and as they have departed one by one, until at this day there are but five remaining—four brothers and a sister—it is gratifying to reflect that they all died confiding in the promise of a resurrection to a future state of blessedness and endless being. Also brothers' wives, and sisters' husbands, entertaining the same blessed hope.

Some of them have fallen asleep; others remain to meet and greet us upon this occasion. My oldest sister, Leora, who died in 1820, also leaves with us gratifying reflections. And now I shall have done after speaking of the origin of these reunions, or what we have previously called family visits.

Some twenty-five or thirty years have elapsed since we were accustomed to meet at the old homestead then still occupied by our beloved parents, and spend the day in friendly greeting, renewal of family associations, and, as I distinctly remember, resurrecting reminiscences of childhood, and among the many items of good cheer and social enjoyment on these occasions, stood forth most conspicuously, the table, as on the present occasion, richly laden with the choicest viands, gathered from the well-stored baskets of the members of the numerous family.

Thus have I spoken of our ancestry, their first landing on this continent, their settlement in Connecticut,* their business habits, their fidelity, their loyalty, their pecuniary circumstances, their christian morals and social character, together with our emigration to Vermont and thence to Ohio, and the incidents connected therewith. And now, esteemed relatives, if this be not an over-drawn picture, permit me to express the hope that that rich legacy bequeathed to us by our beloved parents—not in dollars and cents—but in that, the value of which is beyond computation, viz.: moral character, may be transmitted to our children and our children's children, even to the latest generation.

On motion of Sardis Fletcher Hubbell, of Michigan,

Resolved, That the foregoing address be sent to Jason Hubbell, of Indiana, as an item of history, to be made an integral part of the contemplated volume on the Hubbell family."†

ELBERT EDWARDS HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of David Hubbell and Betsey Beardsley, was born January 11th, 1817, in Trumbull, Fairfield County, Connecticut.

His parents moved to Bridgeport when he was a year old, and he has since resided there.

In 1834 he entered the counting-room of his uncles, J. and G. E. Hubbell, wholesale grocers and Boston coasters, where he remained a number of years, after which, in conjunction with his father he carried on the business of manufacturing saddle-trees, and selling groceries by retail.

In 1848 he and Mr. Sherwood Sterling established a wholesale grocery house at 380 and 382 Water Street, the firm being known as E. E. Hubbell & Co., the partnership continued seventeen years. His brother, George H. Hubbell, took Mr. Sterling's place in the firm, and after the death of Mr. George H. Hubbell, April 4th, 1877, the firm became E. E. Hubbell & Son, Mr. Charles E. Hubbell, his eldest son, taking his brother's place, April 17th, 1877.

On April 17th, 1880, Mr. Howard G. Hubbell, his youngest son, entered the firm, which has since been known as E. E. Hubbell & Sons.

The firm now carries on business at 469, 471, 473 and 475 Water Street, only a few doors from the old stand.

Elbert Edwards Hubbell is one of the best-known residents of Bridgeport, and "his word is as good as his bond." He is deacon of the First Congregational Church, established by Richard Hubbell, the First, and eight other early settlers, in 1695.

* Richard Hubbell, of Pequonnock, Fairfield County, Connecticut, was the first and only man of the name who came to America during the existence of the Colonies. This fact was not known to Solyman Hubbell when he delivered the above address.

Samson N. Hubbell

SAMSON HARVEY HUBBELL, of Eaton, Preble County, Ohio, eldest son of Jacob Hubbell and Jane Truesdail, was born April 6th, 1808, in Clark County, Ohio.

In 1814 his parents determined to make Cincinnati, then in its infancy, their future home, and moved there with their family.

In 1827, Mr. Hubbell removed to Eaton, Preble County, Ohio, where in 1831 he married Isabella Hall Acton, a lady born in Lexington, Rockbridge County, Virginia.

In 1853 he returned to Cincinnati, and embarked in the wholesale dry goods business, being the senior member of the firm of Hubbell, Alexander & Driver, afterwards Hubbell, Driver & Cotton.

After a sojourn of twelve years in the Queen City, he returned to Eaton, Ohio, preferring to spend the declining years of life in the quietude of a village rather than amidst the strife and bustle of a city.

Mr. Hubbell is a remarkably plain gentleman, condemning hypocrisy in all its forms, and in his quiet home in Eaton is beloved alike by family and friends.

CAROLINE HUBBELL, eldest daughter of Nathaniel B. Hubbell, was born in Dutchess County, New York, in 1808, was married to Richard Cole in 1843, and died in San Francisco, California, January 7th, 1876.

From a child, she was remarkable for her deep earnest piety and a desire to occupy some influential position in life, where she could be of great benefit to her race. In 1830 she established a Young Ladies' Institute in New Brunswick, New Jersey, which she successfully conducted for some twelve years, closing her school in 1842, to become a missionary to China, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. In 1843 she became acquainted with Mr. Richard Cole, who was also to go out to China as missionary, and as printer of Bibles and tracts in the Chinese language; after an acquaintance of a few months they were married, and on October 6th, 1843, sailed from the port of New York in the ship Huntress, Captain Lovett, for Hong Kong, where they arrived after a passage of 136 days.

The journal that she kept during the voyage, is very interesting, will richly repay its perusal in the description of the varied incidents, connected with a voyage through so many storms and calms.

"Ship Huntress, October 6th, 1843.

Can it be possible, that I have taken a final adieu of the shores of my long-loved native land, of friends dear unto me as myself, and that I am embarked upon the restless ocean, destined to a far distant land of strangers, not knowing what shall befall me there! It is even so. The last sad scene of parting lingers before me in all its interest; a chord of sensibility was touched unknown before. The solemn toll of the bell that summoned us to part, the long-continued pressure of the hand, extended for the last time, the silent farewell, which bespoke emotions too big for utterance, and then the weeping sorrowful eye as the boat pushed away from us, followed by the waning of long-loved, long-cherished countenances in the far distance; this was a scene never to be forgotten. What heart could but falter and feel its need of more than human aid for support! I turned to the cabin and poured out my heart to Him, who has promised that as our day is, so shall our strength be.

February 28, 1844.

Arrived at Hong Kong, February 19th, went on shore and remained three days, when we were met by Brother Lowrie from Masar, and conducted thither. Our passage ended with 136 days, during all which time we were kept as in the hollow of an Almighty hand, and were not permitted to suffer even with fear.

Our emotions on arriving in a heathen land, it is difficult to express in adequate language. A view of the heathen as they are, is enough to move a heart of adamant. May God grant us long life in their midst and make us eminently faithful to the end."

While there, she was engaged in missionary labor, in which she was very efficient and successful. A son was born to them in China, in 1848. They also adopted as their own child a Chinese infant giving her the name of Annie S. Cole (she is now, 1881, living in San Francisco, California).

In 1853, owing to the ill health of her husband, she returned to San Francisco, and subsequently for a number of years had charge of the "Woman's Mission to Chinese Women and Children," in that city, in which work she was engaged at the time of her death.

In their Annual Report of the Mission for the year ending December 31st, 1875, the officers of the Society say :

"In presenting our Annual Report, at the close of this the sixth year of our activities as an organic body, we find ourselves sitting in the shadow of a deep grief, and suffering what to us seems an irreparable loss. During the last week of our school year, one faithful and beloved missionary, Mrs. Caroline Hubbell Cole, was called from her earthly labors, to the blessed enjoyment of her longer life to the rest that remaineth to the full recompense of reward."

Further on the Report says :

"That her labors were very successful, training several hundred children, and through them reaching many parents and homes."

She had also a large Bible Class at the Mission, the pupils of which were warmly attached to her. By the children of the day-school she was regarded with reverent affection, as will be best evinced by the following letter recently received by Mrs. Cole from three of her most interesting pupils, who had recently returned to China. Their ages were seven, nine and eleven respectively. The quaint and original style of the letter warrants its presentation. It was written in Chinese, and the translation reads thus :

"Respectively the answer to the foreign lady is laid upon her boudoir to meet the glance of her eye.

Your pupils in the fifth month and thirteenth day, had already arrived at Canton the capital, and on the same day departed into the country in perfect health and prosperity, and all because of trust in the teacher's gospel.

But because your pupil's father and children have just reached home, we have very much business, and not a moment's leisure, and have not therefore gone to the worship hall, nor to the gospel chapel in the city (Canton) to visit. We earnestly beg that you will not be displeased. You, lady, will cherish in memory your Si Mooeh and the others. You will ten parts* remember and love us. You have towards us the heart of a father and mother. We three pupils will take a day, and ourselves will walk to the gospel chapel and worship, all to pay our respects to each of the teachers, and again to listen to doctrines, which is a delightful prospect.

Formerly you, lady, taught us pupils, and it was like sitting, and being fanned by the soothing breezes of the spring season. Your pupils.

AH SHO.

Together do Kan-tan (i. e., bow their heads down to the earth in obeisance). QUAN SHOI, Emperor. 1st year, 7th month, 9th day."

No better tribute could be paid to the devoted faithfulness of this earnest and devout woman.

W^m Shelton Hubbell

WILLIAM SHELTON HUBBELL, of Benzonia, Benzie County, Michigan, eldest son of Samuel Hubbell and Betsey Shelton, was born in Stratford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, July 23d, 1812.

His father died very suddenly in September, 1815, leaving his mother in reduced circumstances, with two children, himself and a baby brother, Richard Mansfield Hubbell, now of Norwich, Connecticut. In the spring of 1820, when eight years old, his mother married James Fitts, of West Hartford, Connecticut, a woollen manufacturer by trade. William lived at home with his step-father, going to school in the winter, and working during the summer at the woollen trade and on the farm. In 1828, when sixteen years old, he was apprenticed for four years to learn the trade of a woollen manufacturer, with Fitts & Gilbert, of Orange, Connecticut. While at Orange working at his trade, at the age of eighteen, he joined a temperance society, and has kept the pledge he then took to the present day (1881). In 1831 he experienced religion and joined the Congregational Church of Orange, and has always been an active church-member.

In May, 1832, at the age of twenty, having faithfully served his apprenticeship, he started for the then far west State of Ohio, departing on the steamboat Sun, owned by Vanderbilt, and running from Bridgeport, Connecticut, to Albany, New York, thence by packet line canal boat Telegraph, Captain Chapin, to Buffalo, New York, and from there by steamboat to Erie, Pennsylvania, from there he walked through an almost unbroken wilderness, sixty-five miles, to Gustavus, Trumbull County, Ohio. For thirty miles there were no houses on the old salt trail, which he took.

In the fall he went to Warren, Ohio, and worked at his trade, all the work in the factory being done by hand, except carding and fulling, which was done by water-power. He returned to Gustavus during the following winter, and early in the spring commenced the erection of a woollen mill at the latter place, in company with L. W. Case.

Mr. Hubbell was married on August 13th, 1833, to Eliza Case, daughter of Deacon Asa Case, of Gustavus, by the Reverend Joseph Badger, a celebrated Missionary to the Indians.

The woollen mill erected by Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Case was the first one built in Northeastern Ohio north of Warren; it was driven by ox-power, the oxen being placed on an endless track, such as is used now (1881) by farmers. Mr. Hubbell built all the machinery for the manufacture of cloth, flannel and yarn, excepting the shearing machine, which was bought in Vermont, shipped to Ashtabula, Ohio, on Lake Erie, and thence hauled by team to Gustavus, at a great expense. All the iron used in the construction of the machines was purchased in Pittsburgh, and hauled by teams about a hundred miles to Gustavus. Although they labored under many disadvantages in building the machinery, in many cases having first to make the tools to work with, the factory was completed and started in the spring of 1834.

The factory was run successfully by ox-power for two years. In August, 1836, Mr. Hubbell bought an engine and boiler in Pittsburgh, and put them up in the factory. This was the only steam engine to be seen for miles, and was a great curiosity to the people of the surrounding country. He continued to run this factory until May, 1839, in which year he sold out and moved to Plymouth, Ashtabula County, Ohio, where he built a water-power woollen factory, in which he started the first power spinning-jack and power loom ever run in Northern Ohio. In May, 1844, he removed to Chenango, Pennsylvania, where he built a dam across the Chenango river, and erected a large woollen mill, store, ashery and two dwelling-houses.

A mistake having been made in taking the level, the dam backed a long distance up the stream, in consequence of which the neighbors became much incensed, believing that it made the locality unhealthy. In the fall of 1846 a mob of about fifty men tried to tear the dam out, working all one afternoon unsuccessfully, Mr. Hubbell and his workmen repairing the damage to the same in about two hours; and until a very few years ago, the dam was still there. The same fall he took a partner in the business. Through debts of his partner paid out of the business, and the burning of his factory by an incendiary, he became much involved, and made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors, was released by them, and moved to Guilford, Connecticut, penniless, but not broken-hearted. In Guilford he entered into partnership with Mr. Johnson, built and operated a woollen factory for two years, when he sold out his interest and returned to Gustavus, Ohio, in the fall of 1849.

In the spring of 1850 he removed to Kingsville, Ashtabula County, Ohio, and took charge of the woollen factory of S. C. Osborn & Co., of which he was foreman for one year.

In 1851 he went into partnership with Amos Burnett, and built a woollen mill on the Conneaut river, and in 1852 bought out Mr. Burnett.

In the fall of 1854 he opened a store in the village, in connection with the manufacturing business. About this time he commenced the business of buying woollen waste, and after cleaning it, shipped it East, to be manufactured into the finest all-wool cloths; and in connection with this business, he traveled very extensively throughout the West for several years, buying wool, wool waste and pelts. The business of buying and selling manufacturers' materials gradually absorbed all his time and attention, so that the factory was finally discontinued, and the building torn down in 1860, the machinery having been previously disposed of.

In the summer of 1860 he and his wife, and wife's brother, visited L. W. Case, at Benzonia, Michigan, who had just removed from Ohio to that then wilderness, and he was so much pleased with the country, that in January, 1862, accompanied by his oldest son, Lucius William Hubbell, he started for the wilderness overland, by rail, to Ferrysburgh, from which place it was one hundred and twenty miles through the lumber country, with only a few small lumbering towns intervening. The snow was over two feet deep, weather very severe, and roads very poor. They traveled by stage and team to Manistee eighty miles, from which place it was about forty miles through a dense forest, with no road but an Indian trail, over which the mail was carried once a week by an Indian. Falling in with a man who had a horse, they built a small jumper of poles, and accomplished the remainder of the journey in two days. Here they located several tracts of land, and in the spring he returned to Ohio to attend to his wool business. In the succeeding fall he again returned to Michigan, accompanied by his son, Lucius William Hubbell, and wife. At this time he took with him machinery for a small grist-mill, there being no grist-mill in the settlement, nor within many miles of it. The machinery was freighted to Benzonia with great difficulty, and during the fall and winter a dam was built across a small spring brook, affording excellent power; a log building 18 by 24 feet was put up, the pioneer mill completed, and the first grist ground in February, 1863, much to the joy and relief of the surrounding inhabitants, most of whom were present waiting for grists to be ground for their suppers. The following fall he moved the remainder of his family to Benzonia, and has since resided there.

Mr. Hubbell was appointed one of the commissioners to perfect the organization of Benzie County, has held many offices of trust and honor, was one of the charter members of the Benzie County Agricultural Society, and has been re-elected President of the Society for eleven consecutive years.

ORANGE SCOTT HUBBELL, of Stratford, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Harvey Hubbell and Polly Sherman, was born in Easton, Connecticut, December 12th, 1820.

Was educated at the Staples Institute, in Easton, Connecticut, taught school for several years, read law in the office of Governor Bissell, of Norwalk, Connecticut, and afterwards studied and practised Pharmacy in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for about twenty-five years, retiring to his home in Stratford in 1875.

Mr. Hubbell's residence, "Rivercliff," is situated on the Housatonic River, and is considered the finest country place in that portion of the State; it is well stocked with the finest blooded horses and Jersey cattle to be procured.

Besides being a great authority on blooded stock, Mr. Hubbell is a thorough botanist, and has made many valuable discoveries relating to agriculture.

PETER HUBBELL, of Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Isaac Hubbell and Sarah Hawkins, was born in Huntington, Connecticut, on March 1st, 1822.

In early life he attended the district school with his brothers, and afterwards learned the trade of a stone-mason, and worked with his brothers, Lucius and Francis B., on nearly all their contracts. As a workman he has few superiors. Is also an excellent carver in wood, very expert in sharpening tools for stone-masons, and like his brother, Francis B., is a crack shot with the rifle. Having sufficient means to live in comparative comfort, he has retired from the active pursuits of business, and now devotes the winter of his life to meditations of a serious character, concerning the life hereafter.

Francis B Hubbell

FRANCIS BURRITT HUBBELL, of Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Isaac Hubbell and Sarah Hawkins, was born November 27th, 1814, in Huntington, Connecticut.

In his boyhood he attended the district school, and afterwards learned the trade of a stone-mason.

In 1831 he assisted his brothers to erect a stone factory in North Bridgeport, Connecticut, for Thatcher & Bunnell, and he and his brother Lucius built a stone grist-mill in Trumbull, for John and Gater Beers, in forty-one days, in the same year.

In 1832 he worked in North Bridgeport on a stone block, and carried the southeast main corner alone, which was an undertaking of importance for one of his age.

Among the numerous contracts filled by Mr. Hubbell for stone work during his life, the following important ones may be mentioned, to show how industrious he has been, but it is unnecessary to remark, that as a finished workman his services have always been in great demand.

He assisted in the erection of a stone chapel for the use of Yale College, and superintended the building of the following private residences for their respective owners: a stone dwelling for Doctor Beach Middlebrook, in Trumbull, Connecticut; and a free-stone dwelling in West Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (owner's name not given). He and his brother Lucius contracted for and built the dwelling-house of Thaddeus G. Birdseye, in Birmingham, Connecticut. Mr. Hubbell has worked on or contracted for nearly all the stone factories in Ansonia, Birmingham, and Huntington, also assisted to build stone churches in Ansonia, Birmingham, Milford, Waterbury, Newtown, and Bridgeport, Connecticut.

While in the West, in 1856, he worked on houses in St. Paul, Minnesota, Des Moines, and Sioux City, Iowa. Has quarried stone among the Indians, in Nebraska, and worked on factories, banks, churches, hotels, dwellings, and bridges on Long Island, in New York City, New Haven, Connecticut, and Norfolk, Virginia, also worked on the stone prison, at Patterson, New Jersey; and contracted for, and quarried the stone for the floor of Fort Sumpter, South Carolina. He set a boiler for one of the first steam saw-mills in Nebraska, and has worked on and contracted for stone buildings in all the important States of the Union.

In his leisure moments he erected an imposing stone monument for himself and family. It is situated in the yard of the "Little White Church," on the White Hills, of Fairfield County, in the town of Huntington,—near the monument erected by his brother Lucius,—and marks the last resting-place of his wife, Augusta, who departed this life February 2d, 1865.

This short sketch of Mr. Hubbell would be incomplete without some mention of his wonderful skill as a marksman with the rifle, which, in his hands, sends forth its leaden messengers of death with such precision, that he has stood for years without a rival in his native county, and perhaps to-day is unsurpassed as a crack shot in his native State.

In order to give a proper conception of his skill as a marksman, it may not be considered out of place to state that on January 5th, 1867, he scored ten shots, $1\frac{5}{8}$ inches string, at forty rods in succession; and on July 21st, 1877, he made ten successive shots, $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches string, at the same distance. When the weather is favorable, he can send ten successive balls through a hole an inch in diameter (in a board), at twenty rods.* As a man he is held in great esteem by all who know him. Is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and one of the best known members of the large settlement of Hubbells on the White Hills.

* Twenty rods contain three hundred and thirty feet.

John Hubbell

JOHN HUBBELL, of Buffalo, Erie County, New York, was the eldest son of Elisha Hubbell and Nancy Kellogg, both of Massachusetts. His obituary is from the Buffalo Express, of January 28th, 1880:

"The death of Mr. John Hubbell, which occurred at his residence, No. 470 Pearl street, in this city, at twenty minutes after one o'clock yesterday morning, removes from the ranks of the legal profession one of its most learned and most distinguished members. In our issue of yesterday we had only time and space to make a simple announcement of the sad event, but this morning we shall endeavor to give our readers such information as we have been able to gather concerning the life and character of the deceased. John Hubbell was born in Canandaigua, in this State, on the 24th of December, 1819, and his early education was mostly obtained in that place. In the choice of a profession his preference led him into the law, and he studied in company with the late Hon. John Ganson, in the office of the late Mark H. Sibley, at Canandaigua. Both Mr. Ganson and Mr. Hubbell were admitted to the Bar together, about the year 1843, and very soon thereafter the latter removed to Buffalo and entered upon the practice of his profession. He won the respect and confidence of those with whom he came in contact from the start, and in a short time he had built up a remunerative business. In 1848 he was elected City Attorney, which office he filled with marked ability and general satisfaction. After retiring from that official position the deceased never afterwards sought any other political honors. He devoted himself assiduously to his legitimate business, and his studious industry was rewarded by a large share of professional prosperity.

In the year 1867 he left Buffalo and established himself in New York City, where he soon acquired a large practice. His sojourn in the metropolis extended to about the middle of 1875, when he returned to this city and resumed his business and social associations which had been broken off eight years before.

As a lawyer John Hubbell occupied an eminent and enviable position. His studious nature had enabled him to develop abilities of an uncommon order, and his extensive and successful practice made him one of the most prominent lawyers in the State. While practising in Buffalo, he was connected with several large and important cases. As the attorney of the late Orlando Allen, and also of the Western Transportation Company, his abilities and skill were repeatedly brought into play through the medium of extensive litigations. The professional as well as the social tastes of the deceased were of a peculiarly high standard. He possessed an absolute distaste for criminal business, and, we are informed, never tried but one criminal case in his life. He preferred to deal with admiralty and civil business, and his superior mind and great store of legal knowledge made him thoroughly competent to handle the most intricate and important cases. As an indication of the high esteem in which Mr. Hubbell was held throughout the State, we need only call attention to the fact that he was one of the sixty prominent lawyers of the State whose portraits had been selected to hang in the Court of Appeals chamber in the new capital building at Albany. Mr. Hubbell was a practitioner in the Supreme Court of the United States. He was, at the time of his death, President of the Buffalo Bar Association: also a member of the Fine Arts Academy and the Buffalo Historical Society. He was an honorary member of the Union League Club of New York City, and enjoyed the respect and friendship of a great number of scientific and literary men throughout the State. He was an enthusiastic lover of good literature, and his tastes and extensive reading brought him into intimate association with many of our leading scholars and thinkers.

Mr. Hubbell was married on the 9th of October, 1850, to a daughter of Mr. Benjamin Campbell, then of Rochester, and five children, three sons and two daughters, have blessed their union. The wife and children all survive; the three sons, Messrs. John C., Mark, and F. H., are all lawyers and are quite well known in society. The deceased was a man of rare social tendencies; thoroughly devoted to his family, genial, warm-hearted and considerate, and his loss will be felt keenly by those most near and dear to him. The heartfelt sympathy of a very large portion of this community will be extended to the bereaved wife and children in their great affliction.

This afternoon at three o'clock there will be a meeting of the members of the Buffalo Bar, to take appropriate action on the death of Mr. Hubbell. The meeting will be held in the General Term court-room of the City and County Hall.

Shortly after eleven o'clock yesterday forenoon the Hon. James M. Humphrey arose in the Supreme Court, Special Term, and called attention to the death of Mr. Hubbell. After a brief but earnest eulogy of the deceased he moved that the court adjourn as a mark of respect to his memory. Remarks of a feeling and complimentary nature were then made by Mr. E. C. Robbins and Judge Albert Haight, after which the latter declared the court adjourned until ten o'clock next Monday morning.

Shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. William H. Gurney, who was engaged in the trial of an action in the Superior Court before Judge Sheldon, arose and said that he was very much surprised and shocked upon learning of the death of Mr. John Hubbell. That gentleman had been a member of the bar of Erie County for many years, and had always borne the esteem and respect of his colleagues as well as the citizens at large. He had also been a member of the bar of New York County for seven years. Mr. Hubbell, he said, was a man of ability in his profession, and was entitled to the respect of the Court. He thereupon moved that the Court adjourn until this morning.

Judge Sheldon in granting the motion for adjournment said, with evident emotion, that he had heard of the death of Mr. Hubbell with great regret. They came to the bar nearly at the same time, and for over thirty-five years had been friends and rivals in the noble profession which they both loved. Mr. Hubbell long stood among the foremost at the bar of Erie County. His mind and temperament were eminently judicial, and had he acceded to the wishes of his friends he would long ago have been elevated to high positions on the bench. He was a genial friend and public-spirited citizen, and always evinced an interest in our institutions of art and literature. The Judge said that the ranks of those who were the young men at the bar with him had been thinned by the casualties of life, so that but few more were left who started out hopefully in their careers, and after alluding to the lesson of life which came home to the survivors, in the death of Mr. Hubbell, he declared the court adjourned.

The funeral services will be held at the residence of the family, No. 470 Pearl street, on Thursday at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon. The remains will be taken to Mount Hope Cemetery, Rochester, by early train on Friday for burial in the family lot.

In the death of Mr. John Hubbell this paper and its editor have lost a staunch and almost a life-long friend, and we make no apology for expressing our grief in these columns. Antedating the foundation of the Republican party, we remember Mr. Hubbell as one of the most earnest and enlightened members of that wing of the Democracy whose irrepressible devotion to 'Free Soil, Free Speech, and Free Men' led to that great split in their own party which made Republican success first possible and then complete. He was one of the leading spirits in the famous Buffalo Convention. But the principal incidents of his honorable career are given elsewhere. Here we meant but to speak of him as one must feel toward a true and tried friend whose untimely taking-off brings up associations of earlier and perchance happier days. To his bereaved family we can only extend heartfelt sympathy in their deep affliction."

SILAS CHURCHILL HUBBELL, of Woodbridge, New Haven County, Connecticut, only son of Silas Hubbell and Abiah Churchill, his wife, was born September 17th, 1826, in Montgomery, Hampden County, Massachusetts.

Dr. Hubbell graduated at Berkshire Medical College, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, in 1848.

He practised in Westfield, Massachusetts, from 1848 to 1853. Removed to New Haven, Connecticut, in 1853, and practised there until 1867, in which year he moved to Woodbridge, where he now (1881) resides. Dr. Hubbell is a family practitioner, and makes specialties of several important branches relating to children.

GEORGE E. HUBBELL, of Davenport, Scott County, Iowa, son of John L. Hubbell and Sophia Morse, his wife, was born April 7th, 1828, in Salisbury, Connecticut.

Graduated at Yale Law School, New Haven, Connecticut, in 1851.

Married Mary B., daughter of O. Pease, Esq., and grand-daughter of James Brewster, in 1852.

In 1853 Mr. Hubbell established a law office in Nassau street, New York City, and in the fall of same year moved to Davenport, where he has since resided and practised his profession.

His first wife died in 1872, and in 1874 he married Mary C., daughter of Rev. S. G. J. Worthington, the well-known Methodist clergyman.

Wm Wheeler Hubbell

WILLIAM WHEELER HUBBELL, son of Truman Mallory Hubbell and Mary Ann Flower, was born March 4th, 1821, in the District of Northern Liberties, Philadelphia County (now Philadelphia), Pennsylvania.

He spent much of his early boyhood near Chester, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, with his maternal grandparents, Richard Flower and Henrietta Graham, at their country seat, Lamokin. He went to school first in Chester, and afterwards to the best classical academies in Philadelphia.

In 1840 he commenced the study of law with his uncle (by marriage), John Wayne Ashmead, Esq., of Philadelphia, and was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, March 5th, 1845, was soon after appointed Master in Equity by Judge

J. K. Kane, and also practised with great success in the United States Circuit Courts, in many Patent Cases. On December 14th, 1848, he married Elizabeth Catharine, daughter of Paul, and great grand-daughter of Colonel Christopher Ramillie, a Revolutionary patriot of South Carolina.

His career as a counsellor-at-law has been a marked one; in the five years from his first admission to the Bar, he was admitted an Attorney and Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the United States, as is shown by the following certificate :

"SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

WILLIAM W. HUBBELL, Esquire, of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, was, on motion first made to the Court in this behalf, by Hon. Reverdy Johnson, Attorney General of the United States, duly admitted and qualified, as an Attorney, and Counsellor of the Supreme Court of the United States, on the 20th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 74th.

In testimony whereof, I, William Thomas Carroll, Clerk of said Court, have hereunto set my hand, and affixed the seal of said Court, at the City of Washington, this 20th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty.

WM. THOS. CARROLL, Clk. Sup. Ct. U. S."

In 1853, a committee of the several railroad companies now constituting the New York Central Railroad Company; also the New York and Erie, and Harlem, and several New England railroad companies, selected Mr. Hubbell as counsel, to prepare a defence in the Ross Winans' "Great Eight-Wheel Car Suits," for an alleged infringement of Winans' patent, which he prepared with unusual skill. One of the cases was argued before Mr. Justice Nelson, of the Supreme Court of the United States, at Cooperstown, New York (in the United States Circuit Court). Mr. Hubbell opened the case for the defendants in one of the most lucid arguments ever delivered, which for its fullness of detail, covering as it does 193 pages of printed matter, admirable arrangement and strict adherence to the truth, redounds to his credit, industry and thorough knowledge of equity and law, and forms an important historical railroad record. The case had been tried previously by other counsel on a different mechanical basis, in the Northern New York District, and a jury had given the plaintiff a verdict. Under his preparation of defence in equity, a decision for the defendants was obtained in this and another case in the same district, and upon being carried to the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington, his theory and legal construction was sustained, and the decision so secured, in favor of the defendants, was virtually in favor of all railroad companies in the United States, as they were all interested by use of the eight-wheel cars, in the decision. The cases occupied four years, and involved claims for about two million dollars; for his services Mr. Hubbell received in fees the handsome sum of fully twenty thousand dollars. Two hundred thousand dollars were expended altogether in the litigation.

He was also of counsel in the great case of the State of Pennsylvania against the Wheeling Bridge Company, in 1850, and in the Woodworth Planing Machine cases. Also the Blanchard Turning Machine, and most of the other great patent suits, of those early days.

In the spring of 1857, he had the misfortune to be one of the victims of the "National Hotel disease," so-called by reason of the fact that the guests of the National Hotel in Washington, D. C., shortly after the time of President Buchanan's inauguration, while that house was much crowded, were simultaneously prostrated with a deadly sickness, supposed to have been caused by arsenical poison. Many died in a few days, and many lingered only to die after years of suffering.

By his knowledge of chemistry, and antidotes, he was barely enabled to withstand the effects of the poison for many years, but finally recovered his health in 1880, by means of discoveries he made of combinations in chemistry, hereinafter referred to.

Having an inventive talent, his scientific ability has been recognized by the grant to him of many important patents, and fully established by his invention of the explosive shell Fuses used in the army and navy of the United States, weapons which have made the navies of the world resort to the building of iron-clad vessels. These self-acting shells blew up the Granite Bogue Forts of China, and the forts and vessels of Japan. Mr. Hubbell having patents, claimed of Congress in 1862 compensation for his several inventions of the self-acting fuses of the shells used.

In 1864 Congress referred the matter to the Court of Claims, and the United States Supreme Court.

Six hundred printed pages of testimony were taken and the Courts sustained the two of his inventions and patents which had proved of the greatest value to the Government.

The following remarks are quoted from the decision of the Court of Claims, in "Hubbell vs. U. S.," 1864, No. 2124, adjudicated January 24th, 1870.

"For years, private parties as well as various officers of the army and navy had been directing their thoughts and inventive powers to the production of a Fuse that should be both certain and exact in the explosion of shells. Among these, as the evidence demonstrates, there was no more intelligent, scientific and persistent worker than the claimant.

It is fully sustained by the evidence that he has contributed, in an important degree, by his inventions, to the present improved and efficient projectiles in use in our army and navy.

We further find that Hubbell was the first and original inventor of the time and impact Fuse, as claimed by him in his patent of January 7th, 1862. And, that such fuse has been largely and extensively used by the United States in violation of his rights as patentee. And, that he is justly and equitably entitled to compensation therefor, under the joint resolution of Congress.

We further find that Hubbell, the claimant, is the first and original inventor of the percussion fuse, as claimed in his patent of January 24th, 1860. It is proved that these fuses have been used in great numbers by the United States in derogation of claimant's rights, secured by his patents.

That these inventions have been and are of great importance to the Government is apparent.

Several millions of these fuses were used during the war of the rebellion. The fact being conceded or determined that he is the original inventor, and the use undisputed, his right in every respect to compensation is complete and perfect, and nothing has been shown from which we can infer that he relinquished or released that right; that he has donated its use to the United States, or in any wise abandoned his invention."

Under this decision he was awarded by the Court and Congress $100,000, which was paid to him, Congress having limited the power of the Court to pay, but directed it to find the amount of the indebtedness.

The royalty found in his favor as proved and established was the sum of $200,000 on both inventions, one for the navy and one for the army. Congress had pre-agreed to pay Mr. Hubbell, if proved the inventor, $100,000 for that used in the navy, known as the Navy Time Fuse, and with which the whole navy was armed before the war. Eight hundred and sixty five thousand two hundred and fourteen of these fuses were also made by the Government during the war of the rebellion.

The other, the percussion invention, was newly introduced in the army for the shells of rifled cannon, and used at the battle of Antietam, where its value was first demonstrated. Five hundred and twenty-eight thousand six hundred and sixty-one of this invention were used, and a royalty value of fully $100,000 established, but which has not yet (1881) been paid by Congress. Claim is made for it as a constitutional right, and in opposition to any spirit of repudiation of a judicially established debt of the war.

The first-mentioned invention sunk the Alabama in the British Channel, and was used by the United States Navy throughout the war in all the shell guns, while the other invention was used by the army in all the rifled cannon.

It is worthy of record that no battle in which Mr. Hubbell's Time or Percussion Shell Fuses were used was lost.

It was proved in the case that he perfected the inventions and applied their use, filed in the Patent Office as early as 1846, and commenced them in the year 1840 when only nineteen years of age, also that he antedated every other inventor in the world. The United States searched the world in vain for evidence to defeat him.

He has proposed to the Board of Ordnance to construct twelve-inch rifle breech-loading guns of cast steel of a tensile strength of 60,000 pounds per square inch, for which he has patents—lately granted—and capable of crushing any iron clad vessel that can be built to navigate the ocean.

Among his other inventions may be mentioned his Enclosed Centre Primed Ammunition and Breech-loading Fire Arms, to use the same, in 1842; Metallic Centre Primed Infantry Ammunition in 1842, 1865 and 1872, adopted by the United States Army. Patent granted February 18th, 1879. No. 212,313. Original inventor of the Solar Magnet and Solar Magnetic Engine, described in the Scientific American, Franklin Institute Journal, and London Mechanics' Magazine of 1850. Original inventor of the Goloid Dollar of 1878, of metric standard coinage, and of the metric gold standard coinage. Patents Nos. 191,146; 209,263; 211,630; 211,909, A. D. 1877, 1878 and 1879.

In 1841, when he was twenty years of age, Mr. Hubbell invented and patented the sectional draft pipe for locomotives, which, applied in the smoke box, enabled them to burn coal successfully.

In 1844 he patented the first swinging breech-block, breech-loading fire-arm. The British Government ordered one of him, which was made and forwarded to London, England, and upon this the Snider rifle of the British service, and the United States infantry arms, using his primed metallic ammunition, are modified improvements. Upon this latter invention he has patented an improved construction, adapted for heavy ordnance.

In 1874 he and his brother, Richard Henry Hubbell, received patents for improvements in refining cast iron, which iron, tested at the Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., gave the unparalleled tensile strength of 60.958 pounds to the square inch.

He is the discoverer of a combination in chemistry and medicine, called "Vivopathy," which has produced remarkable curative results, and he is author of the "Legal Tender Note Argument," sustaining their issue as affirmed by the United States Supreme Court—(see Congressional Law Library)—and author of the coin motto, "Deo est gloria," (To God is the glory,) adopted on the metric coin (see House of Representative bills 410, 411, 412, 1519 and 1911, Forty-sixth Congress, containing the entire system of metric coinage discovered and invented by him, and reported by the Committee of Coinage, Weights and Measures,—of which the Hon. Alexander Hamilton Stephens, of Georgia, was chairman,—favorably for adoption by the United States, and providing for a royalty of one mill on every dollar, to be paid to him as the original inventor and patentee; see also Report 203, H. R., Forty-sixth Congress, second session, accompanying aforesaid bills, for full particulars). "For over half a century this subject had baffled the skill of the most eminent investigators of the civilized world," and Mr. Hubbell is the only man who ever solved it in practical metallurgy for a standard coinage of gold and silver.

He was Expert on Metallurgy and the Metric System to the Forty-fifth Congress, and was paid by special act of Congress for this service (see Report No. 23, first session, Forty-sixth Congress).

In conjunction with his brother, Richard Henry Hubbell, he carries on a stock farm, and tobacco and grain plantation, embracing nearly a thousand acres of land near Lynchburgh, in Appomattox county, Virginia. It is called Lamokin Farm, stretches a mile across Reedy Creek Valley, and is the exact spot where,—after Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House,—the Union and Confederate cavalry forces were drawn up in lines of battle. Upon receiving news of the surrender a parley ensued, and the Confederate officers in command, instead of giving the word "Charge!" ordered their soldiers to "Disband and go home, that Lee had surrendered, and the war was ended."

A reserve infantry force of Lee's army was heavily entrenched about five miles west of Lamokin Farm, towards Lynchburgh, among the mountains, to reach which entrenchments Lee was advancing when the Union forces cut him off at Appomattox Court House.

The stock on Lamokin Farm comprises registered Jersey cattle and grade cattle of every variety; also, the finest trotting stock mares, and Southdown sheep.

It may not be considered out of place in this short sketch to speak of Mr. Hubbell's maternal ancestors. His mother, Mary Ann Hubbell (nee Flower) was the daughter of Henrietta Graham, a lineal descendant of the heroic and renowned Graham, who married the daughter of Robert Stuart, King of Scotland; the pedigree can be traced in any of the leading works on heraldry. The Duke of Montrose is the present head of the family in Great Britain (see heraldic works in Astor Library, New York City; Martin's "History of Chester," Mercantile Library, Philadelphia; and works on heraldry, in Historical Society of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia; also Playfair's "British Family Antiquity," volume III, page 16, and volume IV, page 474).

Mr. Hubbell has light brown hair, blue eyes, and is about five feet ten inches in height; his phrenological character is fully described in the "American Phrenological Journal," New York, June, 1863, which also contains the engraved portrait of him at the age of forty-two years, heading this sketch. A very complete biographical sketch of him is to be found in "The Biographical Encyclopædia of Pennsylvania;" which contains a steel engraving from a photograph, at the age of fifty-three years. His biography also appears in that very complete volume, Martin's "History of Chester," above mentioned.

Much of the material composing this sketch has been taken from the works hereinbefore mentioned, Court opinions, and the records of Congress.

“It may be safely said that his inventions of explosive shell fuses of the Army and Navy of the United States, have proved a great power to open the portals of the barbarian world to the advance of civilization, China, Japan, and slavery having yielded to the influence of their fearful power. Forts, ships, and armies have failed, been destroyed, or surrendered before them, and, by the direction of Providence, the Union, freedom, peace, commerce, and national arbitration made to prevail.”

It is a fact worthy of record, that Mr. Hubbell should own the land on which the last line of battle in the Great Rebellion was drawn up, and that upon this soil, worn out by the system of slave labor, he should, as he has, by a chemical combination of his own invention, so enrich the fields that they produce crops of grain, grass, and tobacco, far surpassing anything yet produced in the South. This would seem to augur that the man whose inventions were of such great service in war, was to become famous in peace as the rejuvenator of the depleted Southern States, for this new invention has already proven pre-eminently successful in the cotton fields of Georgia.

HENRY LYNES HUBBELL, son of Wakeman Hubbell and Julia A. Lynes, his wife, was born June 24th, 1831, in Wilton, Fairfield County, Connecticut. He studied for college, partly in Green Farms, Westport, Connecticut, but chiefly at the Academy, in his native town. Graduated at Yale College in 1854. Taught in the old Academy, on Greenfield Hill, Connecticut, for six months, and then for one year and a half had charge of a boys' school on Owasco Lake, near Auburn, New York, of which Rev. Samuel R. Brown, D. D., was proprietor. He studied theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York, and Andover Theological Seminary, Massachusetts, graduating at the latter institution in 1859.

Soon after graduating he was invited to the pastorate of the First Congregational Church, St. Johnsbury, Vermont, but declined, preferring to study another year in Andover. Since his ministry began, in 1861, he has had two pastorates, one over the First Congregational Church, Amherst, Massachusetts, and the other over the First Congregational Church, Ann Arbor, Michigan. In January, 1880, he accepted a call to the First Congregational Church, Jamestown, New York, where he now (1881) resides.

Between 1866 and 1868 he traveled nine months in Egypt, Palestine and Europe, and preached the remaining time in Unionville, one of the parishes of Farmington, Connecticut. On May 7th, 1863, he was married to Harriet A. Hinsdale, of Amherst, Massachusetts.

Wilson Hubbell

WILSON HUBBELL, of the Sixty-second Regiment (Anderson Zouaves), New York Volunteers, son of Charles Benjamin Hubbell and Elizabeth Thompson, was born April 21st, 1821, in Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut.

His grandfather, Captain Amos Hubbell, and his great-uncles were conspicuous for their military services during the Revolutionary war; and his great-grandfather, on his mother's side, Lieutenant William Thompson, commanded a company of militia of the town of Stratford, and lost his life at the battle of Ridgefield, Connecticut, in April, 1777.

Wilson Hubbell received an Academic education, and at the age of sixteen, he went to Columbia, South Carolina, where he learned and followed a mercantile business. In 1849, he removed to the City of New York, where he was a merchant for the twelve years preceding the breaking out of the Rebellion, and married Emily M., daughter of Meigs D. Benjamin, of New York City.

In April, 1861, he entered the service of his country, and enlisted the men forming Company B, of the Sixty-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, and was mustered into the service on June 30th, 1861, for three years, commissioned Captain, was promoted and commissioned Major, May 31st, 1862. He was engaged in all the battles of the Army of the Potomac, from the one at Yorktown, April 17th, 1862, until June 3d, 1864, when he lost his life at the battle of Cold Harbor (with the exception of the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, when he was sick in hospital from exposure and fatigue endured in the Chickahominy Swamp), being wounded by a shell from the enemy's batteries, from the effects of which he died in two hours. His remains were embalmed at the White House, Virginia, and sent to Bridgeport, Connecticut, where they were interred in the Mountain Grove Cemetery, on June 15th. The funeral services were held in Christ Church, attended by a large assembly, sixteen officers from the Ninth Connecticut Volunteers (who were home on a furlough), came from New Haven and acted as pall-bearers. While the funeral procession was moving, the bells of the several churches were tolled, minute guns were fired, and numerous flags displayed at half-mast. The surgeon of the regiment, in a letter announcing his death, wrote :

"He was a brave true man, and was in the extreme front, doing his duty well and gallantly when he was struck."

Many letters attesting his bravery are on file in the Adjutant-General's office, Albany, New York.

Yet he never was promoted, nor was full justice awarded him. A man from another regiment received the appointment, through the influence of his father, a noted physician of New York, which caused great indignation in the regiment. The members of his old company (B), however, testified their appreciation of him by presenting to him a beautiful Sixth Corps badge, accompanied with the following letter :

"To Major Wilson Hubbell.

SIR:—The members of Company B, so long and happily connected with you, both in your capacities of Captain and Major, desire to present you with this slight token of their regard with their best wishes for your prosperity and happiness.

Your bravery on the field of battle, your coolness in the hour of danger are well-known to us ; and it is for these qualities, for your care and solicitude for the comfort of your men in camp and in the field ; and your exemplary conduct as a soldier and a gentleman that they respect and honor you.

And they hope the many associations connected with this emblem, the blue cross of the 'Fighting Sixth Corps,' will be a perpetual bond of friendship between them and their Major, and in future days be a pleasant reminder of the campaigns of 1861, 62 and 63.

Very respectfully yours,"

Then followed the signatures of the men.

On the first day of the battle at Fair Oaks, (May 31st, 1862,) Major Hubbell was field-officer of the day, and had five companies under his charge on picket duty, he was mounted on a mule, and rode rapidly during the fight, with the shells flying thick around him, but fortunately was not hurt. At one time he was much in danger of being cut off from our army, but succeeded in bringing his men safely into camp, where all were inquiring if he was not badly wounded, as that rumor had preceded him. He had with him a rebel officer, who rode into our lines by mistake, and who was much surprised and chagrined, when Major Hubbell informed him he was a prisoner; the rebel said he "supposed it was his own picket," (the picket lines of the contending armies being very close to each other on that day,) and asked if he might retain his watch, which was the gift of his mother, and said he felt sorry to part with his beautiful mare "Jenny," which he rode; the Major replied to him, that "we did not take our prisoners' watches, but the mare was contraband of war;" he afterwards purchased her of the government for his own use.

Major Hubbell was a fine-looking man, tall, erect, and well-proportioned; he had dark hair, and dark blue eyes, large and full. His manners were dignified yet affable. His disposition was amiable and remarkably cheerful, he was never depressed in spirits, but always looked upon the bright side of life; he was warm-hearted, generous, and lived and died as a true soldier should die, in the front and thickest of the fight, doing his duty.

All the leading papers of New York City contained obituary notices of his death, also the Bridgeport papers. The New York Times had the following:

"Major Wilson Hubbell, of the 62d regiment, New York Volunteers, Anderson Zouaves, who was killed by being struck with a shell, in the assault on the rebel lines at Cold Harbor, was a native of Bridgeport, Connecticut. At the commencement of the war, he entered the 62d New York York Volunteers, and was made its Senior Captain, and acted as such until May 31st, 1862, when he was made Major. He was with the Army of the Potomac in all the battles in which it has been engaged, except those of South Mountain and Antietam, and was only prevented by sickness from participating in them.

He was a brave and accomplished officer, possessed the love, respect and confidence of his men to an unusual degree. The members of his old company (B) presented him with a very beautiful Sixth Corps badge, accompanied by a letter expressing the great respect and esteem in which he was held by them. He met a soldier's death while in the extreme front, gallantly leading on his men. He was shot down, and every possible effort was made to save him by the regimental surgeon, the wound was too severe, and he died in a few hours after receiving it."

FRANKLIN B. HUBBELL, of Troy, Rensselaer County, New York, son of Elisha Hubbell and Nancy Kellogg, both of Massachusetts, and brother of John Hubbell, Esq., of Buffalo, New York, was born in Canandaigua, New York, and died in Troy, New York, September 24th, 1869.

He was an editor, was connected with the Syracuse Journal, Syracuse Star, and Troy Daily Whig; was well known among newspaper men as a genial and amiable companion, always cheerful in temper and pleasant in manner, ever ready to work and to lighten the labor of others.

As an editor and journalist he ranked among the first.

EDWARD HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Josiah Hubbell and Charlotte Baldwin, was born August 4th, 1822, in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and lived there all his life. He was one of the best-known men in the city of his nativity, and had great influence with all classes of the inhabitants. Was a member for twenty-five years of the Second Congregational Church, situated on Gilbert Street near Broad, of which his father, Josiah Hubbell, a well-known merchant, was a founder.

The following well-known facts will clearly demonstrate how great his influence was among the church-going inhabitants of Bridgeport:

In 1874, the Rev. Mr. Easton, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Danbury, Connecticut, came to Mr. Hubbell and informed him that unless the sum of two thousand dollars was raised within a few weeks to complete the sum of four thousand already donated, there would be no hope of the Church being freed from debt, and in all probability the ecclesiastical body would have to be dissolved. Mr. Hubbell promised to do all in his power to aid the neighboring congregation. He canvassed for subscribers among the church members of Bridgeport, and in the short space of thirteen days placed the list of subscribers to the necessary two thousand dollars in the hands of the grateful pastor, who made the collections himself, thereby placing the Church once more on a substantial foundation. Great joy was manifested by the entire congregation. A grand jubilee was held, to which Mr. Hubbell was invited, where, amidst the forty ministers seated upon the altar, he was the lion of the hour. The ladies showered him with bouquets, the deacons and clergy overwhelmed him with benedictions, and at the end of the jubilee the reverend pastor, Mr. Easton, presented him with a handsome gold-headed cane, elegantly inscribed, on behalf of the Church.

Among the many curiosities in the possession of Mr. Hubbell at the time of his death, on April 5th, 1881, were an eight-day chiming clock, made in England one hundred and thirty years ago, also the first brass grate and fender ever used in Bridgeport, Connecticut.

"Rev. Dr. Thompson's remarks at the funeral of the late Mr. Edward Hubbell yesterday afternoon were not only highly eulogistic but well deserved. He said that fidelity was the leading feature of Mr. Hubbell's character, that never during their long and exceedingly intimate friendship had he heard Mr. Hubbell say a word which was unworthy to be uttered, or known of his doing a deed which had better have been left undone. Referring to the kindness of Mr. Hubbell's nature the Doctor spoke of many a good deed done by his friend by day and by night unknown to others, spoke of his fidelity to his parents, to his relatives and friends, and of his frequent manifestation of every good quality of manhood. He mourned him as a brother best beloved, one on whom he could always rely as a ready friend and helper on every occasion. We felt that even the warm friendship of the Doctor had not carried him one whit beyond what was true and just in his eulogistic remarks concerning Mr. Hubbell, whom we have intimately known for many years, and whose trueness of character we have often admired. He has many times voluntarily rendered to us friendly services which we shall ever remember with grateful emotions."*

STEPHEN JOHNSON HUBBELL, of Lupton, Weld County, Colorado, son of Richard Hunt Hubbell and Elizabeth Ann Watson Cowgill, was born March 8th, 1834, in Springfield, Ohio.

In 1848, he lived in Wheeling, Ohio County, West Virginia, where he assisted his father and uncle in the sale of wagon springs, axles, etc., until 1850, when he commenced the study of medicine with Doctors Blum, Osburn and Wheeler, of the aforesaid city, and continued his studies with them until 1854.

He attended the Starling Medical College in Columbus, Ohio, in 1854, and the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1855, from which he graduated in 1856.

He commenced the practice of his profession in North Wheeling, Virginia, in April, 1856, resided in West Liberty, in 1858, and from there went towards Pike's Peak, and then returned to Calloway County, Missouri, where he practiced his profession for two or three months, after which he moved to Springfield, where he bought a drug store in 1859.

In 1861, he left Springfield for Richmond, Virginia, where he joined the Confederate army as a volunteer.

He received a "penetrating gun-shot wound" in the left lung, on June 9th, 1863, at the battle of Brandy Station. Afterwards passed examining board of surgeons in Richmond, Virginia, took the rank of Captain (assistant Surgeon), and was assigned a hospital, where he surrendered in April, 1865.

Being in impecunious circumstances, after his surrender to the Union forces, he accepted a situation on the Memphis and Tennessee Air Line Railroad, in Norfolk, Virginia.

Doctor Hubbell had a drug store, and practised his profession in Fort Lupton, Weld County, Colorado, in 1880.

Geo. A. Hubbell

GEORGE ALBERT HUBBELL, of New Haven, New Haven County, Connecticut, son of Joseph M. Hubbell and Harriet Hill, was born in Newtown, Fairfield County, Connecticut, June 1st, 1824.

At nine years of age he left a fatherless home to earn his living on a farm. At the age of twelve he was apprenticed to the woollen business, in Newtown, Connecticut, until of age. At sixteen he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church and began to supplement a meagre common school education by private studies in the English branches, history, philosophy, and theology. Was licenced to conduct religious services at the age of eighteen, and preached in his native and adjoining towns during the last three years of his apprenticeship. At twenty-one was admitted to the New York Conference; passed the usual studies and examinations, and was ordained Elder at the age of twenty-five. Afterwards commenced a collegiate course at Woodbury Academy, and pursued classic studies under private teachers.

He performed regular pastoral work for twenty-one years in Meriden, Waterbury, Middletown, Birmingham, Bridgeport, and New Haven, Connecticut, and for thirteen years in the cities of New York and Brooklyn.

In 1876, was Presiding Elder of Bridgeport District, and in 1880, Presiding Elder of New Haven District, the two districts comprising the greater part of the State west of the Connecticut River, including one hundred and forty-two churches.

JAMES WAKEMAN HUBBELL was born in Wilton, Fairfield County, Connecticut, March 29th, 1835, is the second of four sons of Wakeman Hubbell and Julia A. Lynes, his wife.

Having a taste for study, at the age of eleven he commenced Latin, with the idea of preparing for college.

At the age of sixteen, he went to Northampton, Massachusetts, where he spent two years in preparation for Yale College, which he entered in the summer of 1853.

At the age of eighteen, during his four years of college life, he maintained a high position as a scholar, graduating as one of the oration men of his class.

After graduating he taught school for two years, as a stepping-stone to a professional education. He entered the Union Theological Seminary in the autumn of 1859, and after a year's study there, went to the Seminary in Andover, Massachusetts, where he graduated in July, 1863. During his studies in the Seminary, he passed through a severe sickness, which came near ending his life, but from which, after nine months' residence in Minnesota, he recovered. The experience of those long and dark days, was a part of his discipline and training for his life-work.

He was ordained to the ministry as pastor of the First Congregational Church, in Milford, Connecticut, September 21st, 1864, one of the oldest and largest churches in the State, being organized in 1639, and having a membership of 576.

After a pastorate of five years, he accepted a call to the College Street Church, New Haven, Connecticut, and there, for nearly eight years, he had a successful ministry, and was dismissed at his own request, and with the unanimous wish of his people to remain with them. He is at present (1881) pastor of the First Congregational Church, in Danbury, Connecticut, where he was installed May 20th, 1879.

His wife, Mary Wing Gregory, is also a native of Wilton. They have three daughters, Julia L., Harriet G., and Grace W., all of whom were living in 1880.

William Lafayette Hubbell

WILLIAM LAFAYETTE HUBBELL, of New York City, New York, was born July 6th, 1825, in Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, son of Asa Hubbell and Elizabeth Benedict.

Inheriting to a considerable extent his father's inventive genius in labor-saving mechanism, he has perfected and taken out a number of patents of various kinds ; some of them marvels of mechanical skill and ingenuity.

He has always taken an active and influential position in the representative councils of not only the Republican party, but of other patriotic and semi-political organizations, both State and National, and has held several offices of honor and trust, among them, Grand Sachem of the Order of the United Americans of the State of Connecticut, for the years 1855, 6-7.

Arch Chancellor of the same Order for 1856.

Member of the Common Council of the City of Waterbury, Connecticut, in 1856.

Inspector of Customs, port of New York, 1861 to 1864.

Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue for the Second and Third Collection Districts of New York, from 1864 to 1872.

Secretary of the King's County Republican General Committee for 1862 and 1863.

Renominated in 1872.

He also represented the Seventh, Twelfth and Twenty-first Wards respectively, of the City of Brooklyn, in the King's County Republican General Committee, for several years.

In 1874 he formed and has since that time conducted "The American Mechanical Toy Company," in the manufacture of various kinds of mechanical toys of almost every imaginable variety and description.

In 1850 he was united in marriage in New Haven, Connecticut, by the Rev. S. Dryden Phelps, D. D., of that place, to Lucy A. F. Neale, daughter of Joel and Harriett Neale, of Southington, Connecticut, and neice of the Rev. Rollin H. Neale, D. D., the venerable pastor of the First Baptist Church of Boston, Massachusetts, where he has been for over thirty years. Five children were born of the union, of whom but two are now living, William Lafayette, Jr., and Alice Neale. Freddie died in infancy. Fannie, a beautiful and precocious child, fell from a window in her seventh year and was instantly killed. Hattie, while a student at the Packer Institute, Brooklyn, and soon to graduate, was taken sick with that incurable disease, diabetes, and died in her nineteenth year, beloved and mourned by all who had ever known her. Kind and amiable in disposition, her sweet and affable manners endeared her to all with whom she came in contact.

"Oh she was good as she was fair,
None, none on earth above her;
As pure in thought as angels are,
To know her, was to love her."

Alice Neale graduated at the Packer Institute, Brooklyn, New York, in the class of 1871, and was married in 1878 to Professor D. Greenberger, Principal of the "Institution for the Improved Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb," of the City of New York.

In poetry (for he is something of a poet), Mr. Hubbell's versification is smooth, limpid, genial, and fascinating.

For years he was a contributor to several popular magazines, as well as many daily and weekly papers. I take the liberty to give one of his poems, "One Week Ago," written at sea, in 1858; also one, "At Fifty-three," written in 1878, to one of his most intimate and genial boyhood friends, Horatio Nelson Powers, D. D., whom he had not seen at the time the poem was written, in nearly thirty years, having selected them from a number placed at my disposal by Mr. Hubbell, after a great deal of persuasion (for to his other remarkable traits of character, I must add the becoming one of great modesty).

"ONE WEEK AGO.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP MOSES TAYLOR, }
Gulf of Mexico, January 10, 1858. }

'Tis night! the Day God's golden car
Adown the western skies hath roll'd,
And 'neath the emerald waves afar
Hath sunk in robes of molten gold.
Pale Luna, with her borrowed light,
Keeps "watch and ward" for dark-ey'd night;
While twinkling stars come out and keep Their nightly vigils o'er the deep.

'Tis night! upon the deck I stand,
Or lean upon the good ship's prow,
The radiant deep blue skies o'erhead
And darker deep blue waves below;
The crested waves in many a freak,
Fling high their spray and lave my cheek,
While balmy trade-winds kiss my brow,
As sweet as girlhood seals love's vow.

Above me glows the Southern Cross,
In lucent glint and lustrous sheen;
So beautiful, so pure and grand,
It seems of stars the royal queen;
And yet the faithful Northern Star,
More regal seems to me by far,
More true, more grand, more loyal yet,
For since 'God spake,' it never yet has set.

Oh, dark-ey'd night! how passing well
I've loved thy diamond-flashing eyes
Amid New England's hearths and homes
And hearts I love and dearly prize;
But, O how doubly dear art thou
To heart and brain and throbbing brow,
When 'neath the tropic's burning zone
The sun blights all he smiles upon.

'Tis night! a holy Sabbath eve,
The evening of God's chosen day,
And memory, o'er its golden track,
Now leads me back one week to-day.
One week ago my home was glad,
And tiny hearts with joy leaped high;
One week has passed, and lone and sad
My heart gives out the bitter sigh.

One week ago, the merry laugh
Came ringing from my cottage home,
And fairy forms and tiny feet
Came tripping forth to meet my own.
One week has passed, I hear them yet,
The merry laugh, the tiny feet,
For Fancy, with its golden wing,
Flings o'er the Past its bright imagining.

One week ago, one week ago,
How much of life hath passed since then,
Yet on, o'er ocean-waves I go,
As o'er their snow-white crests I've been,
And may the birdlings of my home,
My heart's-nest, in the Northern land,
Be watched by HIM who rules the storm,
And holds us in His mighty hand.

"AT FIFTY-THREE.

The halcyon hours of guileless youth,
Like meteors, flash athwart my brain;
The golden chords of memory thrill,
And make me now a boy again.
A boy again! and why? Ah, me!
My years now number Fifty-three.

And yet in memory's mystic realms,
 In day-dreams of the long ago,
 Entranced I sit—asleep—awake—
 My soul illumined—my heart aglow;
 Nor reck I of those years, whose key Unlocks the number Fifty-three.

Yet why should recollection now
 Entrance me with its golden rays,
 And throw o'er heart, and soul, and brain,
 The glint and sheen of boyhood days?
 Of boyhood days? Ah yes, I see,
 A boy again at Fifty-three!

What weird, mysterious, magic charm
 Hath wrought this wondrous spell?
 The Present sinks into the Past—
 The Man into the Boy as well;
 And man and boy in reverie,
 Dream on and on, at Fifty-three.

Is it because I look upon
 The picture of a goodly face;
 And scan the eye, the lip, the brow,
 And every lineament, to trace
 Some half forgotten look to me—
 The man and boy at Fifty-three?

This picture that I'm holding now,
 Whose face I gaze upon with joy,
 To other eyes, is of a Man—
 To mine, to me—is of a Boy,
 A boy—but why this mystery?
 And why a boy at Fifty-three?

I look—the picture fades away—
 An airy vision clouds my brain;
 There broods o'er me a phantasy—
 I dream I am a boy again.

In dreams, the scroll of other years
 Unrolls before mine eyes;
 Two boys, fair-haired, I see at play,
 Beneath the summer skies.

The one, brown-eyed, with face, where Truth
 Shines lustrous as a star;
 The other, pale, with eyes of blue,
 Lit up from shrines afar.

The woods, in queen-like garb, I see,
 The meadows, rich in bloom;
 The orchards laden with their fruit,
 And fragrant with perfume.

The rills that laughing leap along
 Through fields of grass and grain;
 The lowing cows—the bleating sheep—
 I see them all again.

 Half buried in the new-mown hay.

The Robin's sweet, far-echoing song,
 The Linnet from the hill,
 The Bobclink's loud, ringing notes,
 The plaintive Whippoorwill,

The Blackbird's carol from the marsh,
 The Red-wing's matinee,
 The Golden-throated Oriole,
 The Quail's prophetic lay,

 The Blue-Jay's silvery strain,
 The Skylark's sweeping, soaring song—
 I hear them all again.

I see those self-same boys again
 Drink in each song—each sweet refrain.

In dreams I see our boyhood homes,
 More dear than all beside,
 Blessed with our Parent's prayers; and led By Faith, the starry-eyed.

Our fathers—sturdy men, I see;
 Our mothers—saints of earth;
 Our brothers—sinewy as steel;
 Our sisters—radiant in worth.

The road, that winds past many a hill;
 The fences, mossed with time;
 The lanes, where we so oft have played;
 The trees, we dared to climb;

The school-house, quaint from base to peak;
 The brook, with babbling glee;
 The pond, the boat, the dripping oar—
 I see, or seem to see.

Again, those self-same boys I see,
 Rapt in bright dreams of poesie.

The sun has set ; the night winds sigh ;
 The Raven flaps his wing ;
 Grief lays her palsied hand on mine,
 Damp, cold and withering.

I start. Our fathers ! where are they ?
 And where, our mothers ! where ?
 O God ! within Thy golden gates,
 We leave them in Thy care.

My dream is o'er ; mine eyes are dim ;
 This picture that I've held so long
 Is stained, with tears that fell unbid,
 And blend unbidden with my song—
 A song, dear friend, of you and me,
 Of man and boy at Fifty-three.

NEW YORK, CHRISTMAS WEEK, 1878."

JAMES R. HUBBELL, of Delaware, Delaware County, Ohio, son of Shadrach Hubbell and Rebecca Randolph, was born in Delaware County, Ohio, in 1825.

Mr. Hubbell is a lawyer by profession, and has resided in Delaware since he was eighteen years of age.

He was a member of the Thirty-ninth Congress of the United States, from Ohio, in 1864 ; was five times elected to the Ohio Legislature, and was Speaker of the House for four years.

After serving his term as a member of Congress in Washington, D. C., he became a member of the Ohio Senate.

JAY ABEL HUBBELL, of Michigan, son of Samuel S., and grandson of Abel Jay Hubbell, was born in Avon, Michigan, September 15th, 1829.

The following sketch of his career is from The National Free Press, of October 23d, 1880, published in Washington, D. C.

"Jay Abel Hubbell, Representative in Congress from the Ninth District of Michigan, and Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, was born in Michigan, his father, Samuel S. Hubbell, a native of New York State, having removed thither in 1820, and devoted his energies to farming from the settlement of that part of the State until his death in 1870. The first eighteen years of his life were spent by young Hubbell upon his father's farm, in the labors incidental to his sphere of action. He was a robust youth, and is a robust man. After two years of studious preparation at Romeo and Rochester, he entered the University of Michigan, in the sophomore class, and graduated in 1853. The two following years were devoted to the study of the law, and in 1855 he was admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court of the State. In November, 1855, Mr. Hubbell removed to Ontonagon, in the Upper Peninsula, where he formed a law partnership with Hon. A. H. Hanscom, and commenced, what afterward proved, a lucrative law practice. In 1857 he was elected district attorney of the Upper Peninsula, and was re-elected in 1859. He removed to Houghton, Michigan, in February, 1860, and was elected prosecuting attorney of Houghton County, in 1861, 1863 and in 1865. From the date of his removal to Houghton down to 1871, when he retired from active practice, Mr. Hubbell's law business was large and highly remunerative. As a lawyer, he was noted for his industry and care in the preparation of cases, and for the success with which he presented and prosecuted them. When he removed to Houghton, the great mining interests of that locality were in their infancy. In their development, he took from the start a warm and active interest, investing all his spare means in the mines, and contributing largely to their successful development by his determined energy, judicious management, and undaunted pluck. The great pecuniary success which attended these mining enterprises enabled him to retire from the practice of the law in 1871; but up to the present time his interest in the development of the mines of Michigan has never flagged, and it was under his direction, as a State Commissioner to the Centennial Exhibition of 1876, that the remarkable exhibit of the mineral products of that State was collected and made. Already, prior to his retirement from law practice, Mr. Hubbell had also become an active factor in the public affairs of his native State. His acquaintance with the people of the Upper Peninsula during his successive terms as district attorney, had become very extensive, and his frank, square, practical, common-sense manner had made him popular with the masses, who regarded him as a safe, level-headed adviser, as well as a man of prompt and decided action. In 1868, during the Presidential election, his political speeches brought public attention to him as a promising public leader, and the success which, during the same year, crowned his efforts at Washington, whither he had been sent by the people of the copper-mining district to secure the imposition of higher tariff duties on copper, brought him still more prominently to the front. This was shown by the large vote given to him in the Congressional Convention of the Sixth Congressional District, which then (1870) included Houghton. In 1872, Michigan having been re-districted, Mr. Hubbell was nominated for Congress by the Republican Convention to represent the Ninth Congressional District, comprehending within its limits the nine counties of the Upper Peninsula, and eighteen counties of the Lower Peninsula. The campaign which followed was an exciting one, and he addressed political gatherings in nearly every one of the great number of counties in his district, and was elected to Congress by 11,951 votes against 5,546 votes cast for his competitor, S. P. Ely, who ran as the Liberal Republican and Democratic candidate. In the Forty-third Congress, Mr. Hubbell was placed upon the committees on banking and currency, and mines and mining, and was also a member of the joint committee to investigate the affairs of the District of Columbia, in all of which he rendered good service. He secured the payment of some $20,000 to the State of Michigan, being five per cent. on the permanent Indian Reservations, which had been due to that State and uncollected for a long term of years. He delivered a speech in the House during this term upon the currency question, which attracted marked attention. Through his efforts, also, the long unsettled land titles at St. Mary's, Michigan, were adjudicated in favor of the claimants. He also secured the passage of a bill to relieve from taxation the mining corporations of the Upper Peninsula, which had been assessed on the issue of their drafts that had been taxed as currency. In 1874, Mr. Hubbell was re-elected to Congress by 12,877 votes against 3,460 votes for H. D. Noble, Democrat. In the Forty-fourth Congress, he was again on the banking and currency committee. He introduced a bill by which the State of Michigan would have collected some $250,000 arising from the five per cent. on bounty lands allowed to that State under the act of admission, a claim which, though still in abeyance, is likely, with his persistent efforts, to be pushed to collection in the next Congress. He distinguished himself mainly, however, at this session by a very exhaustive and able speech in opposition to the Morrison Tariff bill, whose iniquities he exposed with unsparing hand, arousing public attention everywhere to the dangers with which this Democratic measure threatened the industrial interests of the country. This speech, more perhaps than any other, led to the ignominious defeat of that monstrous bill. After minutely analyzing what he termed 'The so-called Morrison Tariff, manufactured in New York City, by order of the Free Trade League, under the inspiration of the American members of the English Cobden Club,' he said:

'Aside from the tax proposed to be levied on tea and coffee, the increased duties amount to only $821,879.71, while the decrease for the year is over $26,000,000. Practically, however, even if tea and coffee should not be taxed, there will be little or no decrease in the aggregate receipts. The duties from the increase of importations, now unusually large, will overcome the reductions proposed in the tariff, and in a very few years return a larger custom revenue than that now collected. The Morrison tariff is an invitation to foreign manufacturers to surfeit our markets with imported wares, and the opportunity will be promptly embraced. The extent of its evil tendencies can scarcely be measured, and the country now appeals to the wisdom of this Congress to save the people from a practical realization of its fearful consequences.'

In 1876, he was again elected to Congress by 18,224 votes against 12,656 votes for John H. Kilbourne, Democrat. He was placed, in the Forty-fifth Congress, upon the committee on expenditures in the Navy Department, and joined in the able minority report which so fully and clearly exonerated Ex-Secretary Robeson from the charges which partisan malice had trumped up against him. He was also placed upon the committee on commerce, and was on the sub-committee that prepared the River and Harbor bill. He secured to Michigan immense and unexpected appropriations for greatly needed improvements in her rivers and harbors, among others, securing the deepening of the St. Mary's river to sixteen feet. It was during this Congress that (November 2d, 1877) Mr. Hubbell moved to strike out the enacting clause of the Ewing Anti-Resumption bill, and substitute for it the following:

That so much of section 3 of an act to provide for resumption of specie payments, approved January 14th, 1875, as provides for the redemption in coin, by the United States, of all legal-tender notes outstanding on the 1st day of January, 1879, embraced in the clause of said section of said act, in the language following, to wit: 'And on and after the 1st day of January, A. D. 1879, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem in coin the United States legal-tender notes then outstanding, on their presentation for redemption at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in the city of New York, in sums of not less than $50,' shall be so construed as not to authorize or require the Secretary of the Treasury to retire and cancel said notes, redeemed as aforesaid, but to authorize and require said Secretary to deposit said notes in the Treasury of the United States, whereupon said notes shall be paid out, at par value, in discharge of all claims and demands against the United States, or in exchange for coin; and said notes shall, as heretofore, continue to be a legal-tender, and on and after January 1st, 1879, shall be receivable, at their face value, in payment of all dues to the government, and for all debts, except where coin payment is stipulated by contract or statute; and all provisions of law in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. Hubbell's substitute was defeated, 84 Republicans and 6 Democrats voting for it, and 30 Republicans and 128 Democrats voting against it. But subsequently the 'Fort Bill,' which was introduced April 29th, 1878, and which was substantially the same as the Hubbell substitute, passed both Houses and became the law; and Secretary Sherman also gave instructions for the receipt of greenbacks for customs dues, thus vindicating in all essential respects the forethought and wisdom of the Hubbell substitute. In this Congress Mr. Hubbell made speeches upon our foreign commerce and upon the coinage of silver, both of which excited public attention. In 1878 he was again elected to Congress by 15,264 votes against 7,478 votes for John Powers, Democrat. He was placed, in the Forty-sixth Congress, upon the Committee of Appropriations; was chairman of the sub-committee on the Pension bill, and a member of the sub-committee on the Indian bill, in which positions he has rendered important services to his constituency as well as to the entire country, securing among others the perpetual freedom from tolls of the St. Mary's Canal. At the recent meeting of his Congressional Convention he was again nominated for a fifth consecutive term in Congress, and will, without doubt, be re-elected by even more than his usual large majority. From his entry into Congress Mr. Hubbell has been continuously a member of the Republican Congressional Committee. His great skill and experience in the political duties thus imposed upon him, and his work in the campaign of 1878, earned for him in 1879 the chairmanship of that committee. The vigorous and successful campaign of that year in Ohio secured him the highest encomiums, and both then and now he has devoted all his time and energies and abilities to the important work of the committee, of which he is the guiding spirit and controlling hand. Unable, by reason of his absorbing labors at Washington, 'the central post of duty,' as he terms it, to meet his immediate constituents on the stump, he addressed to them October 2d, 1880, an 'open letter,' on the 'Overshadowing Issue,' showing in a masterly manner 'the true inwardness of the Solid South,' which was published in full in the Detroit Post and Tribune, and explained, as it had never before been explained, the real programme of the 'Solid South.' In concluding this 'stirring address,' as the Post and Tribune characterizes it, Mr. Hubbell, alluding to the 'Solid Southern leaders,' says:

'At all costs they propose to get in power. At all costs they propose to keep in power. At all costs they propose, when in power, to madden the North as well as impoverish and weaken it. At all costs they propose to force the Northern States to secede, and when the "Solid South," after working all the ruin they contemplate, have driven the North into secession, the "Solid South," a much larger and more powerful South than that which rebelled, will laugh a quiet, foxy laugh, and say, "Go, by all means; we always believed in peaceable secession! You are simply stultifying your former course. We are ever consistent. Go, by all means, and a good riddance of you!"'

This is the terrible revenge which the 'Solid South' proposes, to force the North to not only restore, but to vindicate for all time the 'Lost Cause!'

Forty-seven electoral votes from the North will insure the success of that devilish conspiracy! Is the North so blind as to give a single one? Was the war for freedom and union waged in vain? For these priceless heritages the North stinted not her blood, her treasure, the lives of her best and bravest sons. Was it all for nought? Is she to gain by long and bloody and desolating war, only to loose by the arts of treacherous demagogues?

The Union soldier, Hancock, is but the mask which hides the trail of the rebel serpent. 'The hand is the hand of Esau, but the voice is the voice of Jacob.' Hancock chants the sweet 'music of the Union,' but through it all louder and shriller is heard the old rebel yell!

Freemen of America, be not deceived to your own undoing! Vote as you once fought!

To his personal efforts, more than to those of any other one man, was due the Republican victory in Oregon—the first gun which saluted the nomination of Garfield and Arthur. Very largely also is he entitled to credit for the thoroughness and completeness of the October victories in Ohio and Indiana. But these victories, great as they were, served only to spur him to renewed efforts. He saw with the genius of generalship that the time to forever wipe out the solidarity of the South had come, and that the October defeat must in November be converted into a total rout. With characteristic decision he at once sounded this bugle charge, which stirred the whole party to renewed effort:

'To the Republican Voters of the United States:

We have met the enemy and they are ours. From Oregon, from Rhode Island, from Vermont, from Connecticut, have come recent voices bearing no uncertain sound, but booming and ringing with the notes of Republican victory. And now Ohio giving us at least 25,000 popular majority and sixteen of her twenty Congressional districts, and Indiana, giving us from 5,000 to 10,000 majority, probably nine of her thirteen Congressmen and her Legislature, with its certain promise of a Republican United States Senator, join their swelling voices with these shouts of triumph, and seem to make our coming victory sure.

The vote of yesterday is due to fear of Democratic ascendancy, of solid Southern domination, of the ruin to our industries which would follow Democratic Free Trade experiments, of the disasters to business and to laboring and to other interests which would follow "a change" of government when all is prosperous now. It means, also, a united North against a vindictive Solid South. We have pierced the enemy's centre, but we must not sleep on our arms. We must charge along the whole line, and rout him "horse, foot and dragoons."

Republicans, remember that this is the "last ditch" of the "Solid South," and the desperation of despair is not to be despised. Stand by your colors; rest not for an instant. Sustain your committees in the fight for doubtful districts; be vigilant, aggressive, pressing the enemy in the front, in the rear, and on the flanks, and do not cease your efforts until a complete and overwhelming victory in November shall crown them with the assurance of Republican ascendancy and that freedom, peace and prosperity which will surely accompany it.

JAY A. HUBBELL,

Chairman Republican Congressional Committee.

Washington, October 13th, 1880.'

Terse, vigorous, and stirring as is this appeal, he shows in energetic action as well as in burning words his belief in the necessity for hard work to make the final success absolute and all complete. He is found working at the Republican Headquarters, at Washington, day and night.

Chairman Hubbell is direct in logical processes and methods, has great decision and energy of character, with sufficient caution for safety, and the requisite dash to evoke enthusiasm. His manner is pleasantly blunt and direct. He is shrewd, careful, and his straightforward bluntness is tempered with tact. His brain is large, his heart is large, his common sense is large and he stands steadfastly by his friends. He would make a very useful Senator, and Michigan, if she can appreciate, and she has always shown she can, the sturdy, sledge-hammer eloquence, and skill and energy of her best tried legislative sons, will not be apt to forget the name of Jay A. Hubbell when she looks around next winter for a worthy successor to the lamented Zachariah Chandler."

NATHAN HUBBELL, son of George Augustus Hubbell and Huldah Hall, was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut, October 21st, 1831. Until the age of fourteen he resided with his parents, in the suburbs of Bridgeport, working for neighboring farmers in the summer, and attending the district school in the winter. Three or four years were then spent as an apprentice in saddle, harness and trunk manufactories.

After a few weeks' service on a packet plying between New Bedford and Edgartown, where he had gone without the knowledge of his parents, he returned home. Later he became news agent on the Naugatuck Railroad, in Connecticut, and was finally made brakeman and baggage-master on the mail train of the same railway.

Subsequently he became messenger for the Adams Express Company between New York and Springfield, Massachusetts. Resigning this position, he spent nine years on the Harlem Railway as Conductor and ticket agent, withdrawing from the occupation of conductor in 1859, that he might find more time for study as a station agent at Harlem.

In the summer of the same year he visited Halifax and Guysborough, Nova Scotia, partly in pursuit of health, and partly to gain information concerning 700 acres of land belonging to his grandfather, Nathan Hubbell's estate.

On February 16th, 1861, he was licensed as a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and decided to make the Christian ministry his life work. In 1862 he became pastor of a small church of that denomination, at Fordham, New York, meanwhile continuing his studies privately, and retaining his position as railway agent.

In the spring of 1864 he formally resigned his secular employment, and engaged heartily in the work of the ministry. His fields of pastoral labor have been as follows: Harvard, Delaware County, New York; Milan, Bangall, Washington Hollow, Pleasant Valley, Verbank and Rochdale, Dutchess County, New York; Lakeville, Litchfield County, Connecticut; North Egremont, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, and North Hillsdale, Columbia County, New York; Cutchogue and Stony Brook, Suffolk County, New York; Baldwin's and Long Island City, Queen's County, New York; Forsyth Street, New York City; New Haven, Connecticut, and two years at Brooklyn, New York. In 1875 he visited Montreal and Quebec.

Though self-educated, he decided to pursue an additional course of study, and besides the usual four years' course in the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference, spent three years more at Yale Theological Seminary while pastor of the New Haven City Missions.

Mr. Hubbell was married January 2d, 1854, at Williamsburg, Long Island (now Brooklyn), to Miss Cecilia A. King, daughter of Beri and Mary A. King. Rev. Dr. Hiram Mattison performed the ceremony. Of seven children which have been born to them, five are living.

Since the age of seventeen Mr. Hubbell has been a contributor to the public press, including The Christian Advocate, of New York; Zion's Herald, Boston, Massachusetts; The Independent, Tribune, Times and Herald, of New York.

He has also edited several amateur papers, as follows: The Harlem Traveler, The Centennial, The Sea Breeze, Camp Meeting Guide, Christmas Courier and The Itinerant, the latter being still issued quarterly in the interest of the churches of which he becomes pastor. Mr. Hubbell was the first editor of The Long Island Traveler, a weekly paper still published by other parties, at Southold, Long Island, New York. At present (1881) he is pastor of the Stony Brook and Setauket Methodist Episcopal Churches, Suffolk County, New York, residing at the former place.

AUGUSTUS HUBBELL, of Ascutneyville, Windsor County, Vermont, fifth son of Charles Benjamin Hubbell and Elizabeth Thompson, was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut, October 2d, 1832.

At the commencement of the Rebellion (1861), he was living in St. Louis, Missouri, and left that city for New York, N. Y., where he entered the Union Army, September 11th, 1861, as a Commissary Sergeant in the Fifty-ninth New York Volunteers. On October 11th, 1862, he was promoted to a Lieutenancy, and received several other promotions. Was mustered out of service August 5th, 1865, as Captain and Commissary of Subsistence of the Second Brigade, Second Division, and Second Corps, with the rank of Brevet-Major.

WILLIAM LEWIS HUBBELL, of Bridgeport, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of William Lewis Hubbell, a well-known sea captain, and Elizabeth Tyler Bradley, his wife, was born in that portion of the town of Fairfield, now included in the City of Bridgeport, on January 16th, 1833.

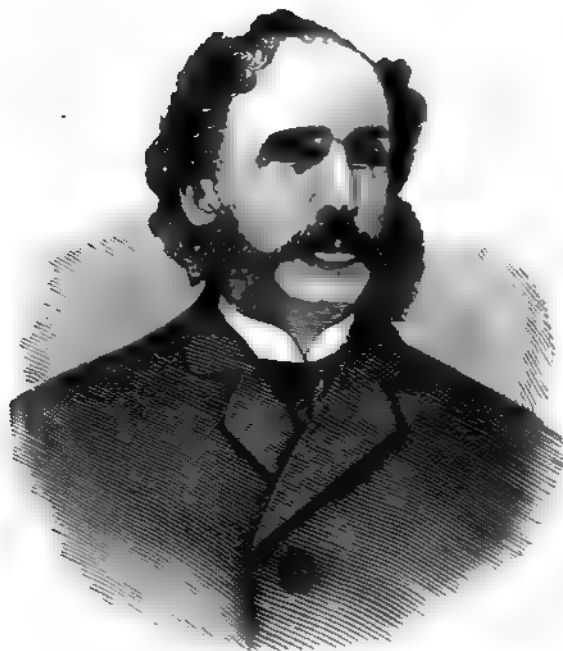

His grandfather, Aaron Hubbell, was a successful planter and revolutionary soldier.

Mr. Hubbell was educated for a mercantile life, and was in business in Bridgeport, Connecticut, until 1862, when he accepted a commission as First Lieutenant of Company D, Seventeenth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, was mustered into United States service, August 28th, 1862, subsequent to this he was commissioned Adjutant, and afterwards Captain of Company D, and later, Major of the same regiment.

He was taken prisoner of war in the battle of Gettysburgh, Pennsylvania, while serving on the staff of Brigadier-General (afterwards Major-General) Francis C. Barlow, commanding the First Division of the Eleventh Corps, Army of the Potomac, on July 1st, 1863, and held as a prisoner of war in Libby Prison, Richmond, Virginia, until March 7th, 1864, when he was paroled and afterwards exchanged. He completed his term of service with his regiment in Florida, and was mustered out with the regiment in 1865.

HIRAM PEIRCE HUBBELL, of Harpersfield, Delaware County, New York, son of Jacob R. Hubbell and Harriet Peirce, was born November 28th, 1847, in what is now the town of Gilboa, Schoharie County, New York. After receiving a common-school education and attending the Stamford Seminary, at the age of eighteen, he entered a dry goods store kept by a cousin, Lester Hubbell, in Unadilla, Otsego County, New York, and remained there a little over two years, after which he returned to Schoharie County, and settled in Jefferson, where he opened a drug store. In 1873 he closed his business in Jefferson, went to Harpersfield, Delaware County, New York, and commenced the study of medicine with his brother, Dr. Richtmyer Hubbell. He graduated from the Eclectic Medical College of New York City, February 6th, 1876, and immediately began the practice of medicine in Harpersfield, where he is now (1881) located.

The Doctor has been a member of the Twenty-third Senatorial District Medical Society from the time he began to practise, and has acted as one of the board of censors nearly every year since until the present.

A. S. Hubbell

ANDREW LYMAN HUBBELL, of Great Barrington, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, son of Luman Hubbell and Jane Munro Boyd, was born in Winsted, Connecticut, March 5th, 1834, and resided there until he was nearly fourteen years of age.

For three summers he lived on the farms of his uncles, Norris Coe, and Macpherson Hubbell.

He received a high-school education, which was supplemented by a course at Wilson's Institute, in Jonesville, New York. After leaving the Institute he held clerkships in Colbrook and Wolcottville, Connecticut, and was engaged by Benedict & Scoville, of Waterbury, Connecticut, with whom he remained for some time.

In 1855, he went to Great Barrington, Massachusetts, in the employ of B. F. Durant, of the "City Store," with whom he remained one year.

In 1856, he formed a partnership with Mr. Hurlbert under the firm name of Hurlbert & Hubbell, and purchased the clothing business of E. Doolittle, which was carried on for one year, at the expiration of which Mr. Hubbell purchased the entire interest of the concern, and since that time has carried on the business alone.

His clothing house is one of the largest in western Massachusetts.

On September 10th, 1857, he married Martha W., daughter of E. P. Woodworth, of Great Barrington.

Mr. Hubbell was for many years one of the Executive Board of the Housatonic Agricultural Society, one of the largest and best managed county societies in New England, and was made its President in 1877.

RICHTMYER HUBBELL, of Jefferson, Schoharie County, New York, son of Jacob R. Hubbell and Harriet Peirce, was born in the town of Gilboa, County of Schoharie, State of New York, on the bank of the Schoharie Creek, not far from the iron bridge that now spans that stream, on February 2d, 1843. His early life was spent in the towns of Gilboa and Blenheim, Schoharie County, New York, on small farms, where he labored with his father, and attended the district schools.

At the early age of sixteen years he commenced teaching the district school, and continued to do so for five years, during the winter, laboring on the farm during the summer.

In the fall of 1863 he emigrated to the West, and taught school the following winter at Almond, Portage County, Wisconsin, after which he enlisted as private in Company M 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery. The company was stationed at Fort Weed, near Alexandria, Virginia, where Mr. Hubbell acted as company clerk until the close of the war in 1865. He was discharged from the service at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and returned to his father's home in New York.

On February 21st, 1866, he graduated as Physician and Surgeon from the "Philadelphia University of Medicine and Surgery." In the following March he commenced the practice of medicine at Harpersfield, Delaware County, New York, where he had an extensive and successful practice, extending into three different counties. He remained in practice at Harpersfield for eleven years, and while residing there was four times elected Town Clerk, and three times Supervisor of the town.

On December 25th, 1877, he moved to the town of Jefferson, Schoharie County, New York, where he has since resided and practised his profession.

On February 2d, 1880, he established "The Jefferson Banking House," and since that time has carried on a banking business, in connection with his profession.

For the last five years Doctor Hubbell has been President of the "Eclectic Medical Society of the Twenty-third Senatorial District." The Doctor is six feet one inch in height, and weighs 220 pounds.

Lester Hubbell

LESTER HUBBELL, of Savannah, Georgia, the second son of Hiram Hubbell and Molissa Cady, was born in the village of Gilbertsville, town of Butternuts, County of Otsego, State of New York, on November 17th, 1835. He attended school at an early age in his native village, until 1846, when his father and family moved to Montrose, Pennsylvania, but only remained a year. In consequence of the foundry and machine works of that place, of which he had charge, taking a mechanical partner, his father's services were no longer required, and he moved to Unadilla, New York, where he accepted a similar position. In the fall of 1849 it was decided by his parents that he should take a clerkship, instead of following his father's occupation, for which he had a remarkable talent; owing to his slender build and delicate constitution, he was persuaded to become apprenticed to Mr. W. H. Emory, of Unadilla, a dealer in general merchandise, with whom he served his time faithfully. In 1854 he went to Orcutt Creek, Pennsylvania, to take charge of a store and steam saw-mill, which his father and David Gardner, of that place, had erected. The mill was destroyed by fire soon after, and he went to Waverly, New York, in the employ of H. Payne & Sons, dealers in general merchandise and furniture, and remained with them until 1859, when he returned to Unadilla and accepted a position offered him by Mr. Emory, his first employer, with the understanding that he was soon to be admitted as a partner, but as they could not agree as to the time the partnership should commence, he, in June, 1862, with his small capital from wages saved, added to a few hundred dollars loaned him by his elder brother, Oretus, went into business on his own account, against the advice and counsel of all his friends, except his uncle, Solon P. Hubbell, whose store he rented and opened June 18th, 1862. With a small, well-assorted stock of merchandise, he soon commanded a respectable share of the country and town trade, which increased so rapidly that at the end of thirteen months he had paid back his borrowed money and more than doubled his own capital, and had established a sound credit for future business operations. He then took his brother-in-law, George H. French, as a partner, and added other features to the business. In 1865 he bought out Mr. French's interest, and in the fall of that year was married to Mary A., second daughter of Wm. J. Thompson, Esq., of Unadilla, New York, and continued in business there until 1868, in which year he went South on an inspecting tour, which terminated in his selling out his store and moving part of his stock to Fleming, Liberty County, Georgia, twenty-four miles west of Savannah; he there purchased a half interest in a large tract of land, and went into business with J. D. Stevens. Having a large body of pine timber on their lands, they were induced to take a partner and purchase a saw-mill, both of which proved unprofitable investments; the firm was soon sold out, and Mr. Hubbell returned North in disgust. In this business venture they lost over eight thousand dollars in less than twelve months. In 1872 he sold his interest at Fleming to Mr. Stevens, and moved to the centre of the State, going into partnership with J. O. Easterling, at Reidsville, the county town of Tatnall County, situated in the midst of the yellow pine timber section; here they did a successful business, nearly all the proceeds of timber and cotton coming in to that place, in the shape of checks on banks in Savannah. They were induced in 1875 to establish the Tatnall County Bank, in connection with E. C. Anderson, Jr., & Co., of Savannah, and they issued a circulating medium in the form of a draft, engraved and printed in bank note form, to pay out for these checks; it was organized and in operation only two or three months before Congress passed an act taxing such circulation three per cent., which was, in fact, prohibitory, and the issue was called in immediately. He remained in business there until July, 1877, when he removed to Savannah to act as agent for a large provision house in St. Louis, Missouri, and in the fall of that year, with his brother, Oretus, and H. N. Graham, of that city, rented a desirable store on Market square, and began a city retail and country jobbing trade of groceries and provisions; the competition for the retail trade was so great that they gradually dropped most of it, and sought to increase trade in their wholesale department. At the suspension of the St. Louis house, Mr. Hubbell turned his attention to the country trade, and with the large country acquaintance he had made in the interior, soon built up a trade equal to other houses that have been established for a much longer period of time.

Mr. Hubbell's early life was spent under the influence of the Methodists religiously, and Whigs and Republicans politically, but always loving the fundamental principles and grand truths of all doctrines, and disliking all side issues and isms, he has accepted the Episcopal church faith, the Democratic standard politically, and the Masonic fraternity socially; persons are not quick to form his acquaintance, and seldom, if ever, at first sight. Respected in all communities where he has lived, his advice and counsel are frequently sought, and his general knowledge of things pertaining to every-day life places him in a position to be of service to his friends. In manner he is courteous and unassuming; is a quiet, persistent laborer, and contents himself with the reward he derives from it.

RICHARD HENRY HUBBELL, of Appomattox County, Virginia, son of Truman Mallory Hubbell and Mary Ann Flower, was born August 26th, 1825, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

He was formerly Superintendent of the Jackson Steel Works, at Alleghany City, Pennsylvania, and resided for many years in Chester, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, whence he removed, in 1880, with his eldest son, Truman Henry Hubbell, to their present residence (near Concord) Appomattox County, Virginia.

United States Patents were granted to Mr. Hubbell, and his brother, William W., for improvements in refining cast-iron, which iron, tested at the Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., gave the unparalleled tensile strength of 60.958 pounds to the square inch. (For further particulars concerning Mr. Hubbell, see his brother's sketch on page 193; also, Martin's "History of Chester," page 445.)

James B. Hubbell

JAMES BOYD HUBBELL, of Mankato, Blue Earth County, Minnesota, son of Luman Hubbell and Jane Munro Boyd, was born in Winsted, Connecticut, March 18th, 1836.

In 1853, he went south and resided at Fort Gaines, Georgia, during the greater part of his stay in that country.

In 1857, he moved with his family to Minnesota, where he was appointed Indian Trader. In 1862, after the "massacre," he removed to the Missouri River.

He bought out the interest of Charles Choteau, of St. Louis, Missouri, in the "American Fur Company," in 1864, and organized the "Northwestern Fur Company," of which he was general manager until its dissolution in 1870.

Since then he has been engaged in different pursuits throughout the west, and is at present (1881,) engaged in the mercantile business, under the firm name of "Broadwater, Hubbell and Company," having their headquarters at Miles City, near Fort Keogh, on the Yellowstone River, Montana Territory.

JOHN HENRY HUBBELL, of New York, N. Y., son of Nelson Silliman Hubbell, (born in Easton, Connecticut,) and Mary Porter Lawrence, (born in Norfolk, Connecticut,) was born in Algonac, St. Clair County, Michigan, January 19th, 1837.

In 1839, his parents removed to Jackson, Michigan, then nearly a wilderness, containing about one hundred inhabitants.

His early educational advantages were necessarily limited, he received however, the benefit of an academical course preparatory to entering college, but unfortunately ill health compelled him to forego so completing his studies.

Preferring a commercial life, at the age of fifteen he entered the store of Wiley R. Reynolds, in Jackson, and his rapid acquirement of commercial methods, and his aptitude for business was such, that in 1855, at the age of eighteen he commenced business on his own account in which he was quite successful. The scope of his enterprise becoming circumscribed, a large field of operations became necessary, and hence he removed to Memphis, Tennessee, in 1859, where he succeeded in building up a very extended and remunerative business, but which was entirely broken up and ruined by the war of the rebellion.

Then followed the additional misfortune of the loss of health, and his life being despaired of, during 1862 he returned to the north, where he improved so rapidly that he was enabled in the following year, in connection with capitalists, to devote his energies to the development of the oil wells of Meade County, Kentucky.

In 1866, he embarked in business in St. Louis, Missouri, but remained there but a comparatively short time. His great experience had suggested to him that he might supply a need that had long been appreciated by the lawyers and business men of the country, and in 1869 he projected the plan and commenced the annual publication of "Hubbell's Legal Directory of the United States and Canada," which was designed to be a compendium of the Commercial laws of the various States of the Union and the Canadas, and to contain a list of the able and reliable attorneys throughout the land.

This work, now (1881) in the twelfth year of its publication has become invaluable in the office of every prominent lawyer in the country.

Its success has been most pronounced and its circulation extended so rapidly that it soon necessitated a location more convenient for its requirements, and hence Mr. Hubbell removed to New York City in 1870, where he has since resided.

His place of business is 407 and 409 Broadway, where under the firm name of J. H. Hubbell & Co., he conducts an extensive law and collection office in addition to his publications.

Mr. Hubbell married Mrs. Martha A. Lemman (nee Baggott), of Dayton, Ohio, June 11th, 1871.

SINGLETON BEALL HUBBELL, of Medford, Taylor County, Wisconsin, son of Levi Hubbell and Mary Morris Beall, was born April 27th, 1855, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Educated at the Wisconsin State University. Commenced studying medicine in 1871. Graduated as a physician and surgeon, February 14th, 1874, at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in New York City. Immediately entered upon the practice of his profession at Medford, Wisconsin.

On December 12th, 1877, he purchased the Taylor County Star and News, and is one of the proprietors at present.

On October 10th, 1879, he received the Republican nomination for the office of County Treasurer, and was elected to that office at the ensuing election in November, for the term of two years. Is a member of the Episcopal Church, a Republican and a bachelor.

On August 10th, 1881, he opened in Medford a real estate and banking office, under the firm-name of S. B. Hubbell & Co.

JAMES ALLEN HUBBELL, of Quincy, Logan County, Ohio, son of Hezekiah Bloomfield Hubbell and Sarah Johnstone, was born October 16th, 1844.

In 1867 he entered the Starling Medical College of Columbus, Ohio, from which he graduated February 28th, 1870, and is at present (1881) practicing his profession in Quincy.

F. M. Hubbell

FREDERICK MARION HUBBELL, of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa, eldest son of Francis Burritt Hubbell and Augusta Church, was born January 17th, 1839, in Huntington, Upper White Hills, Fairfield County, Connecticut.

After receiving a classical education in Birmingham Connecticut, Mr. Hubbell removed to Des Moines, Iowa, with his father, in 1855, where he remained for eleven months, employed in the United States Land Office.

In 1856, he moved to Sioux City, Iowa, in which neighborhood he remained until 1861, holding several county offices, during his residence of five years.

On returning to Des Moines, he entered into partnership with J. S. Polk, Esq, with whom he has since been associated under the firm name of Polk & Hubbell, Attorneys and Brokers.

The firm has been remarkably successful in numerous large speculations, and has organized various stock companies, built the city water works, many large buildings in the heart of the city, and several railroads.

Mr. Hubbell and his partner are not only among the best known financiers and capitalists in Iowa, but are destined to have a wide-spread and well-deserved popularity in journalism as proprietors of The Iowa State Leader.

It is superfluous to say that the great success of the house of Polk & Hubbell, is largely due to the business capacity of Mr. Hubbell, for although only forty years of age, the fortune he has amassed is of large proportions.

As a man he is held in great esteem by his fellow-citizens, and his fame and fortune may well be envied by men who have not been as successful.

In June, 1863, he married Miss Frances E., daughter of Isaac Cooper, Esq., and grand-neice of James Fenimore Cooper, the celebrated novelist. They have two children, Frederick Cooper Hubbell, their only son, now a young man of seventeen, has inherited his father's business capacity, and will, in a few years, be fully qualified to take his place in the firm, should he decide to retire.

Beulah Frances Hubbell, their only daughter, has a remarkable talent for music.

JOHN D. HUBBELL, of Kelley's Corners, Delaware County, New York, son of Milow W. Hubbell and Mary Faulkner, was born, July 8th, 1836, in "Bray Hollow Settlement," Delaware County, New York.

Was brought up a farmer.

When in his twenty-third year he became a member of the "Old School" Baptist Church of Roxbury, Delaware County, New York, and three years after was licensed to preach the gospel and was ordained in September, 1872.

IDA W. HUBBELL, daughter of James Hubbell, and Ann Requa, of Peekskill, New York, was born in Peekskill, New York, March 15th, 1847.

Miss Hubbell has a soprano voice of great power and compass, and is one of the most artistic singers on the American stage.

She is well known on the concert stage in New York and Boston, and has become a favorite in many of the principal cities of the United States.

William S. Hubbell

WILLIAM STONE HUBBELL, of Somerville, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, son of Stephen Hubbell and his accomplished wife, Martha Stone, was born in Wolcottsville, Connecticut, April 19th, 1839.

Mr. Hubbell graduated at Yale College, in the class of 1858, and in the autumn of 1859, entered the junior class of the Theological Seminary, at Andover, Massachusetts, where he remained two years.

In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in the Twenty-fifth Connecticut Volunteers, and was made second lieutenant of the Twenty-first Connecticut Volunteers, in December of the same year.

His career in the army was brilliant. At the close of the war he was commissioned brevet-major, and returned to spend his third year in the Seminary at Andover.

Mr. Hubbell served as assistant minister (before he was ordained), to Reverend Richard S. Storrs, D.D., at Braintree, Massachusetts, from September, 1866, to January, 1868. Was ordained, January 29th, 1868, as pastor of the South Evangelical Church, West Roxbury, Massachusetts, where he remained four years. Was installed January 31st, 1872, over the First Congregational Church of Somerville, Massachusetts.

As a pastor he has never received an act or a word of unkindness from a parishioner, and therefore knows nothing of such ministerial trials as fell to the lot of his father, the Reverend Stephen Hubbell. He has always been led to respect, most thoroughly, the piety of Christians as a class, and to believe that the majority of Pharisees are outside the Church, instead of being professors of religion.

In 1866, Mr. Hubbell married Caroline, daughter of Alfred Southmayd, Esq., of Middletown, Connecticut, and is now (1881) pastor of the First Congregational Church at Somerville, Massachusetts. He is greatly beloved by his congregation, and has been repeatedly blessed with revivals.

MACPHERSON HUBBELL, of Winchester, Litchfield County, Connecticut, son of Silliman Hubbell and Hannah Taylor, was born, August 24th, 1803.

He was named Macpherson, in honor of a Scotch officer bearing that name attached to General LaFayette's command during the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Hubbell has always been a farmer, is a kind neighbor, a prominent Mason, and much beloved and respected by his numerous friends and relatives.

MARY ELIZABETH HUBBELL, was born at Mt. Carmel, Connecticut, December 5th, 1833.

She was the only daughter of Reverend Stephen Hubbell, now (1881) residing in New Haven, Connecticut, and his accomplished wife, Martha Stone, authoress of "Shady Side." Miss Hubbell was naturally gifted in intellectual qualities, and under the careful training of her parents, and the schools she attended, became fitted for, and accepted the position of principal teacher in a young ladies' school in Baltimore, Indiana, the year before her decease.

Child, too, of God."

L. L. Hubbell

LUMAN LEROY HUBBELL, of Danbury, Fairfield County, Connecticut, son of Charles Hubbell and Maria Taylor, was born in Danbury, October 2d, 1843.

He received a common school education, which he supplemented by a course of instruction in Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Bridgeport, Connecticut, and entered the fancy dry goods store of F. H. Austin & Co. during the spring of 1859, where he remained six years.

Was clerk in the insurance office of T. Jones for two years (1867-8), and in the spring of the latter year opened an insurance office in Chicago, Illinois.

The great fire in that city destroyed all the companies for which he was agent, and he accepted the agency of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York City, in October, 1869.

He was elected to the office of Town Clerk and Registrar of births, marriages, and deaths in October, 1872, and was re-elected for five succeeding years, holding the office until January 1st, 1879.

In the spring of 1879 he was active in the establishment of a Telephone Exchange in Danbury and Bethel, that resulted in the organization of "The Danbury Telephone Despatch Company," of which he was appointed Manager, and on October 1st, 1879, he had the great satisfaction of seeing fifteen miles of wire in use, and eighty stations in communication with each other.

He was Chief Engineer of the Danbury Fire Department for two years, being elected in 1878-9.

The duties of his present position have obliged him to abandon all public pursuits; he, however, still retains the agency of the "Mutual Life Insurance Company."

As a man he is held in great esteem by his fellow-citizens, is strictly temperate, never using alcoholic drinks or tobacco in any form.

His father, while living in Grassy Plain (now Bethel, Connecticut), was killed by being run over by a train of the Danbury and Norwalk Railroad Company's cars, near their depot in Danbury, on September 25th, 1857.

His mother married a second husband, Stephen Bates, of Danbury, Connecticut, on March 28th, 1858, and died, April 15th, 1870.

Mr. Hubbell was a member of the Board of trustees of the Union Savings Bank of Danbury in 1878-9, but declined re-election in 1880.

The "I. M. Ives Company," (formerly Ives & Hoyt,) of which he was appointed Secretary on the organization of the stock company, is an old-established house, and now (1881) does the largest business in furniture and house-furnishing goods of any concern in the southwestern part of Connecticut.

CLARA ISABELLA HUBBELL, daughter of Samson Harvey Hubbell and Isabella Hall Acton, his wife, was born, December 30th, 1843, in Ohio.

Miss Hubbell graduated at the Wesleyan College, Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1861.

In 1862 she was married to Robert W. Richey, in 1880 manager of the Evansville Oil Tank Line, a branch of Alexander McDonald & Co.'s establishment in Cincinnati, Ohio.

She has spent much time in the cultivation of vocal music, being the possessor of a remarkable voice, and has composed several pieces of music that have been published. Of late years she has given her attention to painting in oil, and writing for the Cincinnati papers.

Mr. and Mrs Richey have one child (a daughter), and resided in Evansville, Indiana in 1880.

Alvin Allace Hubbell

ALVIN ALLACE HUBBELL, of Buffalo, Erie County, New York, son of Schuyler Philip Hubbell and Hephzibah Farnsworth, was born in Conewango, Cattaraugus County, New York, May 1st, 1846.

He was raised on the farm in Conewango, and received his early education at the district school. When in his fourteenth year he entered the Randolph Academy, (now Chamberlain Institute, 1881,) in Randolph, New York, where he remained for six terms of fourteen weeks each. In December, 1861, he was awarded one of the "H. H. Otis" (Buffalo, New York,) prizes for meritorious declamation.

At the age of seventeen years he commenced teaching, and continued to do so in the district school with success for five terms.

In the summer of 1865 he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. J. G. Ackley, of Cattaraugus, New York, and afterwards with Dr. Lyman Twamley, of Little Valley, New York.

After attending the Eclectic Medical College of Pennsylvania, from which he received a diploma on January 4th, 1869, he commenced the practice of medicine in Leon, New York, February 1st, of the same year.

Becoming dissatisfied with his Alma Mater, through knowledge that came to him after graduation, concerning practices of a questionable character of which he was entirely ignorant before receiving his diploma, he determined to graduate in another college, and spent the winter of 1875-6, at the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo, from which he received a diploma, on February 23d, 1876, conferring the degree of "Doctor of Medicine." While attending this college he was the recipient of a "Fillmore" cash prize for the best thesis on a medical topic, his subject being "Observation and Fact, the Basis of Medical Progress."

He has performed many important surgical operations among which may be mentioned several delicate operations on the eye and ear. On April 18th, 1877, he performed the surgical operation known as Laparotomy, for Intussusception, it being the fourth recorded operation for that disease in the United States.

In 1879, he was appointed lecturer on diseases of the eye, ear, and throat, in the Buffalo College of Physicians and Surgeons, and in 1880, was elected professor, which position he still holds.

In October, 1879, he removed from Leon to Buffalo where he now resides, (1881) and practices his profession, making diseases of the eye, ear, and throat a specialty.

Dr. Hubbell has contributed largely to the various medical periodicals, and read numerous papers before medical societies.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL HUBBELL, of Lexington, Fayette County, Kentucky, son of Cyrus Hubbell and Eightha Darnell, was born in Warren County, Tennessee, January 12th, 1844.

At the age of nine years he had the mumps, which left him a cripple for life, and so incapacitated him for an active career, that he became a teacher.

In 1863-4, he was a clerk in the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army, in Arkansas, and after the war resumed his profession of teaching.

In 1867, he became a student in the Kentucky University, in Lexington, and pursued his studies for three sessions.

In 1869 he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, to have a contrivance made that would enable him to walk without a crutch, and while there was persuaded to have his leg amputated that he might wear a false one, he submitted to the operation, and died from its effects on February 10th, 1869. Is buried in the Lexington Cemetery, Lexington, Kentucky.

Orrin Zeigler Hubbell.

ORRIN ZEIGLER HUBBELL, of Butler, De Kalb County, Indiana, son of William Hosmer Hubbell and Sarah A. Zeigler, was born in Kelso, Huntington County, Indiana, March 30th, 1856. At the age of four years he moved with his parents to Butler, De Kalb County, Indiana, prepared for college, and graduated from the Butler High School, June 20th, 1873. The fall following he entered the Indiana State University. While in college he ranked very high in his class. The Indiana Student, a paper published at the University, mentioned him as "one of the finest students and the best debater in college." Mr. Hubbell graduated on June 13th, 1877, taking the honor of the "Philosophical Oration," and standing third in the classical course. He returned to Butler, where he began the study of law with Captain R. A. Franks, and was admitted to the Bar at Auburn, Indiana, in the same year. In 1878 he accepted the editorial charge of the Butler Record, which position he resigned in 1879 to accept the superintendency of the graded schools at Monroeville, Indiana. Being called to deliver the oration over the graves of our fallen heroes of the late war, at Butler, in 1880, the press did him the honor to report and publish his address in full.

WALTER HUBBELL, grandson of Truman Mallory Hubbell, and second son of William Wheeler Hubbell and Elizabeth Catharine Ramillie, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 26th, 1851.

Made his first appearance on the stage, October 10th, 1872, and since then has been a member of the Dramatic Profession.

Ex. Bibl. Londinens.

This Hubbell family is originally a Dane family. In the year 1016 they spread themselves over England. That time reigned a Dane, King Canute, both over Denmark and England. In said year a Dane Nobleman, Harold Hubbell, in the county of Northumberland, received from the King, as reward for faithful services, the estate and fortress Haroldstone. His wife's name was Maria Moesting, and after his death in the year 1035, he left three sons and one daughter. The daughter's name was Eugenia, and became the wife of the nobleman of Melville, whose family is yet at present flourishing in England. Of the three sons, two fell in the battle near Hastings. This happened in the year 1066 while the Normans were invading England, and the third son, Hugo Hubbell, was forced to leave his estate. Since that time Hugo as warrior, roved through England and France. The figures of his shield were two ravens heads and two estoiles. On the helmet a tower partly demolished, was at length adopted in memory of his loss, two eagles are holding the shield. These figures became the figures in the escutcheon of that family. Hugo, as he was already 60 years of age, was married to Betty Moore, and they settled themselves in the county of Rutland, in the year 1113. This family flourished there yet in the year 1190, on the estate Hunsbog and Horstone, while four noblemen of this name went with King Richard Lionheart of England, from England to the Holy Land, and never returned.

A fifth nobleman of this name, Andrew Hubbell, was married to Eliza Peel, and lived in Horstone. Since that time accounts of this family are wanting. In the year 1463, it is mentioned that in the struggle between the houses, York and Lancaster, the estates of this family were totally destroyed. That time Walter Hubbell became perfectly poor, went with his family, wife and children, to the Isle of Man, where he took service on board of a ship, and after many passages he at last collected as much as he wanted to establish a little merchant house at Plymouth, England. He died about the year 1515, and left a son whose name was William Hubbell, who continued and extended his deceased father's business.

SHIELD AND ESCUTCHEON OF HUGO HUSBELL, WARRIOR, A.D. 1066.
AFTERWARDS ADOPTED AS THE FAMILY COAT-OF-ARMS.

"The figures of his shield were two raven's heads and two estolles. On the helmet a tower partly demolished was at length adopted in memory of his loss (having been forced to leave his estate and fortress Haroldstone during the Norman invasion, about the time of the battle of Hastings, where two of his brothers were killed). Two eagles are holding the shield."

COAT-OF-ARMS OBTAINED BY HENRY WILSON HUBBELL, ESQ., OF NEW YORK CITY, WHILE IN LONDON, ENGLAND, IN 1841.

This said William Hubbell was married to Annie Mimant, a French lady, and died very old, in the year 1576. He left but one son, whose name was Francis Hubbell, married to two wives. His first wife got no children, but with his second, whose name was Sophia Brown, he had.

This Francis Hubbell, in the year 1615, had freighted a ship, intending to go with her to the East Indies, but there was never anything heard again, neither of him nor of the ship and crew. His widow was yet alive about the year 1651 at Plymouth, and two sons whose names were Francis and Edward Hubbell, they pursued not their father's business, and of their further fate is nothing known.

Vide Europ. Coat-of-Arms
Bibl. Londin."

The foregoing genealogical account and coat-of-arms pertaining to it were obtained about forty years ago by a member of the family in Fairfield County, Connecticut, now (1881) deceased.

If it is an authentic account, Richard Hubbell the First was probably the son of Francis or Edward Hubbell, of Plymouth, Devonshire, England. This being the case, he must have had some acquaintance with the relatives of the Pilgrims who came to America in the May Flower in 1620, and being a member of the same religious denomination, he naturally left the country to escape persecution, and became a member of the New Haven Colony.

It is very probable that he left Plymouth in a vessel that cleared for the New England Colony from a port in Wales, in order to avoid detention by the Crown, which accounts for a tradition that he came from Wales.

"123 E. 23D STREET,

WALTER HUBBELL, Esq., Philadelphia.

MY DEAR SIR:—I enclose photographic copy of the 'Hubbell Arms,' from the original in my possession, which I obtained, on personal application, at the 'Doctors Commons,' or 'College of Heraldry,' while in London, England, in August, 1831. I am thus particular for the reason that, too often we have imposed upon us copies furnished by strangers passing through the country, without any authority of their being correct.

The motto, 'NE CEDE MALIS SED CONTRA' reads when translated, 'Yield not to misfortunes, but surmount them.'

I am, dear sir, yours truly,
(Signed) HENRY WILSON HUBBELL."

The foregoing letter explains itself. It is a fact worthy of record, however, that the Hubands of Great Britain use the same coat-of-arms as the one referred to in the aforesaid letter from Henry Wilson Hubbell, Esq., but have a different motto. This fact fully corroborates the statement made on page 4, and proves conclusively that the Huband family is also of the Hubba's Hill family of Great Britain, and therefore of Danish origin.

The coat-of-arms containing the leopards' heads and ostrich feathers belongs to the Hubbald family, another branch of the Hubba's Hill family of Great Britain. The leopards' heads plainly point to the Danish origin of this branch (see page 3), and the three ostrich feathers seem to indicate its Welsh extraction, for three ostrich feathers are now used in the armorial decorations of the Prince of Wales.

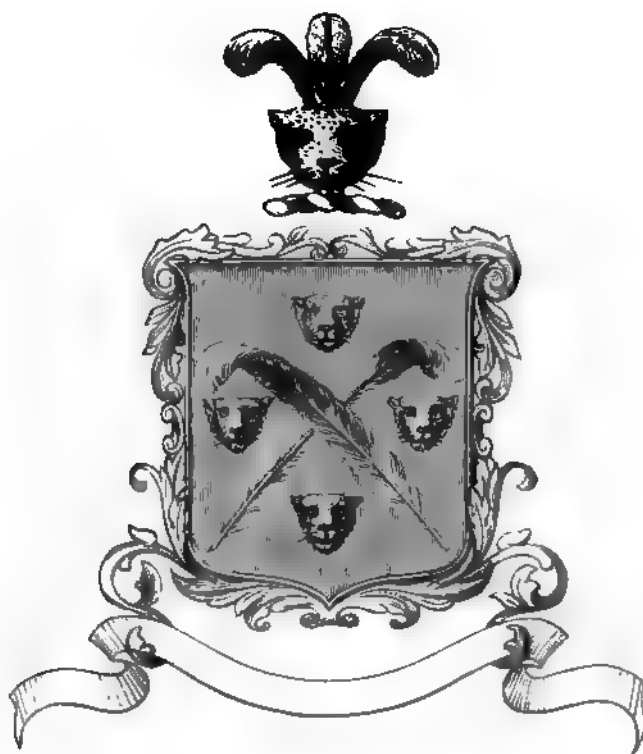

On page 4 we state that Hubbell is so spelled in Wales at the present day (1881). The last Hubbell heard of in Wales is said to have lived in Glamorganshire, and to have spoken no language but Welsh. He was born there, spelled his name Hubbell, and is probably dead, for our informant—a Welshman—has not heard of him for over twenty-five years. His name is said to have been Morris Hubbell, and his trade that of a stonecutter.

A list of persons who spell their name Hubble can be seen in the London Directory. In 1881 there lived in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a family named Hubeli, of Italian origin, and in the same year several families were living in Baltimore, Maryland, descended from Benedict Hubbell, of Baden, Germany. A record of his descendents is given in the Appendix.

In Burke's History of the Commoners, volume I, page 372, (Astor Library, New York,) it is recorded that "Charlotte Hubbell, daughter of Dr. Hubbell, married Francis Foote, son of Sir James Foote, K. C. B. Vice-Admiral of the Red of Highfield, near Southampton. She had issue two daughters, whose names are not known."

There are several families in the United States whose name is spelled Hubel, and as the following description of their coats-of-arms is very interesting, we are sure it will be read with satisfaction :

Prologue.

O honored sire ; whose brave, ancestral blood
To Albion's isle from ancient Daneland flowed,
And thro' thy glorious ancestor ;
Who with his legions sought old Britain's shore,
Swept o'er its hills with battle-axe and lance Resistless as an Alpine avalanche,
And like the gods of old, by battle's gage,
Won fame, and fief, and vassaled heritage.
And thou did'st leave thy father's castled walls,
Its towers, and battlements, and armored halls ;
Its well-worn helmets blurr'd with many a dent ;
Its well-hacked claymores, dank with rust and bent ;
Its steel-clad bosks, and many a bandoleer ;
Its blazoned shields, impinged with many a spear ;
Its tattered banners, borne in many a fight ;
Its rifted standards, reared on many a height ;
And far across Atlanta's surging breast,
Made here thy home, loved, honored, blest ;
Here reared brave hearts concordant with thine own,
Taught them to hate a tyrant and despise a throne ;
A race with iron wills, and iron laws,
Firm as their granite hills in Freedom's cause ;
Stern as the Roman who condemned his son ;
Unchanging as those laws cut deep in stone ;
With stalwart physique, rough, yet not uncouth, Surcharged with love of God, and Man, and Truth ;—
These, thy descendants from that austere age :
Proud are they of their Sire, their name, and heritage.
For thee O Sire ! we fain would twine the bays
Of honor, love, and homage, in thy praise ;
Green in our hearts O Sire ! thou livest yet,

Nor will our children's children thee forget ;
But lisp thy name, for years on years along
The waves of Time, all musical with song.

I.

Sire of an hundred Sires ! thy spotless name
Is wreathed and blended with a glorious fame,
A name untarnished by the tide of years ;
A name unstained by greed or penance tears ;
A name unsullied by the touch of Time ;
Grand art thou in thy lineage ; in thy race sublime.

II.

Sire of a thousand Sons ! who gavest them
The electric spark that maketh patriot men ;
For were they not begot in Freedom's clime ;
Nor taught of Freedom in their nursery rhyme,
Still each would be fair Freedom's devotee,
For all were patriots from their very infancy.

III.

O patriot Sire ! no craven race is thine !
In all their country's wars their serried glories shine ;
For when the war-clouds poured their iron rain,
And when our land was travailing in her pain,
Then did thy sons amid the battle's red reflow

IV.

O loyal Sire ! successive generations prove
The bravery of thy sons ! their country's love !
Where met contending hosts ! where met the brave !
Where sulphurous lightning's flashed ! where flashed the glave,

There they, like those of old Thermopylae
Have fought; and fighting gave their all to Liberty.

V.

O peerless Sire! by thee we proudly are Co-heirs, with all thy sons and daughters fair,
Who from thy loins two hundred years ago,
Have grown in numbers as the forests grow;
Whilst thou like Patriarchs in ages gone,
Hast slept—must sleep until the Resurrection's dawn.

VI.

O sainted Sire! Sire of two centuries past!
Whose seed hast bloomed and fruited unsurpassed;
How grand the future of two centuries yet,
When sons of sons their lineal sons beget!

Yea, Sainted Sire! thou shouldst like Seer of Old!

O hallowed Sire! two hundred years! two hundred years!
Of storms and calms, of sunshine, hopes, and fears
Have rolled; yea, rolled into the mighty Past!
Since thou, in realms illimited and vast!
In realms refulgent in primeval light! hast trod
The starry spheres that pave the City of our God.

* It is a tradition among the descendants of Richard and Gershom Hubbell (twins), born July 4th, 1766, that their father's name was Benjamin, and that he was a sea captain during the Revolutionary War; was captured by the British, and died of starvation while confined in the old "Sugar House," or "Old Mill," prison, in or near New York City. As no record of a Benjamin Hubbell who had sons named Richard and Gershom can be found, I think I am justified in placing them as the sons of Captain Gershom Hubbell, of Fairfield County, Connecticut, because he left minor sons called Richard and Gershom Hubbell, for whom a guardian was appointed. A record of this appointment is on file in the Probate Court, at Danbury, Connecticut.

The Flower family dates its origin from the Norman conquest (A. D. 1066). Hugh, one of those adventurers who gathered under the standard of the Duke of Normandy, when he announced his intention of invading England, "from his remarkable beauty," says Playfair, in his Noble Families of England, "and his valorous conduct on the field of battle, received the name of La Fleur, which in the course of time became transformed into the corresponding English term of Flower." Manning, in his Lives of Speakers of the House of Commons, in the article on Sir Roger Flower (Speaker in 1416-17-19, in the reign of Henry V), brings down, in a short form, an account of the family in Great Britain, to the year 1847.

John Flower, of Chichester, Delaware Co., Pa., was related to Sir Charles Flower, who was at one time Lord Mayor of London. He (John) m. Mary, daughter of William Flower and Elizabeth Morris, of Marcus Hook, Delaware Co., Pa.

Richard Flower, of Marcus Hook, Delaware Co., Pa., eldest son of John and Mary Flower, of Chichester, Delaware Co., Pa., was b. in 1724, and in 1746 m. Hannah, granddaughter of Emanuel Grubb, of "Brandywine Hundred," State of Delaware.

Richard Flower, of Lamokin, Delaware Co., Pa., son of Richard Flower and Hannah Grubb, of Marcus Hook, Delaware Co., Pa., was b. in 1759. In 1786 he m. Henrietta, daughter of Henry Hale Graham. (See Martin's "History of Chester," pp. 436-7-8.)

The Graham family of Delaware Co., Pa., is descended from Græme, of Scotland (a General in the army of Fergus II). He was regent of Scotland during the minority of Eugene II, and in A. D. 404, breached the mighty wall erected by the Roman Emperor, Severus, between the rivers Forth and Clyde. The Grahams intermarried with the Stuarts of the royal house, and were conspicuous in the wars for Scottish liberty, by the side of Wallace and Bruce. The great Marquis of Montrose and Graham of Claverhouse, Vicount of Dundee, called by the Covenanters, for his deeds, "Bloody Dundee," and by the Cavaliers, "Bohny Dundee," on account of his great personal beauty, were of this family.

William Graham, whose pedigree can be traced to the Graham who married a daughter of Robert Stuart (or Stewart), King of Scotland, was b. in London, England in 1692. He was the son of Richard Graham, of Blackhouse, Cumberland, etc. Was m., in 1729, to a second wife, Eleanor, daughter of Zedekiah Wyatt and Dorothy, his wife, of Grace Church St., London, and had issue: Henry Hale Graham, who was b. 1731, in London, and emigrated with his parents to the Province of Penna., in 1733, where he m. Abigail Pennell, and had among other issue Henrietta Graham, b. in 1768, who m. Richard Flower, of Lamokin, Delaware Co., Pa., in 1786. See Martin's "History of Chester," pp. 166-7-8, and "British Family Antiquity," Playfair, Vol. III, p. 161, and Vol. IV, p. 474. (See page 198 for further particulars.)

"To the Editor of the Tribune, New York City:

SIR:—The late Rev. Edwin Hubbell Chapin, when a boy of twelve, went to Bennington, Vt., and passed four years at school, boarding in the family of Deacon Aaron Hubbell, a sterling old Christian, where, no doubt, he obtained many of the strong religious impressions which characterized his after life. At the age of sixteen he entered the family of Henry Kellogg, Postmaster at Bennington, in whose office he was employed for two years. During his school life, as well as afterwards, he manifested the deepest interest in his studies, and was noted for his wonderful memory of facts, which afterwards stood him so grandly in his pulpit ministrations. Mr. Kellogg, observing his scholarly turn, advised his pursuit of a profession, and he undertook the study of law at a very early age, in the meantime writing largely for the Troy Budget and other papers, and at length engaged in editorial pursuits in Utica, prior to his ministerial studies.

His relative, the venerable Mrs. Anne M. Kellogg, now living in this city, in a recent conversation, recounted the various incidents of his early life, which show that he was not only a fine scholar, but a noble and conscientious youth. The love of the humorous was withal strong within him; he was a ventriloquist and rhymer, frequently speaking to the children in Mr. Kellogg's household in rhythmical phrases. He was facetious and funny, but large-hearted, manly and noble. When the time came for him to decide on his religious course, he shut himself up to the careful and exhaustive study of the Scriptures, and in his own heart, by the light of the Bible and the aid of the Holy Spirit, settled forever the faith which was afterward the unwavering guide of his generous life and the inspiration of his eloquent tongue. An incident in connection with this is worth noting. After his entrance into the Universalist pulpit he visited Bennington, and was invited to preach in the Court House, the "orthodox" church being denied him in view of his religious principles. Years after, however, he was warmly urged to deliver in that same orthodox pulpit, his great lecture on "The Dignity of Labor." So much for the progress of Christian charity. He commenced his ministry at the age of about twenty-one, and his golden eloquence was always on the side of liberty, love and humanity.

WALTER HUBBELL, ESQ.

DEAR SIR: I do not know that you will value this list of Claims before 1880, but as you ask for copies of old records, I thought this copy would add interest, as it would evidence the perplexities that shipping was subject to in those times, and that of our Hubbell relatives.

— Hubbell,* a Captain under the Board of Associated Loyalists in New York. In the spring of 1781 he was stationed at Lloyd's Neck, but was in the habit, it would seem, of putting his command in whale-boats, and making incursions by water. The Board, in reporting the proceedings of this "spirited loyalist," state in detail the incidents of burning guard-houses, of destroying mills, flour and salt works, of carrying off sheep and cattle, and of the courage he displayed when in conflict with the "Rebels."—See "Royalists of the American Revolution," Sabine, Vol. I, p. 552.
